Gales Fell Awnings, Trees, Dunk Boaters

Winds, reaching gale force at times, bore through the Southland again Saturday, ripping down awnings and tree limbs in several areas and creating havoc among sailboat enthusiasts. Possible showers and continuing winds were on tap for today.

In Alamitos Bay Saturday, a lifeguard rescue vessel towed in 18 toppled sailboats carrying a total of 24 persons. A 20-foot sailboat also sank in the channel after taking on water and the owner, Bert Notter of Pasadena, and a passenger had to be fished from the water, a lifeguard spokesman said.

At least 10 small craft were towed to safety in the oceanfront section of Long Beach and lifeguards and Coast Guard officials reported scores of additional boat rescues at other coastal spots.

Also hard hit by the winds which reached up to 35 miles an hour was Marina del Rey, where a sailboat regatta was in progress. Harbor officials said passengers and crews of about 15 boats were dunked when the winds capsized their vessels.

All were rescued however and no injuries were reported.

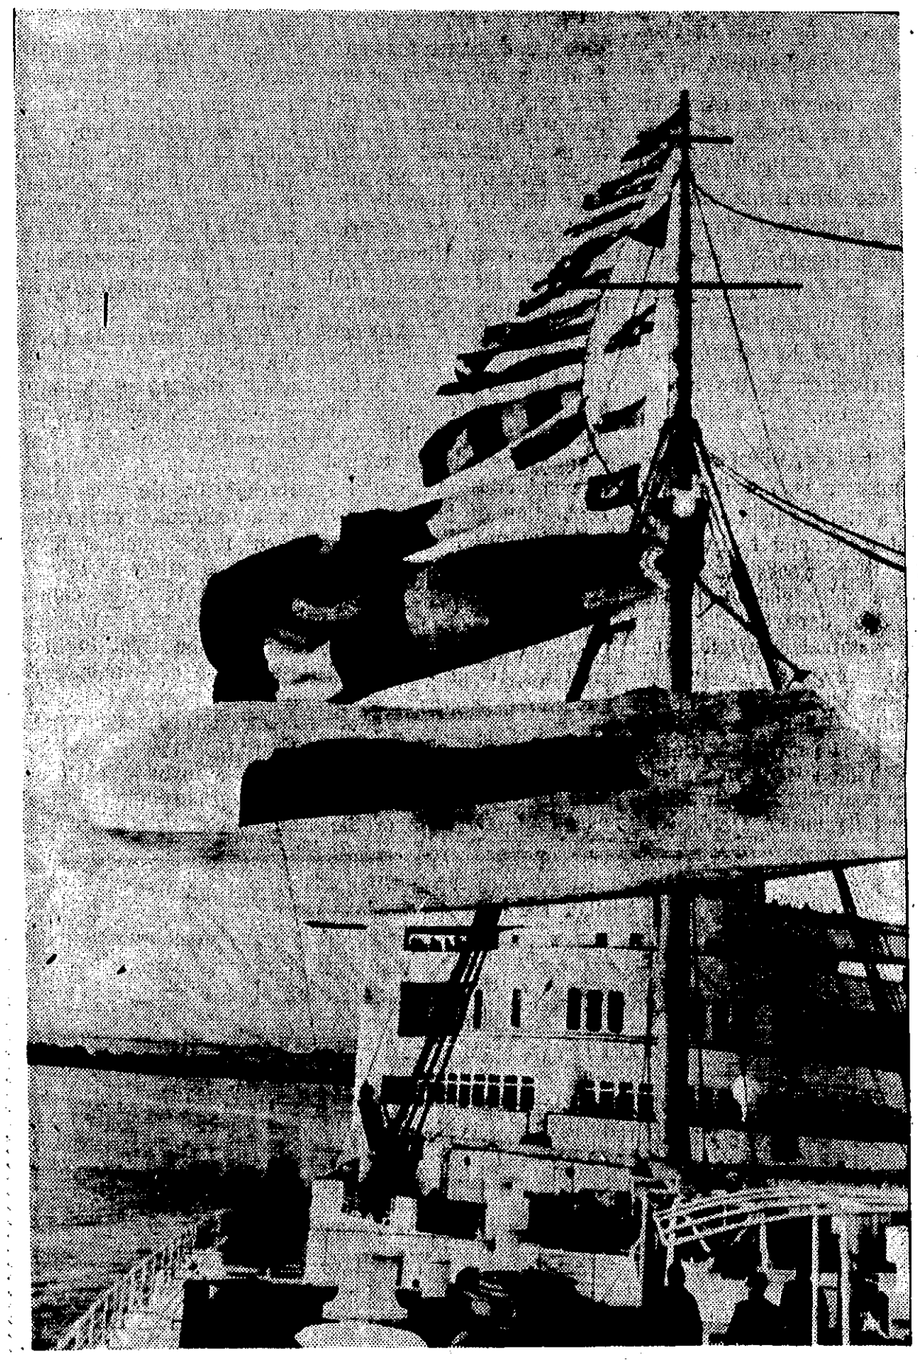

In Long Beach, as in other cities, police reported a number of shop awnings blown down and tree limbs felled by the gusts.

Despite minor damage, Saturday's winds were only a pale echo of the hurricane - force blasts that buffeted the Southland Thursday and Friday.

Winds those two days reached up to 80 miles an hour in parts of the Southland, overturning trucks, breaking windows, ripping off roofs and felling trees and utility poles.

Weather officials said the winds probably will continue Monday, dying down Monday night. They said it will be cooler today and Monday.

In Long Beach, a high of 58 is expected today following an overnight low of 42.

Queen Mary Goes Proudly, Safely to Her New Berth

Thousands Cheer as Voyage Ends

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

After 34 years, the Queen Mary ended her career as she began it — to the cheer of thousands of admirers.

A crowd estimated by police at between 75,000 and 100,000, possibly as large as the one which watched her begin her maiden voyage on May 27, 1936, saw the royal ship towed Saturday morning to her permanent resting place at Pier J in Long Beach Harbor.

People jammed into the Pier J plaza and parking area and into Pierpoint Landing and shivered in the cold for three hours to watch the Mary's last journey.

To beat the crowds, a few enthusiasts arrived at Pier J as early as Thursday morning. They roughed it in campers and cars.

When the ship moved into its new berth at 9:30 a.m., the crowd gathered in the plaza for welcoming ceremonies. Actress Greer Garson, an honored guest, accepted the first line to tie up the ship.

Mayor Edwin Wade told the gathering the ship will be open to the public in April of this year. The first stage of the maritime museum, he added, would open in late July or early August.

In a short talk, the British-born, Miss Garson, expressed her affection for the former luxury liner:

"I grew up in London and knew the great lady for whom the ship was named. Both Queen Mary and the liner symbolize the steadfastness and majesty of a great tradition of service and inspiration to the people of the world."

Miss Garson said she would always remember the ship which carried her from London to America where she rejoined her husband after a seven-month separation.

As a token of the journey, Mayor Wade presented Miss Garson with the ship's telephone, which she had used to make a trans-atlantic call to her husband.

Happy about the ship's fate, Miss Garson said, "This isn't the end of the Queen, it is the beginning of a new life—a voyage which will have no end."

Ann Bishop, president of the Queen Mary Club—a booster organization, watched excitedly as the Mary arrived at her new home.

"The Mary finds its way into your heart and stays there," she said. "I was on

Lifeboats Pull 8 Bodies from English Channel

FOLKSTONE, England (AP) — Lifeboats picked up the bodies of eight seamen early today after a ship was reported sunk in the English Channel's "death lane."

A Norwegian tanker radioed authorities that the ship went down five miles off Folkestone, where a German freighter and an oil tanker sank six weeks ago with the loss of 16 lives.

"We have no idea what vessel the men came from," authorities said. "We will not know until we can find a survivor."

Huge Ship in 'Eggshell Docking'

Promptly at 6:30 a.m. Saturday the Queen Mary's deep-throated whistle sounded the first note of "Show Me the Way to Go Home."

Moments later, slowly, nine tug boats started moving the huge vessel toward her permanent home in Long Beach, a 4.4-mile voyage that ended almost to the minute three hours later.

Coolest man aboard was Capt. James Common, the pilot responsible for moving the ship from Pier E on Terminal Island to its permanent berth on the east face of Pier J.

THE MOVE, slowed by 15 to 18-knot winds, was without incident.

Compliments for a job "well done" came from Capt. Common's colleagues, the skippers of the specially-selected tugs.

As each tug finished its job and was released, the VHF radio link carried comments like, "Beautiful job, Captain Jim."

IN STRUGGLE FOR LAOS HILL
Heaviest Tank Battle of War

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — South and North Vietnamese armored units fought on Hill 31 in Laos throughout the night Saturday and into the early daylight hours of today in the first major tank battle of the Indochina war.

Heavy Communist antiaircraft fire protecting the Ho Chi Minh Trail knocked down two U.S. Army helicopters and kept others at bay as the fighting intensified.

The U.S. Military Command said one American was wounded when his OH6 light observation helicopter was shot down. Communist fire also brought down a CH47 Chinook troop-carrying copter, but spokesmen said there were no casualties.

Estimates of the number of North Vietnamese tanks destroyed in the battle for Hill 31 ranged from 15 to 19, the South Vietnamese field commander using the lower figure and other military sources using the higher. The sources also said at least 200 Communists were killed Saturday morning by U.S. Air Force jet fighter-bombers attacking their positions on the hill.

There were no reports or estimates of South Vietnamese tanks destroyed or damaged.

Although South Vietnamese military headquarters in Saigon reported its troops had recaptured Hill 31, the commander of the South Vietnamese task force in Laos said the issue was still in doubt.

"No one is in control of the top of the hill," said Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, Saigon's field commander at his forward command post. "North Vietnamese and South Vietnamese forces are now fighting for control of the hill."

Elements of a 3,000-man North Vietnamese force, led by soldiers riding Soviet-built PT76 tanks, overran South Vietnamese defenders on Hill 31 last Thursday. Lam ordered an armored counterattack and, by 5 p.m. Saturday, he said South Vietnamese tanks had pushed to within 100-200 yards of the top.

Lam said South Vietnamese paratroopers and

Jetliner Part Falls on Home

An aluminum plate fell off a jetliner preparing to land at Los Angeles International Airport Saturday and struck a South Gate residence, authorities reported.

The 18-x-30-inch plate reportedly fell from a Continental Airlines Boeing 720 flight from Houston.

South Gate police said the part, a piece of the flap on the aircraft's nose-wheel door, cut a foot-square hole in the roof of the home below, but did not penetrate the structure.

The home, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gress of 2774 Glenwood St., received only minor damage, police said, and there were no injuries.

Nixon to Nominate Educator as New Director of NASA

Combined News Services

James C. Fletcher, an educator with a broad background in space sciences, electronics, and government, is slated to take the controls of the space agency at a time when its future course is clouded.

President Nixon Saturday confirmed that he will nominate the 51-year-old president of the University of Utah as administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The $42,500-a-year post has been vacant since last September when Dr. Thomas O. Paine resigned to enter private industry.

Fletcher, a native of Millburn, N.J., and a Mormon, has been head of the university and the College of Eastern Utah since 1964.

Fletcher is a physicist with a bachelor's degree from Columbia University and a doctorate from the California Institute of Technology. He began his career in the educational field in the 1940s as a researcher at Harvard, an instructor at Princeton and UCLA, and a teaching fellow at Cal Tech.

Fletcher will become NASA's fourth chief at a time when the agency is flushed with the success of Apollo 14, its latest moon exploration, but at a time also when the huge organization is confronted with waning public interest and increasing difficulty in stirring congressional support for its future projects.

BOOTED OUT

The U.S. Army has once again told teen-aged Walter Lee Martin to "come back and see us in a couple of years."

Walter was booted out of the army last year when it was learned he was only 15, and he was back home in Acadia, Fla., Saturday after he was once again discovered in uniform.

Army officials took the 6-3, 198-pound Vietnam veteran into custody Friday when military police learned his identity.

Ft. Carson, Colo., spokesman said the youngster used the name of Albert Lewis when he presented himself to MPs a week ago at Ft. Rucker, Ala., claiming he was AWOL from Ft. Carson. He was returned to the Colorado base, but was apprehended once again when he attempted to apply for back pay on Thursday.

PAT SHOPS

First Lady Pat Nixon and her daughter, Tricia, had a private viewing of spring styles by American designers Saturday in New York City as they shopped for their Easter outfits.

New York fashion coordinator Clara Treyz, who helps the President's wife choose her wardrobe, arranged for the showing in the presidential suite of the Pierre Hotel, President Nixon's 1968 campaign headquarters.

Mrs. Nixon said several days ago she had not selected her Easter outfit or done her spring shopping.

ONE MORE

Of the 7,000 persons in executive or policy-making positions in the federal government, only 18 are Spanish-speaking Americans. On Saturday, that number rose by one.

CARLOS D. CONDE, 34, a former newspaperman whose series of articles on "The Hyphenated Americans (Mexican-Americans)" was nominated for a Pulitzer prize, was appointed director of information and publications for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

The appointment follows a call by President Nixon Nov. 5 for intensified recruitment of Americans of Mexican, Puerto Rican Cuban or others of Spanish descent into the administration, including summer employment and job training for Spanish-speaking students.

AGNEW GIFT

A Salem, Ore., couple is fitting into its vacation a trip to Florida with expenses paid by an Atlanta radio station — all because the wife was struck by one of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's golf shots.

Mrs. G.L. Decker was hit on the wrist by one of the Vice President's shots at the Bob Hope Desert Classic earlier this month. The event was witnessed by a national television audience.

Radio Station WSB and Eastern Air Lines, during this time, co-sponsored a contest to determine the "world's worst golf shot." The radio station was deluged with nominations for the Vice President and ultimately awarded him the trip to the Doral-Eastern Golf Tournament in Florida.

The Vice President gave the trip to Mr. and Mrs. Decker.

FERNANDEL

"I'm ugly, spiteful and pretentious. I like flashy ties and bad puns, I have a bureaucrat's brain in a horse's head and I don't give a damn."

FERNANDEL was talking about Fernandel. The death of the great French movie comedian with the smile as wide as a work horse was announced Saturday. He succumbed Friday to cancer that interrupted his career last summer at age 67.

President Georges Pompidou sent a telegram to the comedian's family expressing his sadness and the government television network canceled normal programming on its color TV channel Saturday night for a special memorial show.

'DEEP REGRET'

President Nixon accepted with "deep regret" Saturday the resignation of Fred J. Russell as undersecretary of the Interior.

The White House restated its intention to offer Russell another high-level post in the administration. Rogers C.B. Morton told Russell he would not keep him in the Interior Department when he became secretary earlier this month.

Russell had been serving as acting secretary after Nixon fired Walter J. Hickel from the Cabinet post Thanksgiving Eve. His decision on mine safety and other controversial issues have come under fire from several quarters.

Russell, a Los Angeles multimillionaire businessman, was a heavy contributor to Nixon's 1968 presidential campaign for the Presidency.

SERLIN DIES

Oscar Serlin, who produced the longest running show in Broadway history, "Life With Father," died Saturday in New York City after a long illness. He was 70.

The play, based on Clarence Day's "Life With Father" sketches in New Yorker magazine, opened on Broadway in 1939 and ran eight years with 3,213 performances.

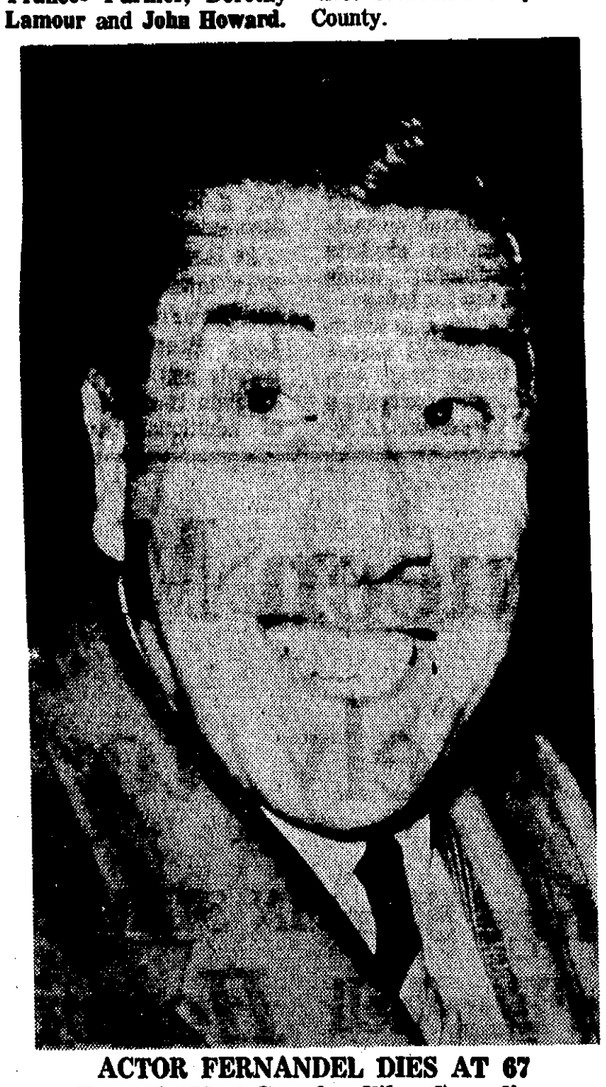

As an associate producer and talent scout for Paramount Pictures, Serlin was credited with sending such stars to Hollywood as Cary Grant, Fred McMurray, Frances Farmer, Dorothy Lamour and John Howard.

FEUDING

Eighty-nine-year-old mountain man Cannon McCall is feuding with the federal government. He charges it sent a forest ranger to bulldoze a large hole and bury his mobile home in it.

The government claims the acre of land in Balsam Grove, N.C., on which the trailer stood is part of Pisgah National Forest. It says McCall ignored notices to vacate.

McCall has charged the forest ranger, Dan W. Hile, with malicious damage to property. Hile posted $500 bond Friday for trial March 4 in state district court in Transylvania County.

PRINCE WEDS

Prince Christian, a nephew of King Frederik IX, married a pretty, jobless sales girl Saturday in a ceremony at a suburban Copenhagen village church attended by most of Denmark's royal family.

By marrying a commoner, Anne Dorthe Maltoft-Nielsen, 21, the 28-year-old prince, who is the youngset son of Prince Knud, the king's brother, resigned his rights to the Danish crown. Prince Christian, a navy first lieutenant, had been eighth in the line of succession.

The bride, who became a countess, is the daughter of a Copenhagen confidential clerk and had worked for three years as a perfume sales girl in a fashionable department store in central Copenhagen. The blonde, blue-eyed bride became jobless recently, when the department store, which closes down next week in a merger deal with another store, fired its entire staff.

Calley Prosecution Asks to Air More 'Brutality Charges'

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — The government sought permission Saturday to offer testimony that, before the alleged My Lai massacre, Lt. William L. Calley Jr. killed at least one prisoner, beat old women and earned "the reputation of being rough on Vietnamese."

The judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy, took the request under advisement. Acting on another prosecution request, however, he said he was prepared to readmit a witness who had testified earlier that Calley shot a woman who was trying to surrender at My Lai.

The defense argued vigorously against the admission of the additional evidence, saying one of the accusations had previously been dismissed and further argument would "muddle the case."

The prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey Daniel, speaking in the absence of a six-man court-martial jury told the judge:

"THE GOVERNMENT also has evidence that on a previous operation occurring approximately a month before this operation, the accused detained an old man and one of his men beat the old man in the presence of the accused and threw him into a well and that the accused shot this old man in the well.

"Also there is evidence that prior to and subsequent to this operation, the accused beat prisoners he had captured and beat old Vietnamese women for no reason and that he had a reputation of being rough on Vietnamese."

The 27-year-old Calley is charged with the premeditated murder of 102 unresisting Vietnamese men, women and children at My Lai March 16, 1968.

The defense, objecting to the government's request, said Calley had been accused at one time of the murder of the man in the well, but that the charge subsequently had been dismissed.

"Do we relitigate that here?" demanded chief defense counsel George Latimer.

Kennedy also reserved decision on a defense request that it be furnished list of government rebuttal witnesses to be called after the court-martial resumes next Wednesday. It was recessed for three days to allow the prosecution to bring the witnesses here. The jury was excused Friday.

However, Kennedy ruled that the prosecution could recall Thomas Turner, 24, former GI in Calley's platoon, to repeat his testimony that at one point during the slaughter of civilians at My Lai:

"A YOUNG Vietnamese woman was coming toward us. She was giving herself up. You could see that. She had her hands raised. Lt. Calley shot her several times. She fell over into a rice paddy."

This testimony originally was stricken by Kennedy on grounds that it was a new accusation and not outlined in the original murder charges against Calley. He said he now is prepared to admit it to bolster the government's charge of premeditation involving Calley.

Also the government won the right to call officers who attended a briefing just prior to My Lai by the commander of the task force, Lt. Col. Frank A. Barker Jr. He was killed in a helicopter crash less than three months later. While as many as 12 such witnesses may be called, Kennedy said he was reserving the right to limit the scope of their testimony.

The Saturday court-martial session was held because a tornado alert cut short proceedings Friday afternoon.

RENEWS SLAP AT SENATE DEMOS

Reagan to Unveil Welfare Reform at L.A. Town Hall

United Press International

Gov. Ronald Reagan, rebuffed by Senate Democrats in his bid to deliver his welfare message before a joint legislative session, Saturday said he would unveil his program before the Town Hall of Los Angeles.

Press aides in Sacramento said Reagan has accepted an invitation from the organization — which is made up of leaders in the civic, business, professional and academic communities — to deliver his program Wednesday. They said the speech would last a half-hour.

"I am very gratified that Town Hall has enabled me to speak on the most critical issue facing California — an issue which the president pro tem of the State Senate refused to permit me to personally present to the Legislature," Reagan said.

His press spokesman sai dtelevision station KTLA in Los Angeles would broadcast the speech and has offered to make it available to other stations.

Senate President pro tem James R. Mills, D-San Diego, last week denied the governor's request to address a joint session. He accused Reagan of merely wanting to use lawmakers as a "backdrop" for a statewide "political speech."

Mills also said Reagan had no specific legislation ready for introduction.

However, the governor told a news conference in Los Angeles Friday that Senate Democrats were "silly" for taking their action. He added his message would be "the most detailed and explicit" ever submitted by him.

He also said he would have to seek other means "to inform the people firsthand of the specific reforms we will be proposing."

Senate Democratic Floor Leader George Moscone of San Francisco backed up Mills by saying, "We can't vote on speeches. Why the governor's dragging his feet I don't know."

Democrats said they did not want to give the governor a forum unless he had specific legislation ready for introduction.

To this, the governor said the denial was "silly" because governors cannot physically introduce bills anyway — only legislators can.

'Kindness' Puts Vote of 18-Year-Olds in Peril

By DOUG WILLIS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The 18-year-old vote is in danger of being killed by kindness in the state legislature this year.

In the Senate, an 18-year-old vote measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, has cleared all committee hurdles and is likely to come oup for a floor vote sometime this week.

That measure, an amendment to the state Constitution, has 23 coauthors, just four short of the two-thirds majority it needs before it can be sent to the Assembly.

BUT THE Assembly committee that is hearing voting age bills this year made it clear in a hearing this past week that 18-year-olds won't get the voting rights in state and local elections unless some responsibilities go along with it.

Assemblyman John Briggs, R-Fullerton, author of two of the 22 measures now before the Legislature related to the voting age, said there would be strong Republican opposition to the lower voting age unless it is part of a comprehensive revision of all rights and responsibilities of 18-year-olds.

Republican Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke said the same thing at a California Young Republican rally Saturday.

Youths 18 and older will be able to vote in Presidential elections beginning in 1972, but all other elections are under state control.

WHETHER the conservative Republican opposition Briggs expects would be enough to block a simple 18-year-old vote bill on the floor of either house is debatable, but both Republican and Democratic members of the Assembly Judiciary Committee spoke for the comprehensive approach in a hearing last Monday.

The thrust of packaged approach is to lower the age of majority, not just the voting age. That would give 18-year-olds full rights to make contracts and full responsibility for them.

Various versions of the plan would also lower the drinking age, age of eligibility for office and, potentially, the age limits in juvenile crime laws, veterans dependents' benefits and other child support situations.

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, another leader in the fight for the 18-year-old vote, says he doesn't think a constitutional amendment would be ratified by voters even if it did pass the Legislature unless all the responsibilities are in there, too.

But, the voting age is the only part which must be submitted to the voters, Assembly majority leader Walter Karabian, D-Monterey Park, says, and the rest is only deceptive window dressing.

THE Legislature already has authority to change these things and should get on with it, he says, not use them try to improve the chances of a voting bill he is convinced would pass on its own.

The danger in the comprehansive approach the Judiciary Committee appears to be following is that the legislature can be expected to clearly list all the exceptions to 18-year-old adulthood in any measure that would be locked into th Constitution.

Such a ballot measure would lock much heavier civil law responsibilities for 18-year-olds into the state Constitution, but by spelling out likely exclusions such as dependents' benefits, it could take on the appearance of being a basket of benefits with little extra responsibility.

Backers of the 18-year-old vote also worry about how a ballot proposition might confuse the voting issue with the drinking issue.

MEN ON GROUND HONORED

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Praising Apollo 14 as the mission that "put it all together," the newest moon walkers, other astronauts and space officials Saturday honored the men on the ground who make space travel possible.

"I believe that on Apollo 14 we put it all together — technology, engineering and science," said lunar pilot Edgar D. Mitchell looking fit, but pale after weeks of quarantine that ended only Friday.

Mitchell and fellow crewmen Alan B. Shepard Jr., and Stuart A. Roosa and Apollo 13 astronauts James A. Lovell Jr., and Fred W. Haise Jr., joined officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for an awards ceremony at the Manned Spacecraft Center. John L. Swigert, Apollo 13 command module pilot, could not attend.

DR. GEORGE M. LOW, acting NASA administrator, said Apollo 14 proved man was more valuable than mechanical devices for space exploration.

"Above all else, we saw that man belongs in space as space exploration belongs to man," Low said.

Lovell, referring to the oxygen tank explosion last April that crippled Apollo 13 on the way to the moon, said teamwork brought the crew home safely by turning the lunar module into a lifeboat.

LONG BEACH SANTA ANA POMONA PALOS VERDES LAKEWOOD MARINA NEWPORT CENTER LA HABRA SAN DIEGO

Actual Facts on Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—According to cold statistics, final divorce decrees jumped 39 per cent in California last year, when the state adopted its new liberalized divorce laws.

There were 114,000 final marriage dissolutions in the state, compared with 173,000 marriages.

But the actual rate of divorce, officials say, can be more accurately represented by comparing it, not with marriages but with the total population, a rise from 6.1 to 7 divorces per thousand population.

Harry Greenblatt, a California Department of Public Health Sociologist, says it all goes to prove the adage about how nothing lies like statistics. It also shows how little is known about divorce, something that would seem to be a simple matter of facts and figures.

THOSE STARTLING estimates about how one or two out of every three marriages wind up in divorce are based on comparisons of the number of marriges and the number of divorces in any given year.

The trouble here is this sort of statistics compares two different groups of people with different average ages. Also, the people getting married include significant numbers doing it for the third or fourth time.

California receives floods of migrants, and who knows how many were married when they arrived? Greenblatt suspects the percentages of marrieds has gone up dramatically because the offspring of the post-world War II baby boom are now adults.

WHEN THE RESULTS of the 1970 census are available later this year they should contain marriage statistics that will help clear up the divorce-marriage ratio puzzle.

Last year's figure of 114,000 final marriage dissolutions is a total probably swelled by persons previously too poor to afford a divorce and now represented by neighborhood legal assistance foundations. Of San Francisco's 4,500 dissolutions last year, 1,000 were legal assistance cases.

California's new "dissolution" law took effect in January, 1970. The law, eliminating the legal concept that one party must be able to blame, established only two grounds, "incurable insanity" and "irreconcilable differences."

The law also reduced the waiting period from one year to six months. Shortening of the waiting period automatically helped produce that 39 per cent in final dissolutions.

In addition, there is evidence that many people who wanted a divorce in 1969 decided to wait. Others who went to court after the new law took effect actually had been separated for years.

Active-Duty GIs Get Free Skiing

CONCORD, N. H. (UPI) — State Rep. John F. Bridges, R-Bedford, said Saturday active-duty servicemen will now be able to ski free Mondays through Fridays at the state's two ski areas. Bridges said the action came following discussions with New Hamshire Resources and Economic Development Commissioner George Gilman.

Under previous regulations, all-day skiing was offered at Sunapee and Cannon Mountain at half-day rates to servicemen.

armored cavalry had destroyed 15 of an estimated force of 25 North Vietnamese tanks in the counterattack and that "hundreds" of North Vietnamese had been killed.

"The fighting is Laos is becoming intense and that is what we expected," a spokesman at South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon said. "We would like to see the enemy stand and fight. Now they are doing just what we expected them to do."

As the battle for Hill 31 raged into the night, field reports Saturday told of other heavy fighting in Laos around South Vietnam's Fire Support Base Hong Ha II and Fire Support Base Delta. Those two bases and Hill 31 flank Highway 9, the axis for the 19-day South Vietnamese offensive into Laos to cut the Ho Chi Minh Trail — North Vietnam's main supply line.

Lam said South Vietnamese defenders of Hong Ha II killed 54 North Vietnamese Friday and a Saigon communique said 45 more were slain Saturday when a Communist attack was hurled back. Five South Vietnamese were reported slain in the action Friday. Lam could not give South Vietnamese casualty figures for the fighting Saturday.

Heavy antiaircraft fire prevented U.S. helicopter crews from getting supplies into either Hong Ha II or Delta. Some U.S. Army UH1 medical evacuation helicopters tried to land at Delta to pick up the wounded, but they too were driven off.

PILOTS said the North Vietnamese were firing 37mm and 57mm antiaircraft guns around Hong Ha II as well as rapid rate 23mm cannon which U.S. Navy aviators call "the golden hose" because of the yellow tracers it spews out.

The battle at Hill 31 Saturday marked the most intensive use of tanks in the Indochina conflict. North Vietnamese units used 12 tanks in 1968 overrunning the U.S. Green Beret outpost at Lang Vei — now the main forward American base for the Laos offensive. The Communists also used a small number of tanks in an attack in 1969 on the Ben Het Green Beret camp in South Vietnam's central highlands.

But the Hill 31 action marked the first time Communists had committed tanks in battalion strength to any fight and the first major tank-against-tank battle of the war.

RETURN TO OLD RANKS

1,200 Officers Demoted as Marines Trim Ranks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—About 1,200 Marine Corps officers are losing their officers' bars and dropping into the enlisted or warrant officer ranks.

The action has nothing to do with discipline. It is one more indication of the shrinking size of the armed forces as the pullout from Vietnam continues.

Back in 1965, the Marine Corps was expanding rapidly to meet the needs of the war. So beginning in December, 1965, the corps started making temporary officers out of sergeants and warrant officers.

ALTOGETHER, 5,000 men became temporary mustangs, the military slang for an officer who came up from the ranks. Most of these men worked their way up from second lieutenant through first lieutenant to captain. A few of them won permanent commissions along the way.

While there were 317,000 Leathernecks at the height of the war, the ranks have now been depleted to 235,000 and will fall further to about 200,000.

That has cut the need for officers and the temporaries have been reverting to their old ranks. The last big batch, some 1,200 men, now lose their bars — and an average of about 25 per cent of their base pay — as they return to their old ranks.

Eventually, in retirement, they will win back their officers' ratings and pensions.

H.O.P.E.

Q. I just graduated from a nurse's aide course and am finding it difficult to get a job, despite all the rumors I hear about how short of help most hospitals are. Because of this, and because I have always been interested in the USS Hope and its work, I would like information about working on this ship. L.M., Garden Grove.

A. Nurse's aides aren't accepted for the hospital ship and medical training center because "our purpose is teaching and the only aides we use are from the host country," said Melissa J. Farster with Project Hope in Washington, D.C. Volunteer registered nurses and medical specialists sign on for a 10-month stay in an underdeveloped country, and physicians sign on for two months or more. All are paid a small salary plus given room and board on the ship. Some stay one or two years in the country after the ship leaves in a follow-up land-based program that continues to train local medical personnel until they can assume full duties. Miss Farster said new staff applications are taken anytime but right now they are weakest in EEG-EKG trained specialists. The USS Hope is now in Jamaica in the West Indies. The next stop is Brazil. Project Hope (Health Opportunities for People Everywhere) is a nonprofit organization that relies on contributions from the American people. For further information, contact Project Hope, 933-7141, 5225 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Pension Plan

Q. I am a widow, and I receive a pension from the Veterans Administration. In June, 1969, the VA stopped my daughter's pension checks because of a mix-up. They said that I had been overpaid through an error, and I requested that the debt be waived since it wasn't my mistake. The waiver was granted in February, 1970, but the VA still hasn't resumed sending my 11-year-old daughter her checks. Can ACTION LINE help? D.M., Wilmington.

A. The pension check you are receiving includes your daughter's pension. For four years, the VA sent a pension check for you and your daughter and a separate check for your daughter by mistake. This mistake resulted in the overpayment that you referred to in your letter.

Question of Interest

Q. I have heard that there is some type of U.S. Savings Bond that costs $10,000 and pays 10 per cent interest. Is this true? If so, where can I buy one of these bonds? G.S., Lakewood.

A. You probably are referring to short-term U.S. Treasury notes since there is a $5,000 limit on regular savings bonds, and none of them pay that high interest. Short term treasury notes can be purchased for $10,000, but the interest rate probably would never rise above 8 per cent, according to a spokesman for the Federal Reserve Bank. U.S. Treasury short-term securities are issued in maturities of 3, 6, 9 or 12 months in denominations as low as $1,000. You can't redeem the bills before maturity, but you usually can sell them quickly in the open market, according to Sylvia Porter, syndicated financial columnist. The notes do not actually pay a stated amount of interest. The profit you receive is the difference between the discounted purchase price and the face value of the note at maturity. This varies with the market. You also can make a profit by selling the note to another individual before the note reaches maturity. You can buy the notes at any branch of the Federal Reserve Bank or commercial banks and security dealers. The Los Angeles branch of the Federal Reserve Bank is located at 409 W. Olympic Blvd.

Off Color?

Q. My father bought and paid cash for a used color TV set for me on Dec. 3 from Modern TV, 11102 S. Atlantic Blvd. in Lynwood. It came with a six-month guarantee on parts and one year on the picture tube. When the set was delivered Dec. 9 the color was not right and Bob, the owner of the store said it would be OK as soon as it warmed up. Well, it wasn't and I called him every day for a week and he said he would come out but he never showed up. My father has been to the shop three times and they are never open. Is there anything ACTION LINE can do for me? Mrs. W.C.M., Long Beach.

A. Apparently not. Three times in a two week period we called Robert Glass, owner of the two Modern TV shops in Lynwood, and each time he assured us he would call you to make an appointment to come out and check the set. But he did not reach you — even the time we told him you were at home and waiting for his call and he promised to call right away. On our first call, Glass told us he had been out to check the set but it was working fine." He said he made another trip out and could find no one at home. The state Electronic Repair Dealer Registration Bureau, which licenses and investigates complaints against members of the TV repair industry, did receive your complaint against Modern TV and are checking into the situation.

HOW TO USE ACTION LINE

Include pertinent information but please don't send original documents or pictures that you want returned.

The volume of mail makes it impossible to answer or acknowledge every question. Each question, however, is carefully read and considered. Because of the delay in transcribing telephone messages recorded on ACTION Line's special number, 432-3451, mail requests often receive prompter attention than phone calls.

Enterprise Unable to Visit Chile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Saturday the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise will be unable to visit Chile, whose Marxist president invited it to call there.

The Defense Department said "the operating schedule does not permit the ship to make this port call and still meet her scheduled commitments."

Chilean President Salvador Allende last week invited the U.S. carrier to stop at Valparaiso so its sailors could see for themselves the Chilean brand of Democracy.

There were reports the Enterprise was expected at Valparaiso today.

She is not en route to her home port of Alameda, Calif., after undergoing overhaul at Newport News, Va.

There was no elaboration on what the Pentagon meant by the ship's scheduled commitments which would prevent the visit in Chile.

News Services Send Radio, TV Test Alert

CHICAGO (UPI) — United Press International and Associated Press sent a new version of the emergency action notification IN LAST week's test, the TV subscribers Saturday in a change of procedure intended to reduce the likelihood of false alarms.

Just one week ago, a message ordering a full-scale alert was flashed across the country because a Civil Defense teletype operator chose the wrong tape for automatic transmission on UPI and AP wires. The mistake was not officially corrected for nearly 45 minutes.

Many broadcast stations left the air, following regulations for operation in event of a national emergency.

IN LAST week's test, the message was transmitted direct from Cheyenne Mountain, Colo., via the UPI and AP Broadcast news wires.

Saturday each service transmitted the test itself in a new backstop operation designed to avoid a repeat of last week's erroneous alert.

The test originated at the same place Saturday, but the circuits were not taken over by the Civil Defense. Instead, the test message went only to UPI Broadcast headquarters in Chicago and AP Broadcast headquarters in New York and a conference telephone call was used to verify reception.

After receipt of the message, another telephone call was required.

Jim Pecora, UPI Broadcast news editor, and John Mine, AP Broadcast newsmen, placed telephone calls to a communications duty officer at the White House. The call authenticated the message and the test was retransmitted to broadcasters.

BOTH services agreed the test message went "without a hitch," although it moved slightly later than under the previous procedure.

The new method of handling the test was worked out the past week in conferences between media representatives and government agencies.

Violence Shuts Texas College

PRAIRIE VIEW, Tex. (AP) — Prairie View A&M College, racked by violence and demonstrations since Wednesday, was closed indefinitely Saturday.

Dr. Alvin I. Thomas, president of the school, said it was decided to close the college and make all students reapply for admission.

This would, he said, permit college officials to screen those students who are serious about obtaining an education at the predominantly black school.

Violence started Wednesday when about 1,500 of the school's 4,000 students marched on the home of Dr. Thomas with 19 demands, including one that he resign.

After failing to reach agreement with the college president, the students marched back to the campus and the office of the dean of men was destroyed by fire.

Army Spied on Civilians From May '68

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In 1968, the Army instructed its more than 3,000 intelligence-gathering agents to collect information on "prominent persons" friendly with the potential leaders of civil disturbances, it was disclosed Saturday.

That order served as the apparent rational for the collection of dossiers on such prominent people as Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., former Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, actress Jane Fonda, folk singer Arlo Guthrie and scores of others.

THE OFFICE of Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., made public the Army's "civil disturbance information collection plan," issued by the office of the assistant chief of staff for intelligence on May 2, 1968 and rescinded on Dec. 14, 1970 by Gen. Kenneth G. Wickham, the Army's adjutant general.

Bayh is a member of the Senate constitutional rights subcommittee which is conducting hearings into the extent of the Army's intelligence-gathering activities.

The Army was given the mission of helping to cope with riots in the late 1960s. Its decision to gather information on potential troublemakers sprang from that mission. The plan declares that to do the job "it must know in advance as much as possible about the well springs of violence and the heart and nerve causes of chaos."

So broadly did it interpret its mandate that it ordered its Army intelligence units serving abroad to funnel into its headquarters information about rallies in support of the peace movement in this country.

INTELLIGENCE units in Europe and Asia were directed to collect the names, organizations, number of participants and nature of protest activities in support of "peace" groups "in either Communist or non-Communist countries."

In all, the "information collection plan" listed 83 categories of information about civil disturbances—before they occurred, while going on and after they had been quelled.

Domestically the Army's intelligence agents were told to gather information on such matters as:

—The identity of newspapers, radio or television stations friendly with potential leaders of civil disturbances.

—The "aims and activities of groups attempting to create, prolong or aggravate racial tensions." Among those groups, the document listed the NAACP, the Congress on Racial Equality and The Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

—The "high command, composition and structure of headquarters, exact titles, rosters of key personnel" of "dissident groups."

—"Efforts by minority groups to upset the balance of power and the political system."

—The "failure of law enforcement agencies to properly respond due to indecision, lack of manpower or fear of public reaction."

—"Inequitable law enforcement, real or imagined, towards minority groups."

—Such "indicators of potential violence" as "wide disparity of average income between white and discontented nonwhite" and the "migration of large numbers of persons from discontented minority groups into cities."

In addition to depending on its own resources for this type of information, the Army asked other government agencies to contribute what they could gather. Among these agencies were the Central Intelligence Agency, the Subversive Activities Control Board, the Coast Guard.

COOL WATER

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Fifty years is a long time to wait for a drink of cold water, residents of this southwestern Pennsylvania township will tell you.

For half-a-century, the tap water here, at its coldest, has come out lukewarm to tepid because an underground smouldering coal fire warmed the water in the pipes.

Now the fire finally has been extinguished and cold water runs from faucets here. Employes of the State Department of Environmental Resources poured 13,000 tons of wet fly ash into boreholes drilled into the abandoned mine to smother the fire.

LOW, BEHOLD

SHREWSBURY, England (UPI) — As they were drinking at a pub, Peter Rogers, 21, lifted up a friend's kilt in front of a woman. He did not realize his friend had nothing on underneath.

That was the story he told a Shrewbury court where he admitted conduct likely to cause a breach of the peace. The judge decided not to make an order binding him over.

THIN ICE

STAFFORD, England (UPI) — Two thieves were stopped in their escape because what they thought was a snow-covered lawn was actually a thin coat of ice over a swimming pool, a court was told.

As a result, it was a "very bedraggled pair of men" arrested, said prosecutor Michael Pratt. The suspects pleaded guilty to burglary charges and were jailed for 18 months each.

SMOKESCREEN

LONDON (UPI) — In scene one the leggy blonde, in black hot pants and a see-through blouse, walks into the party and casts a cool eye at the half dozen men busily appraising her. Flash to scene two: A fellow is helping her into his racy sports car.

Which fellow? The only one not smoking a cigarette.

It is the latest episode prepared for a national television campaign by the Health Education Council.

Dr. William Jones, council director general, said the council is studying psychologists' reports on the project, but that they hoped to have the anti-smoking campaign underway in the fall.

LOVE RITES

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — It was Sadie Hawkin's day in reverse among the Indians around Cuzco Thursday and the outcome was just about the same as in previous years when tribesmenfo ught on horseback and afoot for the region's maidens.

Police said at least three bachelors were slain and 20 others injured in the free-for-all among some 2,000 Indians in the provinces of Chumbvilcas and Canas seeking a wife.

Hundreds of spectators gathered at the foot of Mount Gongorillo to watch the annual combat with lariats and whips. Winners seized their prizes, the maidens in the area, and ran away with them — with matrimony the eventual objective.

FIRST TIME

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The "Ah So" restaurant at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas is a carbon copy of an authentic Japanese Garden made even more real by a winding stream fed by a waterfall that surrounds little islands which support the dining tables.

Story telling comedian Myron Cohen dined at the "Ah So" recently with a group of friends. As the party prepared to leave, Cohen stood up, stepped back too far, and plunged into the waist-deep stream.

Cohen wasn't hurt but was very wet.

As he was being pulled from the water by waiters, the comedian sputtered: "I bet this is the first time a Jew has ever been baptized in a Japanese restaurant."

FAMILIARITY

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Patrolman George O'Reilly Jr. thought the coat a suspect was wearing looked familiar and it was. It was the same one O'Reilly had bought his father for Christmas.

Charles Dewberry, 23, was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse on a charge of receiving stolen goods. He was convicted of being involved in the theft of the coat from the senior O'Reilly's car. The elder O'Reilly is a vice squad detective.

HONESTLY!

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Honesty boxes for uncollected fares on Nottingham buses are being removed. Bus company officials say repairing damage by vandals costs more than the boxes accumulate.

SUDS GAP

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Calling beer a "saboteur of victory," the president of the national Woman's Christian Temperance Union protested a recent armed forces order making beer available in mess halls and through vending machines installed in barracks.

"The men who guard our country and who have to help protect freedom around the world are being offered more alcohol by the establishment," Mrs. Fred J. Tooze said in a bulletin entitled "Saboteur of Victory! Beer is in 'now' Army."

Recalling the attack on Pearl Harbor, she said "concerned citizens are aroused over the possibility of increasing drunkenness in the armed forces."

Mrs. Tooze urged that "woman power" and "man power" be combined in an effort to reverse the orders and "protect our boys from liquor traffic."

REPAIRED

CITRUSDAL, South Africa (AP) — Farmer Jan Mouton said the radiator hose burst when he was on his way to market with a truckload of watermelons, so he patched the hose with tape, strained the juice of six melons into the radiator and drove to a garage.

AGE LIE

SHREWSBURY, England (AP) — A Shropshire County councilor said that women should be able to keep their ages from policemen without fear of a fine.

"It is an unnecessary encroachment into private lives," Councilor Norman Griffith commented when investigating the case of a woman fined for withholding her age.

BUG SWATTER

MEDFORD, Ore. (UPI) — A local resident swears he saw it on Interstate 5 in the Siskiyou Mountains:

As a Volkswagen moved out to pass a big truck, the driver of the truck leaned out and swatted the little vehicle with a flyswatter.

Yugoslav-Russ Visit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Leonid Brezhnev, 1st secretary of the Communist Party, met Saturday with Yugoslav Foreign Minister Mirko Tepavac. The news agency Tass said the two officials "had a friendly talk on questions of mutual interest."

'FOWL' BALL

DETROIT (AP) — "I'm for health standards as much or more than the next man," said George Verbeke, "butth is seems silly."

A federal health standards law which went into effect Jan. 2 required an inspector's presence at any establishment processing more than 20,000 chickens a year, and Verbeke's market on Detroit's east side barely qualified.

Verbeke had to provide the inspector an office and equipment and pay his overtime, about $60 a week. The government paid the inspector's salary of $10,000 a year.

The inspector stayed for one month and rejected one chicken.

He has been withdrawn after Agriculture Department lawyers decided such requirements really were for wholesalers processing million of birds and found a loophole excluding Verbeke's market.

EXPERT

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — The wife of Alan M. Zacher Jr. filed suit for divorce this week in St. Louis Circuit Court. Zacher is a lawyer and marriage counselor.

BIRD INSPECTION

Federal poultry inspector John Barstad, right, at work at George Verbeke's poultry market in Detroit. U.S. law requires an inspector at every location where 20,000 birds a year are processed. It cost taxpayers 50 cents for each chicken inspected at Verbeke's until a loophole was found to relieve Verbeke, left, of federal scrutiny.

Governor Warns of Pennsylvania 'Grinding to Halt'

By JOHN HOPE

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The state of Pennsylvania is going broke, each day falling $2 million deeper into the red.

The problem has become so critical that newly elected Gov. Milton J. Shapp has warned that on Monday, the machinery of state government may "grind to a halt."

Shapp raised the warning last week in an attempt to get the Pennsylvania General Assembly to enact a 5 per cent state income tax.

HE SAID the tax would raise enough revenue — $1.5 billion in the next 18 months — to pull the nation's third largest state out of the red.

A majority of state senators felt, however, that the tax would actually give Shapp more than the extra $2 million daily he needs. In other words, a nice plum for state Democrats to carry into 1972 elections.

And so the General Assembly adjourned for the weekend instead, taking advantage of the first spring-like weather this year. The legislators did agree to leave Shapp with $394 million to run the state between Monday (when current appropriations run out) and the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

But the governor maintains he needs $900 million to provide essential state services for the period. And he hinted that he just may refuse to sign the stopgap appropriations bill by midnight Sunday, deliberately letting the state services "grind to a halt," so the General Assembly will be forced into action.

The financial crisis is nothing new for Pennsylvania. Most of the money headaches now facing Shapp were an offshoot of former Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's four-year administration when he was dealing with a Democratically-controlled House and a GOP-controlled Senate.

BUT REPUBLICAN members of the house fought Shafer on his spending proposals and offered little or no support for any of his plans to raise revenue.

When Shapp became governor last January, Democrats hardly had time to clear up inauguration hangovers before the Democratic governor announced that the state needed a 5 per cent income tax to cure its financial ills.

Shapp said time was running out and that the state would be broke by March 1 if the General Assembly failed to enact the tax.

The state House approved Shapp's bill, but when it arrived in the Senate it was pointed out that $1.5 billion dollars would amount to more than the needed $2 million per day.

New Try to Clear Manson

Members of Charles Manson's so-called "family have come forward to testify he had nothing to do with the Tate-LaBianca murders.

These witnesses are appearing at the penalty phase of Manson's trial in Los Angeles. They did not put in an appearance on the witness stand before the jury convicted Manson and three women codefendants of first degree murder.

Whether they receive the death sentence or life imprisonment are the only things for the jury to decide now.

Steven Grogan, 19, became the first male member of the "family" to testify Friday. He was expected to return to the stand Monday and swear that he and not Manson was in the murder foray at the LaBianca home.

The district attorney's office said that if he does he probably would be charged with murder.

The three women convicted with Manson, Patricia Krenwinkel, Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten, have admitted their role in the slayings. They each said Manson was not involved.

ANOTHER WITNESS, agent Lawrence J. Schiller, testified that Miss Atkins' account of the seven Tate-LaBianca slayings had earned about $100,000, of which he retained 25 per cent.

A day after Schiller's agreement to handle publication of her story in a book, "The Killing of Sharon Tate," and resale to other publications, Miss Atkins appeared before the county grand jury and implicated herslef and other "family" members — including Manson — in the killings.

Miss Atkins testified during the penalty phase of the trial, now in progress, that she had lied before the grand jury and that Manson was not involved.

Schiller said the remaining 75 per cent of the $100,000 was to be shared by Miss Atkins, her former attorney, Richard Caballero, and his associate, Paul Caruso.

BOWLING BALL KILLS MOTORIST

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — A 49-year-old Detroit woman was killed Saturday when a bowling ball dropped from a highway overpass struck her on the jaw, police said.

Marian Goetsch was a passenger in a car driven by her son, William, 21. He was not injured.

Five youths were seen on the overpass just before the bowling ball plunged toward the Goetsch car, police said.

Transient Surrenders in Bellflower Slaying

A 31-year-old transient who turned himself in at Long Beach police headquarters was jailed Saturday on suspicion of the knife slaying last Monday of Mrs. Ruby Kates, a Bellflower clothing store owner.

Sheriff's homicide deputies said the suspect, Arthur T. Conrad, was transferred to county central jail after he walked into the Long Beach Public Safety Building at 2 a.m.

Sheriff's deputies identified Conrad as an unemployed truck driver and former resident of the Bellflower-Lakewood area.

Mrs. Kates, 58, owner of Judy and Jerry's Children's Shop, 17432 S. Bellflower Blvd., was stabbed to death by a holdup man who took $70 from the cash register.

The assailant then fled, leaving a 50-foot trail of bloody footprints, homicide detectives said.

The body was discovered by a teen-age girl customer about 5 p.m. Mrs. Kates, lying face down on the floor in a pool of blood, had been stabbed several times.

Mrs. Kates' husband William, 63, of 11517 Sibley St., Norwalk, told investigators his wife worked alone at the shop on weekdays.

The shop was named after the Kates' two children, Judy, 24, and Jerry, 21.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by TONY CHAPARRO of LAWSON'S JEWELERS Downtown Long Beach Only A MILLS STORE

Continuing our series of how to value a diamond, one of the important factors that influence the value of a diamond is the WEIGHT of the diamond. In simple terms, it is the measurement of the size of the diamond and is expressed by the term: CARAT.

In order to understand the meaning of carat weight, we should define the term.

Diamonds are weighted on a metric carat scale. It must be one of the world's most delicate scales because it takes 141.75 Carats to equal one ounce; it takes 2,267.962 Carats to equal one pound!

So a one carat diamond weighs less than 7/1000ths of an ounce or less than .7% of an ounce!!

A carat is then divided into 100 parts called points. A diamond that weighs 100 points is a ONE CARAT diamond and is less than seven thousandths of an ounce. A diamond that weighs 50 points is a one-HALF carat diamond and is less than 3.5/1000ths of an ounce. A quarter-carat diamond weighs 25 points and so forth.

A diamond that weighs a full carat is of course very rare. Just imagine, it takes over 250 tons of earth to be sifted through in the diamond mines of Africa to discover enough diamonds that all together will weigh 100 points or one carat!

Therefore, a diamond scale must be able to weigh within one point or 1/100 of a carat, which is less than seven one-Hundred Thousandths of an ounce!

If you are interested in further information, please come into our store, Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach only, and we will be most happy to answer any of your questions, provide additional information, and show you actual diamonds.

Why Do Cops Quit Their Job? Some Blame John Public

By STANLEY M. BROWN

MIAMI (UPI) — At 2:02 p.m. last Tuesday, it began to sprinkle. A quick glance upward told motorcycle cop Andy Travis a downpour was just seconds away. He spotted a gas station in the next block, changed lanes and hunched behind the windshield on his just-tuned Harley Davidson police special.

A shot pierced the traffic noise on busy U.S. Highway 1. Travis looked over his left shoulder at a half-dozen rows of low-rent ghetto apartments that line the six-lane highway between Coconut Grove and Coral Gables.

He saw two black men step around the corner of one of the pink, two-story apartments. Another shot rang out. Travis saw the muzzle blast, but not the gun.

He screwed his right hand 90 degrees and his big Harley leaped forward. He skidded into the service station broadside, hollered for everyone to duck and grabbed his radio mike. Within minutes, half the motorcycle cops in Miami were combing the area for the snipers. They come quick when a buddy is in trouble.

THE SEARCH proved futile. Travis — unhurt — thanked his buddies for their help, mounted his Harley and headed for his South Dade County beat.

Two days later, Andy Travis ended a distinguished 10-year career as a motorcycle patrolman with the Dade County Public Safety Department.

Sheriff E. Wilson Purdy called his resignation "another tragedy in the continuing assualt on the police that is apparently designed to intimidate society into subjection to the lawless element."

Andy Travis, a six-foot-one-inch, 200-pounder, father of a four-year-old daughter and 10-month-old son, explained his resignation, which came five days after Miami Policeman Victor Butler eas slain by an unseen sniper.

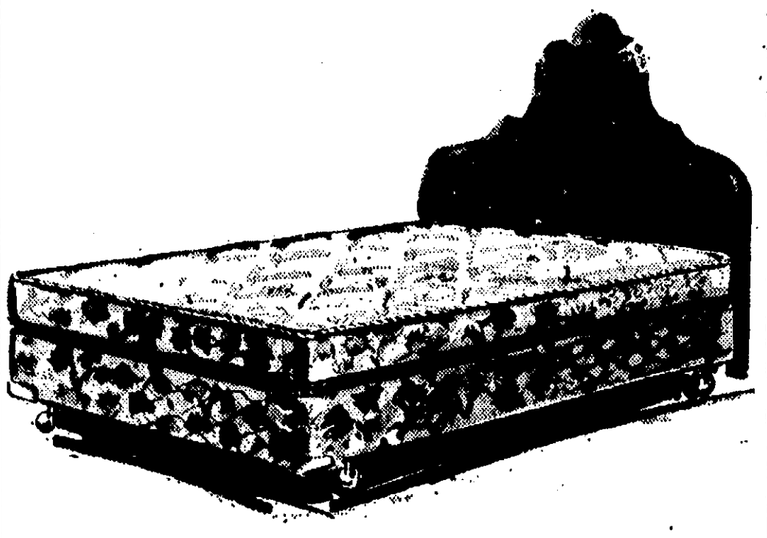

"Nowadays you kill a policeman and it's a joke—except to the families," he said.

Mrs. Judy Travis put it this way: "Our daughter cried herself to sleep Tuesday night because someone shot at her father. How do you explain this to a 4-year-old? This time they missed. But what about next time?"

House Panel Plans Probe of Civil Rights Laws

By LOU CANNON
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — A House judiciary subcommittee is quietly preparing for a landmark investigation of U.S. Civil Rights laws.

Rep. Don Edwards D-Calif., has been named to chair the 10-member subcommittee, which was formed without announcement last week by Judiciary Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y.

Edwards already has addressed a letter to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell urging the federal government to withhold its guidelines on voting rights changes in 11 southern states until the subcommittee reviews them.

The Californian is also hiring an economist who will, for the first time, review all federal disbursements under civil rights laws to see if nondiscrimnatory provisions are being enforced.

And Edwards has asked both the U.S. Department of Justice and the Civil Rights Commission what, if any, action has been taken on recommendations of a California state commission that discovered "inadequate federal concern" for violations of federal law involving treatment of Mexican - Americans in East Los Angeles. The subcommittee will hold hearings if the answers are unsatisfactory.

House liberals called for a special subcommittee on civil rights to investigate the extent to which earlier equal opportunity laws passed by Congress had been honored in the breach. But House enthusiasm failed during the period of street demonstrations in the late 1960s.

The subcommittee on equal educational opportunity was formed in the Senate last year under the leadership of Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D.-Minn., but the body lacks legislative jurisdiction and is limited to educational issues.

Edwards, who has long desired to head such a committee, has promised a forthright inquiry into violations of civil rights laws. But he has also pledged that the inquiry will be conducted in "a spirit of reconciliation" which will avoid table - thumping hearings.

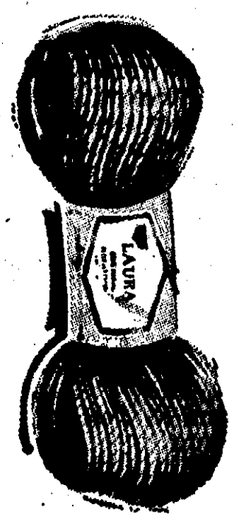

"Republicans and Democrats on the committee both agree that civil rights is the No. 1 problem and we want to be of help to it," Edwards said in an interview. "We need an equal society, and we think that our subcommittee can make a contribution."

Edwards has promised to work closely with the ranking Republican on the committee, he is Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., who also is the ranking GOP member on the Select Crime Committee.

The newly formed civil rights subcommittee will have jurisdiction over the thorny "equal rights amendment" and will hold hearings on the amendment beginning March 24.

Thousands Cheer as Royal Vessel Arrives at Pier J

the last cruise ffrom Southampton to Long Beach. It was a wonderful 39 days. The ship is elegant with its beautiful paintings and wood."

Miss Bishop added that she is creating her own Queen Mary museum in her home and her collection includes the chief engineer's log of the maiden voyage, menus and newspaper clippings.

MEMORIES OF the "Last Great Cruise" are shared by Mrs. Burton Chase, wife of a Los Angeles County Supervisor.

"We joined the cruise in Acapulco and spent three nights and two days aboard the Mary. The grandeur of the ship impressed me. Our stateroom was old-time elegance with luxurious drapes, carved wooden beds and a large bathtub. The ship, even in the engine room, was well cared for. It showed that the crew really took pride in her."

The ship is loved not only by those who traveled aboard her, but by those who know of her history as once the fastest and biggest of the luxury liners and as a troop ship during World War II.

Although he has never been aboard the Mary, L. E. Lindley of Long Beach, parked his camper on Pier J on Thursday to insure he would get a close look at the ship.

"It's terrific Long Beach has the Queen Mary. It is the biggest ship I have ever seen and has a great history," he said.

TO PASS THE time until the ship's arrival at Pier J Saturday morning, Lindley watched the last minute preparations.

"I saw policemen practing for the flag-raising ceremonies. They had to raise the U.S., British, California and Long Beach flags. As late as 10 p.m. Friday, workmen were installing lights for the parking lot. In one case, they mixed up the wires," he said.

Tom Curtis of Long Beach arrived at Pier J at 3 a.m. Saturday after a long poker party, because he "wanted to see the ship before I leave for Alaska."

Martin Polacek of Seal Beach and Roy Elofson Jr. of La Palma also arrived in the early morning hours.

"THE MARY is a great ship," Polacek said. "I would not have wanted to see her scrapped. I just wish the City of Long Beach had allowed people to tour her before she was converted into a floating hotel and convention center. The city could have charged $1 per person and cut down on the conversion costs."

Elofson predicted Long Beach will eventually get back the millions in tidelands oil funds it is spending for the porject:

"The ship will draw tourists, just like Disneyland or Knotts Berry Farm. And it will be good for business, because it will provide jobs."

But for Elofson, the Mary's commercial value is not the prime concern:

"To me, a ship is human. Every ship is like a woman, but the Mary — well, she's a real lady."

TRAVELER GROPES THROUGH STORM

Giant Queen Ties Up in Her Permanent Home

of two Naval shipyards, commented:

"That's the finest job of ship handling I have ever seen."

The director of operations, former Navy captain James Lynch, who commanded the carrier Yorktown, echoed Adm. Fee's comment.

"That was an eggshell docking," he said.

Despite the brisk breeze the powerful tugs held the 118-foot-wide, powerless ship right on course as it threaded the eye of the needle between the face of the pier and a rock dike.

At 9:30 a.m. the eye-splice of a hawser was secured to a bullard, indicating the Queen was "at home."

Again her air-powered whistle sounded an eight second blast.

Two tugboats were retained through the day to hold the big ship against the side as a precaution against possible shifting caused by the strong winds.

A spokesman said permanent steel mooring lines are being installed to supplement the manila lines and he said the tugs will remain at the site "as long as the winds keep up." He said installation of the permanent wire moorings should be completed by Monday.

About 200 pleasure craft responded with their whistles, tooters, and horns in a discordant musical "Welcome aboard."

Looking down from the bridge deck high above the water the thousands who had gathered to watch the homecoming of a queen looked like ants.

Around the edge of the east and south face of Pier J were a string of campers and trailers. Many had come the day before to get a front row seat for the spectacle.

About mid-April the world-famed ship which arrived in Long Beach Dec. 8, 1967, will begin her fourth career — a "building" housing a major tourist attraction.

The first phase of the queen's "reberthing" will be tours aboard the ship conducted by the Museum of the Sea Foundation.

Later this year the first exhibits of the Museum of the Sea are scheduled to open. Ultimately the former luxury liner-troop ship-bride ship will become a hotel and convention center complex.

An announcement is expected within a few days naming the master lessee who will develop the many shops, restaurants, and other tourist attractions on board what the Coast Guard now regards as "substantially a land structure."

Snow Drifts Snap Power Lines as Winds Hit Midwest

United Press International

A norther dumped a foot of snow on Minnesota Saturday and fanned it with high winds, piling up eight foot drifts that closed some highways.

Winds swept through the upper midwest and Great Lakes region, toppling a concrete block building in Dyersville, Iowa, and blowing the roof off a public housing apartment building in Chicago. No injuries were reported.

Winds and snowdrifts snapped power lines in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana and Illinois. Residents of Mountain Iron, Minn., were without power for 19 hours after 40 miles per hour winds knocked down lines into the northeastern Minnesota community.

MINNESOTA highway crews reported six to eight foot drifts closed main roads across the central and northeastern part of the state. Police urged residents throughout the state to stay home except in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area where only two inches of new snow fell.

Northeastern and Central Minnesota started digging out from eight to 14 inches of new snow. About 250 stranded motorists were housed at St. Cloud at the civic center and a state college.

Winds were clocked at 30 to 45 miles per hour throughout Minnesota and gusts hit 71 mph at Rochester, in the southern part of the state.

Winds gusted to 50 mph in Wisconsin, piling up snowdrifts that forced the closing of a 10-mile section of Wisconsin 13 in the northern central part of the state.

Ice and freezing rain slicked roads throughout Wisconsin except in the Milwaukee area. State police said conditions were particularly hazardous around La Crosse and Rhinelander.

Chicago lived up to its designation as the "windy city" as gusts up to 58 miles an hour were reported. Motorists stopped for red lights felt their cabs sway with gusts around skyscrapers and suburbanites picked up toppled signs and tree limbs. Several store windows in the suburb of Des Plaines were broken by winds.

RAIN AND snow spread from upper Michigan across to New England and Vermont police reported a series of fender benders on slick roads. A school bus carrying a ski team to a meet in Lyndonville, Vt., skidded off a road near Montpelier and hit a guard rail but no injuries were reported.

Dynamite blasting of ice jams on the Elkhorn and Platte Rivers brought some flood relief to northeastern Nebraska.

Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia started cleaning up from the second series of tornadoes to strike the south in five days. The damage from Friday's twisters was estimated at $200,000 but there were no known deaths or injuries.

Race Pair Rips Vegas 'Vendetta'

DETROIT (AP) — Two officials of the Hazel Park Racing Association said Saturday a federal indictment charging conspiracy to hide ownership of Las Vegas' Frontier Hotel was part of a government vendetta against them and their Italian ancestry.

Anthony J. Zerilli, 43, of suburban Sterling Heights, and Peter J. Belanca, a 37-year-od Detroit attorney, were among six persons indicted Friday by a Federal Grand Jury in Los Angeles, for conspiracy and use of interstate transportation in aid of racketeering.

THE indictment accused them of conspiring to hide their interests in the Frontier Hotel in 1966 and 1967. The hotel was sold later to billionaire Howard Hughes by the defendants, the indictment alleged.

Zerilli, named in 1963 U.S. Senate testimony as a Mafia leader, admitted "some involvement in Las Vegas" during a news conference he and Bellanca held Saturday in their attorney's office, but he did not elaborate.

Both men said the indictments had not been detailed for them by federal officials in Detroit. Zerilli is president of the Hazel Park Racing Association and Bellanca is a director.

Named along with Zerilli and Bellanca in the 10-count indictment were:

MICHAEL Polizzi, 46, of Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich.; Arthur Rooks, 67, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.; Jack Shapiro, 57, Detroit and Anthony Giardano, 56, of St. Louis, Mo.

Zerilli, Bellanca, Polizzi and Rooks were released on bond Friday after appearing before Federal Magistrate Paul Komives in Detroit. A hearing was set for March 8 to determine whether the four will be taken to Los Angeles for arraignment.

Students 'Convert' at Cop-In ATHENS, Ohio (UPI) — Mark Toomey, a freshman at Ohio University got a thing about police officers after he was ordered into court to pay a parking ticket.

"It was the first time I was ever in a police station and I guess I felt pretty much against police," Toomey said.

Since his court appearance, Toomey, 19, has changed his attitude toward policemen and he credits a "cop-in" program in which about 200 Ohio University students participated.

The program was the brainchild of Bruce Tabashneck, 22, a graduate student in jourlanism from Olean, N.Y., and James Kimbler, 21, a senior in the school of journalism.

'The idea came to us last year when I had an opportunity to go on patrol with the Athens police, Tabashneck said. "I had a rather negative image of police at the time. I was a stereotype, they really turned me off."

"I talked with some policemen and got more interested," he said. "It was a moving thing. Because as a person I saw that they had similar problems. I could identify with them as human beings.

"They go home at night and face real problems like anyone else. They don't go home and eat nails."

MEDICAL ADVICE

Pairs Urged to Stage Gala Love-in Fetes

LONDON (UPI) — The British Medical Association advised married couples Saturday night to stage gala love-ins at home "with lovemaking as the main attraction" instead of spending the night out on the town.

Couples too often make lovemaking "the last household chores of the day," Dr. Mary Mason Jones wrote in the latest edition of the British MEDICAL Association pamphlet, "Getting Married," which sells 250,000 copies annually.

"Give it the importance it deserves.

"Instead of having an evening out, sometimes have a gala evening in, with love making as the main attraction," she continued. "There's nothing wrong with the sitting room sofa for a change of scene."

Dr. Mason Jones said attitudes toward sex have changed.

"Today it does not seem enough to be a faithful wife, an efficient housekeeper and a loving mother," Dr. Mason Jones said.

A WIFE "must also be hot stuff in bed, and not just sometimes, but through pregnancy, menopause and into a ripe old age . . .

"The more you do it — this goes for both men and women — the longer you will be able to do it and the more you will want it," Dr. Mason Jones said.

KNOWLEDGE
A SAFEGUARD

In no emergency is it quite so important to know just how to proceed as in the case of bereavement. When one is under the stress of grief it is easy to make a decision which may later be regretted.

The surest safeguard against unwise decisions in funeral matters, is to know in advance the facts regarding funeral costs and procedures. This information may be secured without obligation by visiting with one of Mottell's experienced counselors.

Israel Ready to Talk to Egypt

By The Associated Press

Israel is ready to talk to Egypt about firm Mideast boundaries but without preconditions, such as the Arab demands that Israeli forces must withdraw from all territories seized in the 1967 war, U.N. diplomatic informants reported Saturday.

The Soviet Union said the United States shares responsibility with Israel for its refusal to withdraw completely from occupied Arab territory and "for all possible consequences of this."

A Soviet statement issued today in Moscow by the news agency Tass said the Soviet Union will continue to aid the Arab poples "in the struggle for the liberation of lands captured by the Israeli aggressors."

BUT THE statement added that Moscow "firmly" favors a settlement of the Mideast question "by political means" and said the situation now was "more favorable . . . than ever before" for such a settlement.

The Egyptian government was reported to feel "tangible progress" is being made in U.N.-sponsored talks in New York and that it is willing to extend the Mideast cease-fire beyond next Sunday's expiration date. That word came Saturday in the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram of Cairo.

President Anway Sadat of Egypt has said he would agree to extension of the cease-fire only if there was noticeable progress in the talks.

Al Ahram's article said the Egyptian government is prepared to accept unanimous decisions of the Big Four on the Mideast, including extension of the cease-fire.

Israel's reply to the Egyptian peace proposals was in a position paper handed over to Gunnar V. Jarring, the U.N. special envoy on the mideast. He has been serving as the go-between in the indirect talks in New York.

THE U.N. informants said there was nothing in the position paper that specified that Israel would not give back Sharm el Sheikh to Egypt, East Jerusalem to Jordan and the Golan Heights to Syria. The sources added that there was no map or statement indicating where Israel would want the borders to be. But Israeli officials in Tel Aviv were saying these are territories the Israelis do not intend to give up.

The U.N. sources, however, described the Israeli position as being based on free discussions of the issues, without preconditions.

Egypt's ambassador to the U.N., Mohammed H. el-Zayyat, raised a possible procedural obstacle to talks.

He objected, in a statement, that Israel had not replied to questions Jarring put to both sides on Feb. 8 but had chosen instead to reply only to Egypt's responses to Jarring.

OVER THE POLES IN A LIGHT PLANE

Swiss Plans Global Flight—the Hard Way

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT

GENEVA (UPI) — Georges Buttex plans to fly around the world the hard way — over the top and under the bottom.

He plans to do it in a small, 350-horsepower single-engine plane crammed with cannisters containing thousands of gallons of fuel. Takeoff time is set for exactly 8 p.m. next Dec. 10 from Geneva's International Airport.

Precisely 240 hours or 10 days later, if all goes well, Buttex will put down again on the same runway, having written a new chapter in aviation — the first man to have flown around the world by way of the North and South poles, a flight of 24,000 miles.

Georges Buttex is Swiss, 49 years old, married and with four children. He has the permanently crinkled eyes of a professional pilot and the soft, calm voice of most flying instructors.

"ABOUT THREE years ago I was looking at a book of flying records and I saw that people have flown around the world before but only around the equator," he said. "So I thought, why not up one side, over the North Pole, down the other side, over the South Pole and back up again to the starting point.

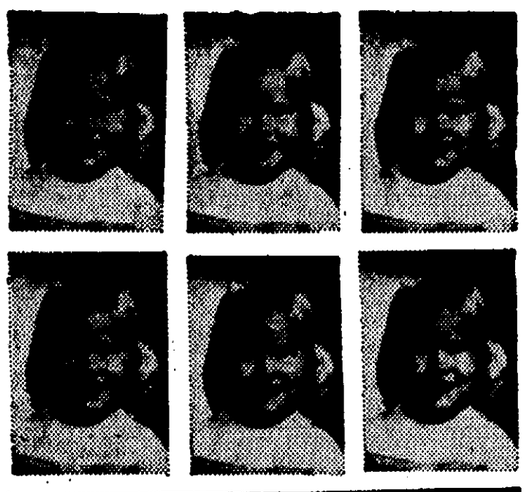

"One look at the weather charts soon told me the reason. If you fly around the equator the weather is more or less constant. But over the top and bottom you meet every possible condition.

"In fact, the South Pole is permanently swept by gales going up to 100 knots and the only time a light plane could make the passage is during 10 days in December.

"So," Buttex said simply, "I decided to try it."

From Geneva, he will head north and two hours later will be astride the Greenwich Meridian which he will follow for the next 10 days. There will be 180 hours of flying and 60 hours on the ground for refueling and completing formalities to establish records. The first stop will be Amchitka in the Aleutian Islands. Then Nadi in the Fijis; Christchurch, New Zealand; William's Base, South Pole; Amundsen-Scott Base, South Pole; Accra, Ghana. Then Geneva.

BUTTEX will actually take over the controls only on takeoff and landing or if something goes wrong. The real pilot will be a miniature computer installed on board. Altitude, climate and meteorological data already have been computerized by electronic engineers and forms the "memory" of the computer flight commander. This way Buttex will be able to sleep — in itself an accomplishment in the small cockpit and requiring an astronaut's psychological training — and thus establish speed records otherwise impossible.

THE TORNADO HE SAW COMING WAS DEADLY

Profile of Storm: the Day Twisters Killed 111

HONEYMOON IS OVER

Wayne Creel sits amid the destruction of his home at Little Yazoo, Miss., that was flattened by a tornado. Creel and his new bride of two days were spending their first night in the house when it collapsed around them.

—AP Wirephoto

By G. MICHAEL HARMON

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — When Bill Keating reported to work at the U.S. Weather Bureau here at 3:30 a.m. on Sunday, Feb. 21 the forecast called for warm, southerly winds accompanied by showers and thundershowers — a not untypical wet, oppressive February day in the Mississippi Delta.

Reviewing the latest weather maps Keating made a mental note to keep track of an easterly moving low pressure system and trailing cold front developing in South Central Texas.

Keating watched and waited and by late morning he knew the low system with its bitter cold, would collide with the warm, southerly air somewhere along the Louisiana-Mississippi border. Such a union, Keating knew, was the spawning ground for one of the most feared and unpredictable of all meteorological abberations — the tornado.

AT 11:55 A.M., Keating acted, and weather wires in newspapers, television and radio stations across the state clattered out the warning. A tornado watch was in effect for portions of east Louisiana and west Mississippi.

The warnings proved accurate, deadly accurate.

At 3:23 p.m., a twister sucked up a frame house in Delhi, La., 20 miles across the Mississippi River from Vicksburg. It chewed it up and spit out the pieces, ten died in the crushing vortex. Six bodies were discovered up to 200 yards away. The others are still missing.

For four hours, the storm roared through the Mississippi Delta, spawning dozens of twisters to repeat the Delhi tragedy over and over again.

The Mississippi civil defense reported 101 confirmed deaths in six Mississippi counties—a total of 111 in the two states—and workmen continue to probe through the mountains of rubble for other victims.

MORE THAN 600 were injured. An estimated 2,300 were left homeless. Four small Mississippi communities, Inverness, Delta City, Pugh city and Little Yazoo, virtually ceased to exist as they were raked by the pounding funnels.

The Red Cross estimates more than 1,000 individual homes and 95 businesses either were destroyed or badly damaged. Total property loss was put at $7.5 million.

As many as 100 twisters may have been involved in the storm, but experts believe most of the death and destruction was caused by four or five, which bounced in and out of the clouds and across the Delta like giant jackhammers.

Allen Pearson, director of the severe storm forecast center at Kansas City, called the tornadoes some of the strongest ever recorded.

ONE, WHICH first touched down at Cary in Sharkey County, Miss., bounced all the way to Oxford, a distance of about 125 miles, before dying out, making it "some 100 times stronger than an average tornado," Pearson said.

Another single twister, he said, was responsible for the destruction of both Delta City and Inverness, which are about 25 miles apart.

"It was incredible," Keating said. "That 'low' was pulling in the warm air and it was shooting straight up. Thetops of the thunderstorms went up to 55,000 feet.

"We were getting as many as six tornado hooks on the radar at one time. Once we had three hooks in one cell of tornadoes. I have never seen that many; you can believe that."

ACCORDING to Weather Bureau records, it was the worst tornado disaster to hit Mississippi since 1908 when 100 persons were killed in Lamar and Wayne counties. In May 1840, when the most deadly tornado in Mississippi history struck Natchez, 317 persons were killed.

For the people of the flat, cotton rich Delta, however, it would be difficult to conjure a horror of greater magnitude than that which descended upon them last Sunday night.

One fact, however, was clear: hardly anyone fled his home, despite the weather bureau's warning.

"Leave? No we didn't leave," said Wayne Creel of Little Yazoo.

"You can't run from anything like that. Where would you run to?"

Little Yazoo was one of the last towns to be hit, but Creel, who had married his high school sweetheart on Friday and was spending his first night in a newly furnished house, had company and hadn't listened to the radio.

"IT HIT a 5:30 because I remember the clock broke," said Creel.

"We had just moved our new furniture in. We were in there hanging curtains. My brother-in-law, his wife and daughter were visiting. They were leaving, standing at the door kidding us about the first night in the house and all.

"My brother-in-law opened the door and we heard the noise. I threw my wife on the bed and fell on top of her. An inside wall fell on us. That little wall was the only thing that saved us."

The tornado that smashed everything in Little Yazoo roared down the middle of U.S. highway 49, splintering trees and wrapping the barren hulks with twisted pieces of metal.

Many of those hit hardest were poor and black, field workers whose winters in clapboard houses are hard in the best of times.

Johnna Mae Anderson was feeding her three-day old baby daughter when the tornado lifted the roof off her tiny rent house near Indianola.

"I grabbed both of the children and fell on top of them," she said. "I knew we were lucky. I think the Lord he spared us.

"My husband is working with the men at Inverness, but he ain't getting paid nothing. We ain't got no money. I just don't know what we are going to do."

From the air, Inverness looks like a giant garbage heap. The storm smashed some businesses and homes into piles of brick. Others exploded under the suction of the vortex, scattering shredded lumber into cotton fields nearby.

Ecuador Seizes 4 More U.S. Boats

PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-15
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Feb. 28, 1971

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — An Ecuadorian naval gunboat seized four American tuna boats Saturday, raising to 24 the number of U.S. fishing vessels Ecuador has seized off its coast in the past seven weeks.

A statement by the Navy said the boats were seized 38 miles off Ecuador's Pacific coast and escorted to the port of Salinas. It identified the four boats as the Concho, the United States, the Sun Europe and the Lois Sever.

(IN SAN DIEGO, Calif., the home port of the vessels, the Westgate Terminals, Inc., which owns the boats confirmed their capture. A statement said the boats were 70 miles off the Eucuadorian coast when seized.)

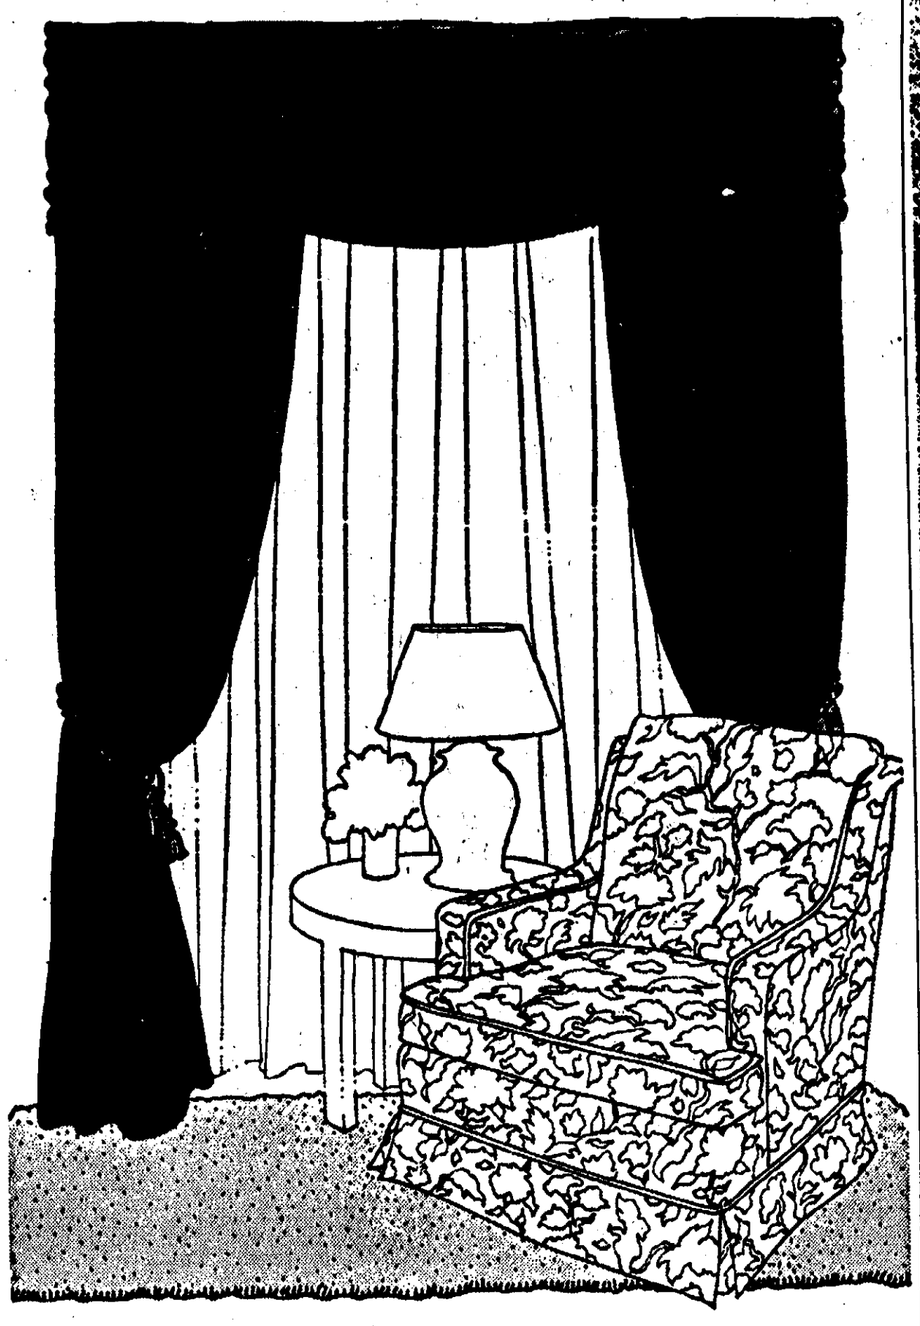

Ecuador claims offshore territorial rights extending 200 miles from its coastline, but the United States recognizes only a 12-mile limit for fishing. Ecuador has fined the 20 other American tuna boats seized since Jan. 11 a total of $951,750, a sum which the U.S. government reimbursed to the tuna boat owners.

In several earlier seizures of American tuna boats, there were reports that Ecuadorian gunboats and planes had fired at the vessels. There were no reports of shooting in the seizures Saturday.

A MONTH ago, the United States announced suspension of military assistance to Ecuador for one year because of its seizures of American vessels. Earlier this month, the issue was introduced at a meeting of foreign ministers of the Organization of American States, but they took no action and recommended instead that the United States and Ecuador work out the problem themselves.

Course Given on Jobs And How to Get Them

CHARLES W. NOAH
Starts Lecture Series

Jobs and what it takes to get them are the subject of two new courses now meeting on Wednesday nights at Wilson High School. "Vocational Guidance and Career Planning" and "Civil Service Preparation" offer vocational counseling and prepare students to apply for jobs and take competitive employment examinations.

"Unemployment and underemployment are serious problems," admitted vocational counselor Victor Backstrom, who teaches the career planning course. "But a thorough knowledge of the good jobs available and their requirements and aid a student in finding a place for himself in the job market."

In the nine-week course, Backstrom will help students analyze what they have to offer employers and what job opportunities exist for them. Aptitude tests and interest inventories are also offered in the course to help students understand their vocational strnegtsh and long-range job interests.

Civil service preparation is taught by Ralph Nees, training officer for the Long Beach Post Office. His success in preparing students for competitive job examinations is well known. In addition to taking tests, students will review basic English and mathematics skills in the course.

Both new classes are open to persons at least 18 years of age and may be taken for adult high school credit. Enrollment may be completed at the next meeting of the classes at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Lecture Series at LBCC

A lecture series on the Mediterranean will be presented by Long Beach City College.

Charles W. Noah will present "Lands and Peoples of the Mediterranean," an illustrated series, Tuesdays, starting this week in Boyd High School Auditorium, 235 East Eighth St. at 7:30 p.m. Noah has been a teacher and administrator in the Los Angeles City School District since 1948.

A world traveler and professional photographer, he has filmed, edited, and narrated seven TV programs for the Jack Douglas Organization. Three of the programs that he completed for the TV series "It's a Small World" are in national and international syndication.

JUST BUNTING

Queen Didn't Fly a Flag to Pier J

Yes, Virginia, it's true the good Queen Mary carried no U.S. flag on its trip from Pier E to Pier J, Saturday. And your eagle eyes did not deceive you — there also was no Union Jack.

But while your eyes were right, your sentiment was not.

You see, the great old ship is no longer considered a seagoing vessel, and therefore doesn't carry a flag of registration (unless of course you count the City of Long Beach banner that flew from the forepeak.)

However, the source of this information, an official spokesman for the QM, says you would have seen the U.S. flag raised at the dockside facilities next to the ship, had you been there.

Oh, and one more thing. That string of bunting from the bridge to the prow that you said contained "every other flag except the U.S. flag." was in fact officially known as "dressing." And the flags in the dressing were alphabet flags used in the international flag code.

No, Virginia. They spelled nothing. Simply a bunch of signal flags in jumbled order to provide some color, or dressing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your ability to persuade people to change their ways runs high; you can sell just about anything. Plan home improvements, get sketches, estimates.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get an early start. Living up to your better past performances is within reach and pays well now. Evening hours demand a change of atmosphere.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stay in good humor. Apply for positions, higher ratings, special advantages. Music and the arts deserve your participation or enjoyment tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do things in style today. You may relive some poignant past incidents, find strong feelings still alive. Take a break; be alert for a busy, talkative evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business matters move swiftly, with new ventures in sight. Equipment put into use now is favored for the long run. Discuss plans with partners.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be on top of the morning rush. Have everything all ready to go. Selling comes naturally now. Quit at your regular time or a little early, then relax.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bring contracts, agreements to final stages. A search for information brings surprising results. Review equipment, tools, supplies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In all serious business, today is the time to face an issue head on. Confront or make a deal with a competitor. Friends are out to make use of your skills.

SAGITARRIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends have good news, but don't let it distract you. Use your connections to bring your views to a wider audience, where it counts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 Jan. 19): Bring others into your day's program for diversity and improvement of resources. Clear off neglected chores; finish something you've started.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gather resources today. Group ventures tend to show progress. Settle scores, return favors. Expect pleasasant news this evening.

PISCIS (Feb. 19-March 20): Serious business can be eased past a snag with a light, almost casual approach. Associates are not inclined to cooperate closely.

Citizen Unit Wants to Quit Paramount Schools

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

A sizable number of citizens in the area immediately north of Long Beach, convinced that schools in their district have deteriorated, have taken steps to break away from the Paramount Unified School District and become part of the Long Beach Unifed School system.

A petition seeking the transfer of a one-square-mile parcel of land to the Long Beach Unifed School District has been turned over to Long Beach school officials, and a hearing on the matter has been set for March 15.

The petition, signed by 1,774 persons, contains signatures of 1,410 of the area's registered voters — or double the number required by law.

The petitioners, dismayed because the Paramount district hasn't been able to raise additional money through local taxes, feel the school system there "has gone downhill" and are anxious to join what they regard as a superior district.

Since 1966, Paramount district voters have defeated several tax overrrides and school bond issues in special elections. And the petitioners are convinced that, as a result, education has suffered and property values in the area have dropped.

School officials concede the district is in trouble, but insist the problem is nowhere near as critical as petitioners claim.

Dr. George Dibs, assistant superintendent of schools in Paramount, said class sizes in the district's elementary schools are comparable to those in Long Beach and that teachers in the district also compare favorably.

Dibs said school plant maintenance in the Paramount district isn't what officials would like it to be, and the district has had to discontinue school transportation for all but handicapped children. Nevertheless, he said, he's enthusiastic about the possibilities of improvement. He said the Paramount district recently began a new vocational education program, as well as a program for gifted children. Moreover, he added, double sessions in the district were eliminated this year.

Robert C. Clements, one of the leaders of the transfer movement, said residents in the area are willing to pay higher taxes if they can get better education for their children.

Their homes lie in a square-shaped parcel that includes parts of Long Beach, Lakewood and county territory. The county territory is partly industrial, but for the most part the square-mile parcel consists of modest dwellings owned by working persons and young professionals. The average home, said Clements, probably is worth $22,000.

The territory in question has 1,042 elementary and high school students living within its boundaries. It also has an elementary school.

The petitioners have underscored their request for a transfer with four arguments:

They claim the Paramount district offers minimal educational opportunities; they insist school safety has suffered as a result of reduced school maintenance; they say the value of their homes has gone down as the educational system has deteriorated, and they claim they lack a sense of identification with Paramount as a community.

Clements praised Long Beach school district voters for having passed the recent tax override, adding: "Long Beach exhibited the kind of spirit we want to be associated with. We want to be associated with a winner, not a loser."

School annexation procedures are normally complex, and the present case will be no exception, it appears. Petitioners not only seek to take the territory in question out of the Paramount Unified School District, but they also want it severed from the Compton Junior College District and attached to the Long Beach Community College District.

If the Board of Education, which governs both the Long Beach Unified School District and the Long Beach Community College District, agrees to the annexation, the petition will be transmitted to the County Committee on School District Organization. Thereafter — assuming the committee's approval — the petition will be turned over to the Board of Supervisors for a ruling.

Supervisors can approve the transfer, deny it or call for an annexation election.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

IT was a sight that magnificently rebuked sneering detractors when the great ship moved majestically across the harbor and eased into its final home berth.

Whatever the ultimate results of the cultural and commercial aspirations of the Queen Mary project, only an unseeing bigot would call the ship a "bucket of bolts" or a "rusty old tub," two of the favorites of the defamers.

To those who watched it come home Saturday morning, and to those who see it out there as the dominant feature of the view from our shore, it will always be a great and beautiful ship.

There it stands, aloof from the arguments, the political infighting, the intercommunity jealousies, the legislative polemics, and all the problems wrapped up in the practical aspects of the enterprise it inspired.

They may call it a building, but it's not really. As a ship—our ship—it is an incomparable symbol of man's conquest of the sea.

SATURDAY was a day of ideal weather for the Queen Mary shift as concerns sunshine and air movement, but it was chilly. The many people who, like me, went to the waterfront lightly dressed, got our shivering comeuppance.

One of the admirable exceptions among us was County Supervisor Burton Chace, who showed up not only in an overcoat but a cold country-style stocking cap.

Earl Fast, who bore a ribbon identifying him as a director of something, looked the supervisor over. "When the TV cameras swing this way, will you please take those off," he pleaded. "This is sunny Southern California, you know."

WE watched the berthing of the Queen from the elevated platform between the landing ramps. With the little tugs nosed against the side of the giant, it was a ticklish job, perfectly executed.

Up there I met Harry Fulton, one-time columinst colleague now on the city manager's staff, who told me about a dream he had the night before. It concerned the Spruce Goose, Howard Hughes' famed flying boat which is housed in the harbor near the Queen's former resting place.

"I dreamed," said Harry, "that they towed the Spruce Goose over here and tied it up, with all the snafu. It was a nightmare."

A LOT of people worried about the wind, and a fellow beside me remarked that it could get hold of the big ship, give it lateral momentum, and send it crashing into the very structure where we stood.

I didn't flinch, for I had the official word on wind.

Friday at the Armed Services benefit golf tourney I met Rear Adm. H. V. Bird, the Naval base commander. I asked him if the wind might disrupt the Mary move. "Not in the morning," said the seawise mariner, with finality that challenged dispute.

Thereupon he lifted a fine seven-iron shot to the 16th green, proving that he was proficient at everything. I knew it wouldn't blow.

ON the way home from the QM festities, I walked a little on Ocean Blvd., where people were looking across the roadstead to the newly-berthed ship.

A young girl fell into step with me. "It's beautiful! she exclaimed. What else can you say"

"Not much," I agreed, "I'll try to say it in 600 words."

Anything Goes at the Laundromat

By MOLLY BURRELL

"A funny thing happened at the laundromat the other day," Ivan Spangler is apt to say.

And he's usually right.

For the past decade, funny things have been happening at his Bellflower wash parlor at 9883 Alondra St. Enough funny things to keep him chuckling through the not-so-funny vandalism and standard hazards of a public service enterprise.

Like the morning he found the drunk curled up on the floor by the back drier.

"Come on, get out," Ivan told him when he finally nudged him awake. "Get out right now and I'll make it easy for you. Next time I'll call the cops," he warned.

The drunk zigzagged a few steps toward the door, turned and mumbled: "Thash'll be a pretty good idea," and staggered out into the street.

Another drunk, female, zonked him with a wet towel one Sunday afternoon after a dialogue over a couple of bed pillows.

"First she called me to lift them out of the washer, and when I told her she couldn't put them in the drier she told me to put them in the trash. Two minutes later she wanted them back from the trash so I pulled them out. Then, while I'm bent over fixing a washer she whaps me on the ear with the soggy towel and goes off on a laughing fit," he recalls.

Another dingy visitor systematically pulled out all 26 washers from the wall in his search for lost coins. Then he turned on the water and flooded the laundromat and shops on either side.

"But the wildest part was he came back and walked right up to me and said, 'I'll help you clean up — I don 'er,' " Ivan says.

Most problems involve phony money or old socks stuffed in the coin machines.

He has a collection of half-a-hundred slugs, washers, Mexican and Canadian coins with which visitors have tried to trip the coin dispenser.

One siege about two months ago left him with 14 pennies carefully pressed into brass washers which went through as quarters. "They took $3.50 from the machine, but those washers cost about 3 cents apiece, so he netted about $2.94, I figure," says Ivan.

Another chiseler stuffed a sock up the angle of the quarter machine and then pulled it out to release accumulated jammed coins

Deputies Deliver Goods

It took four minutes for two Lakewood sheriff's deputies to deliver an infant boy in Paramount Saturday.

Sgt. John Huntley and Dep. C. L. Farris received a call at 3:19 a.m. Two minutes later, they were at the home of Mrs. Mary Ellen Fisher, 26, 15811 Pitts Ave.

The woman was ready to give birth.

After four anxious minutes, the officers had delivered Ronald Scott Fisher, measuring 22 inches and weighing nine pounds, three ounces.

An ambulance arrived about five minutes after the birth and attended to the mother.

Deputies meanwhile, took the infant to Saint Francis Hospital in Lynwood where both mother and son were reported doing well Saturday night.

L.B. Woman, 100, Loses $2,000 Ring to Gypsies

By CHARLES CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

The Gypsy blessing, one of the world's oldest flim flams, cost a 100-year-old Long Beach woman her 75-year-old diamond ring, valued at $2,000, Sgt. Ralph W. Abraham and Bill R. Haynes, bunco detail, said Saturday.

The Long Beach "score" was a classic example of the old bunco scheme, they said.

The Gypsy woman, accompanied by a 10-year-old Gypsy girl, knocked at the front door of the victim's residence.

The woman's 73-year-old son answered the knock and the woman asked to see his mother.

When the two Gypsys entered the home, the older Gypsy started blessing the son by touching him about the head and face.

After completing the son's blessing, the elder gypsy then sat down on a chair next to the mother, seated on a couch.

She then started blessing the son's mother and asked him to get a glass of water.

When the man returned with the water, the Gypsy woman sprinkled water about the room muttering what seemed to be spirtual blessings.

She then asked the man to bring her money and she would bless it for him.

The son brought his wallet from his room and the Gypsy blessed the wallet and blew on the money and asked the man to do the same.

At the Gypsy's request, the man gave her $3 for the church and gave the girl, who had remained silent and standing, 50 cents.

Noticing the elderly woman's legs were slightly swollen, the older glib-tongued gypsy asked the son to get her some oil so she could annoint them.

When he returned with oil, the bunco artist told him it was the wrong kind and to return to the kitchen and get her olive oil.

As soon as the son left, the Gypsy woman removed the victim's ring saying she would bless it.

Instead, the intruder accompanied by the young girl, ran out the front door saying, "So long."

Although the son soon followed the two outside, there was no sight of them.

The victims described the older Gypsy as being 30 to 40 years of age, less than five-feet tall, weighing between 120 and 130 pounds, black hair and eyes, having a growth of mustache hair on her upper lip and wearing a blue pants suit.

The girl was described as having long stringy black hair, black eyes, about four-feet tall and weighing between 70 and 80 pounds.

2 Costa Mesa Teens Killed, Two Hurt in Car Collision

Two Costa Mesa teen-agers were killed and two others seriously injured early Saturday when their auto collided with a city car driven by a fire captain. Dead are:

—Edward L. Hernandez, 19, of 2183 National St.

—Helen C. Arbuckle, 14, of 2002 Maple St.

Highway Patrolmen said the car the victims were riding in crossed the center line of Placentia Avenue near Jo Ann Street and struck an auto driven by Capt. Ronny J. Coleman, 30, of 2700 Peterson St., Costa Mesa.

Coleman was returning from an apartment blaze in which a 74-year-old woman was burned to death, the CHP said. He was in fair condition at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital.

The driver of the other car, Paul R. Baldwin of Mira Loma, was in serious condition at Hoag Memorial Hospital. Another passenger, 17-year-old Paul Arbuckle of the Maple Street address, was in critical condition.

The CHP said the Baldwin auto was northbound on Placentia at high speed at the time of the accident.

Both cars veered off the road.

The accident is still under investigation.

Officers said Coleman was on his way home from a blaze at an 18-story apartment building at 666 W. 19th St., Costa Mesa.

Killed in the fire was Marie L. Rattey. Firemen believed she was smoking in bed.

The 11 p.m. fire was contained within the apartment, firemen said.

Sierra Club, Newporters Set Environment Walk

An "Environmental Walk" along the northern part of Newport Upper Back Bay, sponsored by the Friends of Newport Bay and the Orange County Group of the Sierra Club will be held March 13.

A highlight will be a display of fossil finds unearthed in the eastbluff area of the bay. Students from Fullerton Junior College and Corona del Mar High School will answer questions about the prehistoric porpoise skull, whale rib, bison teeth and other fossils.

Walks are scheduled to begin at 9 and 11 a.m. with students from area colleges acting as guides in discussing the estuary's history, plants, animal and bird life.

Health Officer Tells Council of Night-Clinic Hours, Aims

Night clinics in family planning, alcoholic rehabilitation and venereal disease are being held by the Health Department, and other night service will be given as needed, Dr. I. D. Litwack, city health officer, said Saturday.

His report was in response to a City Council inquiry last Tuesday about public health services provided by the Health Department during evening hours.

"It is significant to note," said City Manager John R. Mansell, "that the department is in the continual process of actively considering the possible extension of program service areas into the evening and night-time hours, based upon community demand."

After studying community needs for night public-health services, Dr. Litwack said, the Health Department established the following clinics:

Family Planning — each Monday and Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m.

Alcoholic Rehabilitation — each Monday through Thursday from 5 to 10 p.m.

Venereal Disease — each Tuesday from 5 to 8 p.m.

Dr. Litwack said a tuberculosis clinic was held from 6 to 8 p.m. for several months, but because of low attendance, it has been rescheduled to the second Thursday of each month from 3 to 5 p.m.

All services offered at the night clinics also are available during regular working hours at the Health Department, 2655 Pine Ave., Dr. Litwack pointed out. There are other clinics on child health, diabetic screening, glaucoma screening, immunization, pre-natal care, pre-school vision and hearing and x-ray, he said.

"The department continuously evaluates the demand for changes in the hours for public health services," Dr. Litwack said.

At last Tuesday's meeting, Councilman Paul R. Deats asked if the Health Department ever referred patients to the Long Beach Free Clinic.

Dr. Litwack said Friday that when the Health Department receives inquiries for treatment services in other than public health areas, it refers them to "other community resources, the Free Clinic being one of these resources."

In situations of acute minor illnesses — such as upper respiratory infections, sore throats and small cuts —either to children or adults who are unable to pay for private care, the department refers such people to the outpatient service of Harbor General Hospital, Dr. Litwack said.

If the patient is unable to get to the General Hospital, a referral may be made to the Free Clinic, Dr. Litwack said, but such referrals are "not too frequent."

Political science in practice

An unprincipled and imaginative public relations man in a Midwest city once used an amazing sales pitch to sign on a scavenger association as a $20,000-a-year client.

He persuaded the outfit that the key to success in holding onto the lucrative private garbage collecting business was in keeping the business secret. Hire him, he promised, and all news of scavengers would be kept out of the public prints and off television.

For two years, everybody was happy. Then the mayor said something unkind about scavengers and they were all over the front page.

THE SCAVENGERS went to the PR man, who shrugged his shoulders and lost his client.

If that publicity man ever comes to California, he might try signing on college professors and students at a million dollars a year to keep college news out of the papers. There are days when the fee would sound like a bargain. But neither they nor he would be that naive. The job would be over the day he got it.

Colleges are news, and the best they can do is try to be good news as often as possible.

In Long Beach, our state college has managed to be good news far more often than not. Its clippings in our newspaper library fill most of a filing cabinet drawer—and the riot and miscellaneous dissent files take up less than two inches of that space.

As a result, the community and the college are friendly to each other. "People don't even hassle me about my long hair anymore," one student leader said to us the other day.

There are other evidences of good will, of which the latest and most notable is a program in which students will serve as nonvoting members of city commissions.

OUR HUNCH is that they will turn out to be knowledgeable, conscientious, bright commissioners who will have an impact on city government. They will have the interest, the time and the resources of the college to help them help the city solve its problems.

The students will learn from the process, of course. They'll also bring to their college the friendship of civic leaders, who will join them in seminar sessions that will review subjects ranging from welfare to government structure to "political psychology in the local milieu."

By the end of the experience, we expect that our library will be starting on its second file drawer for Long Beach State. And we imagine the proportion of good news will be even higher than it is now.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Grandmas don't lie

EDITOR:

In his Sunday Feb. 7 column Mr. Bemis wrote about his Iowa grandmother's frightening experience with an Indian who later proved to be a good sort after all.

I think it should be of interest to Mr. Bemis that I heard that story in 1914 from my grandmother, only she was the fleet young heroine and the action occured in Minnesota on the banks of the Cedar River several miles above the Iowa line.

I suspect my grandmother Morgan of being less than saintly in handling truth, so I must suspect grandmother Bemis. Of course it is possible the Indian had a wide territory in which he specialized in frightening people for dramatic impact for his good deeds of a century ago.

It would be comforting if I could tell my California grandchildren a believable fable telling this territory. Maybe it is impossible.

Neither Bemis nor I are likely to be racially bigoted; not such grandmothers. I am not so sure of my own children. Bemis is a skilled story teller. I wish he would try for a California Indian yarn that would suit all our grandchildren.

Long Beach WILLIAM E. CRANE

(Ed. Note: Writer Bemis says the Indian who chased his grandmother in Mahaska County, Iowa, was perfectly capable of trotting up to Minnesota to chase reader Crane's grandmother.)

Our interpretation of the letters PIG as applied to police officers would be Protection, Integrity, Gallantry.

Reagan ignores legislators in planning welfare reform

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Being governor of a state the size of California is a difficult, demanding job.

The mystery is why Ronald Reagan persists in making the job even more difficult and demanding than it already is.

The immediate case in point is the governor's promised program to reform welfare and Medi-Cal. His 1971-72 budget was deliberately underfunded by some $700 million, but, he said, it would balance if legislative reforms he intended to lay before the legislature were adopted.

THE PROPOSED reforms were to be based on recommendations submitted by two of the governor's blue ribbon task forces assigned to look into the problem.

On Feb. 16 the governor confirmed that at least one of the task force reports had been on his desk for more than two months. And the problem, of course, has occupied the attention of the governor and his large staff for more than four years.

Now, apparently, his program is firmly enough put together that he can get soundings on it from Elliott Richardson, secretary of the federal Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and from a U.S. Senate committee.

He has been discussing the proposals with federal officials in Washington, and had requested permission to disclose them at a joint session of the California Legislature next Wednesday.

And that is how the governor is making his difficult job even more difficult.

The legislature has been dealing with the problems of welfare for a considerably longer time than Gov. Reagan. Those members who have been involved with attempts to find solutions have acquired knowledge which the governor would, it figures, find useful.

The governmental jargon for what legislators such as Gordon Duffy, for years the chairman of the Assembly Health and Welfare Committee, have to offer is "input."

But Duffy was not asked by the governor for his "input." Nor was any other legislator.

LAST WEEK Duffy, a Republican from Kings County, said drily that he'd been promised a briefing on the governor's plan this week.

It is, after all, the legislature which must approve of the governor's reform proposal.

Certainly a chief executive is within his prerogative in unilaterally formulating a proposal and submitting it to the legislative branch. But logic, if not courtesy, would seem to dictate the wisdom of having some friendly legislators pave the way, particularly in the sensitive area of public assistance.

Another politician who apparently wants to do things the hard way is James R. Mills, D-San Diego, the president pro tem of the Senate.

He has blocked the governor's request to lay out his welfare proposals before a joint legislative session because the proposals, apparently, are going to be general rather than specific.

IT PROBABLY IS correct that the governor wanted to use the legislature as a prop for one of his celebrated TV pitches, and there is no particular value to the legislature in simply being another segment of the viewing public.

But the governor will probably take the tube anyway to do with Californians generally what he has declined to do with the legislature — create a hospitable climate for his proposals.

All Mills has done is make himself look petulant. He will have to work harder to make his case than he might have had to. Maybe politicians prefer it that way.

Ecology for the tube in COOTRAPP

THE NATIONAL MEMORY Commission is not yet constitutional. It will be Amendment XXXI when ratified. It needs fleshing out. The raw language says merely that the commission's functions "shall be wholly negative — to slow down the progress of progress."

BOB HOUSER

The commission will be divided into two autonomous councils: the history preservers and the nature preservers.

Amendment XXXIV is deadly simple: "Until the Bureau of Labor Statistics shall certify that the number of citizens with incomes below the health and decency level is less than one per cent of the population, it shall be forbidden to spend any governmental revenue in the transportation of any matter, animate or inanimate, more than 500 miles above the surface of the United States of America."

These are two of 10 new constitutional amendments recently proposed by political commentator Dwight Macdonald in Esquire Magazine.

These notes are from the fanciful file, put there to age and be checked at a later hour in our history. It seems an apt time to exercise some of them now because nothing else is working anyway.

You may recall a previous note about presidential selection in which the entire electorate's whims, likes and dislikes are fed into a computer on election day and the computer contemplates the whole load and spits out the name of the next president.

MICHAEL HULL suggests a twist on that theme, including the purest definition of "one-man, one-vote." Hull says writer Philip K. Dick framed the case. Computers select America's one typical man every four years. Then the one man casts the sole and irrevocable vote for president. Sure, it would save money but picture, if you will, the sole, irrevocable female standing there on election day fuming in her Lib juice.

You don't get very far on this plastic man trip without confronting the sole and irrevocable Sam Whitman who, I suspect, has a hunchback, foot-dragging Igor chained to his typewriter, jamming the works with wolfbane, amulets and silver bullets.

COOTRAPP IS SAM'S Committee Organized to Outlaw Television and Radio for Any Political Purpose.

Reduced to the bare, Sam seems to think if the public will buy a guy with blue deodorant in a motorboat in your toilet tank it can be persuaded to buy a president packaged more subtly.

Better COOTRAPP should be a household word than Spiro Agnew, Sam believes. And he thinks the appeal is bipartisan. Republicans got their man in as president through TV (The Selling of the President) and Democrats may well take the cue next time. So COOTRAPP should appeal to the GOP too.

Igor — or Sam — submits a model confidential memo from Smith, Osborne and Smythe, political consultants, signed by Rover Crover Scrover.

THE PARTY'S candidate is Llewellyn K. Llewellyn. But he's no shakes on the Tube. So we get Joe K. Doe, a dead but livelier ringer for LKL. Expert makeup makes him look like LKL. If the police flags, we can lip-synch Gregory Peck's voice — Glenn Campbell?

Dramatic background scenes accompany the campaign pitches of Joe, Greg, Glenn — maybe even replicas of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria sailing away from a blue-water ballcock.

And there goes your election — down the drain.

Nixon resolves to ease Hoover out as FBI director

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There is grave concern at the White House over some of the more recent controversies involving FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover, and an effort will be made to replace him prior to next year's election campaign.

From the time President Nixon took office, a large number of White House liberals have complained privately about the need for replacing the aging director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Initially, that agitation was useless because President Nixon, a long-time Hoover admirer, didn't want to alienate the overwhelming number of voters who would have found such a move symbolic of a yielding to liberal pressures.

But in recent weeks, several new controversies have changed the minds of some of Hoover's most ardent defenders in the White House. Some moderates and conservatives are now expressing the view that the 76-year-old Hoover must be replaced before the 1972 campaign gets under way.

IT IS ARGUED that Hoover's record could be damaged seriously by any further incidents indicating Hoover has become more arbitrary in his decisions, or less capable of controlling the actions of his top aides.

The comments by Hoover on the Berrigan case represented a problem for President Nixon and also for Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. By his handling of this matter, Mitchell left the definite impression that he hopes there will be no repetition.

Hoover created a furor last November when he disclosed what he said was a plot to kidnap Nixon's chief foreign policy advisor, Henry Kissinger.

The charges, made in testimony by Hoover before a Senate appropriations subcommittee, came while a grand jury was still investigating the alleged incident.

Philip and Daniel Berrigan, two Roman Catholic priests, and four others weren't arraigned on the formal criminal kidnap charges until nearly four months after Hoover's testimony.

THE WHITE HOUSE has concluded that, for the benefit of Nixon's political image in 1972 and for the long-time value of the Hoover image, a way must be found to force the issue on the resignation. The President has said this must be arranged so as to accord Hoover full honors for his contribution and to give the least satisfaction to Hoover's critics.

Perhaps the strongest thing going for Hoover at the present time is the identity of his major critics—Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and George McGovern. The White House knows both would probably be more critical of any new FBI director and are now somewhat restrained because Hoover is such a legend in law enforcement.

Also, Nixon doesn't want to be in a position of appearing to bow to criticism from two Democrats who are likely to be vying for the chance to oppose him for the presidency in 1972.

However, the President is concerned not only about the comments by Hoover on outside investigations but also with the handling of some internal personnel problems in the FBI itself.

THE FORCED RESIGNATION "with prejudice" of Special Agent John M. Shaw Sr. has been viewed by Kennedy and McGovern as additional evidence of Hoover's increasingly "arbitrary actions" within the FBI.

Shaw, 37, of Hillsdale, N. J., a former Marine captain, had an unblemished record of seven years with the FBI when he was forced to resign last September. The cause of the forced resignation apparently was a letter written by Shaw to his college instructor, Prof. Abraham S. Blumberg of the John Clay College of Criminal Justice in New York.

In the letter, which was seeking advice from Blumberg on a possible thesis for Shaw's work toward a master's degree, the FBI agent was critical on some points of Hoover and the FBI.

However, in the letter, Shaw also defended his agency and Hoover against classroom criticism by Blumberg.

Hoover accused Shaw of "atrocious judgment" in criticizing the FBI and not reporting Blumberg's criticism. Initially, Shaw was suspended without pay for 30 days, put on probation and transferred to Butte, Mont., which is considered a purgatory for agents who have incurred Hoover's displeasure.

RATHER THAN BE transferred, Shaw resigned and Hoover has continued to carry a "with prejudice" ranking on the resignation. This has effectively nullified Shaw's chances for other employment in the law enforcement field.

Kennedy and McGovern have indicated they may hold a public hearing on the Shaw resignation before the Senate judiciary subcommittee on administrative practices, headed by Kennedy.

Such a hearing, at which Shaw would testify, would open Hoover to another round of Senate criticism, Nixon fears. The FBI's argument that a strict type of discipline is needed isn't likely to generate as much news coverage as are Shaw's statements.

This is especially true since Shaw never actually mailed the letter to Blumberg. Shaw had turned a draft of his letter over to the typing pool at the New York FBI office for final typing.

After Shaw's superiors heard of the letter, the FBI office was turned upside down in a search for the carbons of the letter. Actually, Shaw's case hinges on material found in only eight of the 15 pages in the letter. The agents couldn't find the other seven carbons in the wastebasket search.

ADDING BOTH TO THE outside criticism concerning 'arbitary action" by Hoover and to an internal uneasiness at the agency is the removal of an assistant director of the FBI from the list of those officials permitted to make outside speeches.

Although the action is deemed temporary, there is concern about the efforts to curb comments by a man who has given much devotion and judgment to law enforcement over a long period of time.

These problems within the FBI have convinced Nixon and Atty. Gen. Mitchell that, over a period of the next year, Hoover must be persuaded to leave.

The independence Hoover has exhibited over the years has been his strength, and the strength of the FBI. But there are circumstances under which the independence also has been a weakness.

Richard Nixon doesn't want to take the chance that evidence of this weakness will show up in his 1972 campaign.

College for the mature

By S. I. HAYAKAWA

The great virtue of the latest report of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, "Less Time, More Options: Education Beyond the High School" (McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1971), is that it shows a deep understanding of where the problems of our colleges and universities lie.

They lie not only in irresponsible students and professors, weak administrations and reactionary boards of regents, although these often bring the problems to public attention. They lie in certain assumptions about higher education which too many of us take for granted — and which shape the structure and functions of higher education.

The commission's report challenges the assumption that higher education is basically for young people. Many young people, the report suggests, simply are not mature enough for college. It recommends that students be offered the option at the end of high school of taking time out for two or three years to work, to become acquainted with the world outside of school and to grow up mentally and emotionally.

AND BECAUSE education should be aimed at grown-ups, "Opportunities for higher education . . . should be available to persons throughout their lifetime and not just immediately after high school . . . More educational, and thus career, opportunities should be available to all who wish to study part-time or return to study later in life."

It is necessary to make higher education "more available to more people, including women, employed persons, older people, and people from the lower income levels." There should be "more short-term programs leading to certificates and generally more stress on lifelong learning."

"Higher education," says the report, "is now prejudiced against older students. They should be welcomed instead. Too often they are looked on as inferior."

This prejudice is built into the system in California, as in many other states. Teachers in adult and extension programs are paid at a shockingly lower rate than those in the regular degree program. Extension courses are usually given limited credit or no credit at all towards a degree. The professorial status system is so arranged that neither promotion nor tenure can be earned by teaching extension courses. The evening class or extension teacher, often moonlighting from a steady job elsewhere, is the stepchild of the academic profession.

"Yet," continues the report, "older students will help end the in loco parentis atmosphere of many campuses, add maturity to discussions, and make a more balanced community out of the college." To this I can only say, "Amen!"

Starting at Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago and later at the University of Chicago and San Francisco State, I have always sought adult and evening classes as part of my teaching assignment. Looking back over 30 years of teaching, I find that I remember many more of my adult students, from 25 to 55 years old, than of my younger, "college age" students, who are often too unformed in character and mind to stand out as individuals.

I REMEMBER in my classes firemen, police officers, executives, nurses, teachers, society women, retired military — many of whom bring to the classroom surprising amounts of experience and background, like the student who politely contradicted a statement of mine in class by saying, "I happen to know differently, sir. I was a member of General MacArthur's staff during the Occupation."

Lockheed engine costs harmed Rolls-Royce

By LARRY A. COLLINS, Sr.

The bankruptcy of what was Britain's best known and world respected manufacturer is tragic. It is as though General Motors or U.S. Steel had failed in this country. It is also an example of the dangerous trend of many companies spreading out into other major operations after being successful in one. The Rolls-Royce automobiles were for generations the example of luxury and prestige throughout the world. How the company came to be bankrupt is vividly told in a New York Times story which says:

On March 30, 1968, British newspapers headlined the story of the country's greatest export sale in history: A contract won by Rolls-Royce to supply a new engine, the RB211, for the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.'s new Tri-star jet. The initial order was for 540 engines — and there could be hundreds more — with sales worth perhaps $2.5-billion.

David Huddie, the Rolls engineer who won the order, was knighted, and the whole affair was hailed as proof that Britain could still hold her own alone in the toughest league. The Daily Express, in its best jingo manner, wrote: "The triumph of Rolls-Royce is a marvelous tribute to our outstanding British design and manufacture. . .

THAT DREAM came to a shattering end. Rolls-Royce, the maker of fine automobiles as well as jet engines, and a symbol of perfection and solidity in British engineering, went into bankruptcy. And the reason was the Lockheed contract.

As pictured by official sources in London, almost everything imaginable was wrong with the deal to make the RB211 engine. Technology, time, money: Every forecast was off.

The contract estimate was based on a new Rolls-Royce process for making turbine blades from pressed carbon. Those blades turned out to shatter too easily, as when a bird was sucked into the jet, so Rolls had to shift to more expensive titanium. But that was only a small part of the disaster.

Production-line engines were promised to Lockheed by the fall of this year, but not one has yet come off the line that meets the contract's specifications. Delivery could not start until at least six to 12 months after the due date. Contractual penalties for the delay might reach $700 million.

THE LAUNCHING cost was supposed to be $156 million, and the British government put that up. Last November, that estimate was more than doubled, to $324 million. And that turned out to be $200 million short.

Meanwhile, inflation overtook the production cost. The price fixed for each of those 540 engines in the Lockheed contract was $840,000; the cost estimate rose to $1,104,000, a loss of $264,000 on every one.

Last week, it was up to Prime Minister Edward Heath and his government. They said no. It was a death sentence that was instantly executed.

The government moved in to rescue what it thought had to be saved: Rolls' production of spare parts and engines for the hundreds of planes and military machines operating on Rolls equipment all over the world. Reluctantly, as Tories, they announced they would nationalize those Rolls activities. The rest, including Rolls-Royce automobiles and the RB211, was up to the receiver.

House liberals may be led by Californian

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic Study Group (DSG), after more than a decade, has become respectable. In fact, some of its members say it has become almost Establishment. So for the first time since 1960 it is about to have a contested election.

Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., says he wants to be chairman, and will campaign for the job. The DSG nominating committee meantime is about to name Rep. James C. Corman, D-Calif., as an "escalator" candidate for the chairman's position.

By all accounts the DSG has come a long way — from an informal organization of frustrated, powerless liberals to one of the most potent single blocs (when it manages in fact to pull its members together) in the House.

IT SPRANG FROM liberal gripe sessions held in the office of former Sen. (and before that Rep.) Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota. The problem then — and sometimes now — was that although the House was Democratic on the record it often voted Republican.

The solution, the liberals figured, was organization, research, education, publicity and discipline. In September 1959 they founded the DSG with a handful of members, to whom the House leadership paid only scornful attention.

In the summer of 1960 they got around to electing a chairman, choosing between Reps. Chet Holifield and James Roosevelt, both Californians like the current contenders. Holifield won, 36 to 18.

Whoever wins, Corman and Burton will be splitting about 128 votes between them — a measure of the DSG's growth in paid membership. But the fact that they are contesting at all may be a better indicator of the DSG's new muscle and status.

In the intervening years DSG chairmen usually had to be persuaded to take on the chore and to some extent the onus of heading up a group the House leadership tended to consider impractical dreamers.

SOME OF THE party regulars still sneer at the DSG. But not openly. It has learned, first, to count, and second, to do its homework. It has a paid staff that by general admission turns out the best research available on major House issues.

From time to time, its whip system functions. And it wins, overpowering the continuing combination of Republican and conservative Democratic votes that, left to its own devices, generally ends up in control of the House.

Over the years, the DSG has won some, lost more, and as often as not splintered itself into futility. Its first big victories were on civil rights. Lately it has racked up significant wins on school aid, antisecrecy rules, and reform of the House seniority system. Among its current interests are defense cuts, consumer protection and the SST.

The current House leadership team doesn't exactly jump when DSG says frog. But it won't be taking major actions without inquiring at least where the DSG stands. And when the going gets tough it may find itself relying on the DSG to get out the vote.

Being chairman of the DSG has always meant something. Now, though, everybody knows it.

A drama of General Pershing and me

When "Patton" received 10 Academy Award nominations it reminded me that I once was very close to John Joseph Pershing, honored by the Senate in 1919 as General of the Armies of the United States.

It was at a time when it was still considered OK to win a war. In fact Pershing was on a long list of victorious generals considered for the presidency. Washington, Jackson, Grant and Eisenhower are perhaps the most illustrious soldiers who made it all the way to the White House. The country might have done worse than elect Pershing president in 1920. Some say it did. It chose Warren G. Harding and by the time the citizens woke up to what was going on he was gone. After that Silent Cal Coolidge was president and nothing was going on.

A LOT OF Americans have forgotten the Pershing legend. It began when he was 26, campaigning against the Apache in New Mexico and Arizona. Then he led a detachment of Sioux Scouts against their brothers. He was with the 10th Cavalry in Cuba in 1898, fought the fanatical Moros in the Philippines in 1902-03 and again in 1913 in a bloody assault that decimated the dark warriors. After that he was known as Black Jack.

As military attache assigned to Tokyo in 1905 he followed the Japanese army into the field in Manchuria. It was his thankless task to chase Pancho Villa in Mexico. That was the one comic relief in the long military drama that led John J. Pershing at last to the triumphant spotlight of victory as commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Force in World War I.

Although a tragedy brought me into the Pershing family picture my role was slapstick. It began one day when I was a scrawny lad meandering around the south part of town with

STERLING BEMIS

Ed Denton. Suddenly he clutched my sleeve and said in a stage whisper you could have heard in Kalamazoo: "Hey, see that kid."

ALL I SAW was a tow-head playing on the lawn.

"That," Ed Denton went on, "is General Pershing's son."

"Naw," I said. "Can't be."

"Why not?"

"Would General Pershing's son be playing with a teddy-bear?"

"What would you expect," Ed asked, "a machine-gun?"

When I got home I asked my mother if General Pershing's son actually lived in my home town. She explained he had come to live with his aunt after a fire at the Presidio in San Francisco had taken the lives of his mother and three sisters. The general himself was a former resident, having taught military science at the university.

Later Warren Pershing and I were in the same gym class at the Y and every day after class he blushed in the shower. The reason he blushed was that his aunt always showed up to drive him home. She invariably stood at the top of the stairs and shrilled in a cultivated soprano:

"Is General Pershing's son down there?"

The fourth time she did this I couldn't stand it any more. I piped back: "There's a Warren Pershing down here. Come on down and I'll introduce you."

Warren said: "Aw-w-w."

I think that was the last thing he said to me.

ON A BRIGHT Saturday morning in the spring of 1920 I marched down 13th Street after a Boy Scout meeting and stopped to reconnoiter the window of what had been an empty store. It now had a sign:

PERSHING FOR PRESIDENT

A Republican-looking man inside noticed me. The reason he noticed me was that my uniform consisted of blue knickers, a khaki blouse and a hat like the one the general wore when he was chasing Villa. The man coaxed me inside and sat me down behind a desk, which had the advantage of hiding my knickers. For an hour or so I handed out Pershing campaign literature. This may have been the real reason the general's boom never got off the ground.

All conquering heroes eventually come back to their home towns. (The general would have had a home town in Missouri except that he was born in Linn County, which wasn't much of a town.)

At last he arrived in Lincoln. There was a grand parade, led by the Pershing Rifles from the university. A night or so later the general appeared at the Liberty Theater and made a modest speech about how the doughboys never let him down on the battlefields of France and ending with a salute to "You folks at home who did your part, too." Then the audience cheered itself and lined up to shake hands with the second-best hero of the war. (No. 1 was Sgt. Alvin York.)

I joined the line.

AT THIS TIME General Pershing was still picking up medals here and there. His list included:

D.S.M. (U.S.), Grand Cross Order of the Bath (Britain), Grand Cross Legion of Honor, Croix de Guerre and Medaille Militaire (France), Grand Cordon Order of the Paulawnia (Japan), Grand Cordon Order of Leopold and Croix de Guerre (Belgian), Great Cross Order of White Lion (Czechoslovakia).

Also Order Saint Savoir (Greece), Grand Cross Order of St. Maurizio e Lazzaro and Military Order of Savoy (Italy), Grand Cordon of Prince Danilo I and Obilitch Medal (Montenegro), Medal of La Solaridad (Panama), Virtuti Militari and Polonia Restituta (Poland).

Also Grand Cordon Order of the Precious Light of Chia Ho (China), Grand Cordon Order of the Star of Kara-Georges (Serbia), Order of Mihai Bravul (Rumania).

And others.

Then he shook hands with me. I called him General. He called me Hello. As I said in the beginning I was very close to him. Once.

But even this association wasn't the end of it. In the Second World War the really big one, I went to Cheyenne for basic training. The fort was named for Sen. Francis E. Warren, the father of Helen Pershing, who was the mother of Warren Pershing, who was the nephew of his aunt. The one who used to holler down the stairs at the Y:

"Is General Pershing's son down there?"

You can see how the Pershing family history wouldn't be complete without me.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL PROGRAM

Pupils Toil to Learn Trade

By RALPH McCLURG

Students at Paramount Senior High School who are involved in PAVE are not working on a street job, and other seniors working in the school's PAVECO Corp. are not toiling for a company that would be listed on the stock exchange.

PAVE and PAVECO are part of the school's Practical Arts and Vocational Education program designed to build practical, salable skills into the curriculum. It is a federally funded program that encourages school districts to offer job preparation instead of just a few vocational courses.

The federal money is allocated to help pay for equipment, supplies and, in some cases, specialized teachers needed to operate such a program.

One of the new PAVE programs started during the current semester has an enrollment of 18 junior girls who are being taught medical skills. They get actual experience using these skills at Kaiser Hospital in Bellflower and Bird Haven Convalescent Home in Paramount.

The new course offers an opportunity for any student interested in the medical field, even if she palns on further education, because there is an opportunity to "try for size" a number of different hospital occupations and observe others that may be of interest.

During the first six weeks of training, the girls will receive classroom instruction from a public health nurse. The second six weeks will be spent at Kaiser Hospital, and during the final period they will put their new skills to work at Bird Haven Convalescent Home.

In addition to the medical assistance program, Paramount High has three other PAVE programs oprating. The district expects to add several more to keep in accord with its five-year master plan for improving vocational education.

Currently a class is preparing 27 seniors for entry level jobs as Class A mechanics. All have completed a basic course in auto mechanics. The PAVE shop offers in-depth experience in engine tuneup, carburetion, starting and charging systems, brakes and smog control devices.

George Trasky, advanced auto mechanics instructor, said the biggest problem is the lack of space and instructors. Only a fraction of the boys who are eligible and would like to take the course are able to do so, he said.

PAVECO is a business operated under the direction of Ray Rabinek, instructor for the vocational office training program. The employes — all seniors — make application for employment and are assigned to tasks in the office fields.

PAVECO is a service company and handles typing and duplicating jobs for teachers, campus organizations and other groups affiliated with the school district.

Each student changes jobs quarterly and gets on-the-job training in at least three different positions. The company has file clerks and typists and duplicating, payroll and bookkeeping departments.

The chief clerk keeps the work flow moving and supervises production. All basic business functions are performed by the students who are "paid" each week with nonnegotiable checks made out by the instructor.

The PAVE programs provide two-hour classes instead of the ordinary single period per day, and are backed up by advisory committees from the community. The advisory committees are made up of people in business and industry in the specific fields that the PAVE program teaches.

Unit to Aid Aerospace Jobless

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Eleven unemployed engineering administrators will go back to work next month on the payroll of Action International, a Long Beach self-help group organized to utilize aerospace industry talents in other fields.

Their primary task under initial funding by the California Department of Human Resources Development will be to generate more jobs for scientists and highly skilled technicians who have been displaced by cutbacks in the national space program.

"The programs we are working on should put 60 to 80 qualified people to work in the next six months," said Dr. Allen Dickenson, a former Apollo program rocket engineer who directs Action International from a small office behind a dental clinic at 832 Atlantic Ave.

All of the jobs will involve new applications of the management expertise and technology developed in the successful 10-year effort to land astronauts on the moon, Dr. Dickerson explained.

"We have an enormous pool of talent immediately available through Experience Unlimited, the professional section of the California Employment Office," he pointed out. "We can provide experts in any field on a moment's notice."

Services of Action International will be offered in two general programs starting Monday, Dr. Dickenson said. Under the state funding program, five employes will contact business firms to outline computerized methods of increasing efficiency and the development of new solutions to industrial problems.

Later in the month, six more AI employes will begin the engineering and research required to implement a proposed international disaster relief task force. Funding for this program is expected from the U.S. State Department initially, with additional financing later in the year from the United Nations.

Emphasis will be on the local business service program because of the larger potential for creating jobs, Dr. Dickenson said. For this effort, AI has the cooperation of the giant research computer system operated by the National Aernautics and Space Administration.

The Long Beach group will use the Western Research Application Center (WESRAC) terminal at the University of Southern California for analysis of industry needs and administrative procedures. Since the computer storage bank is supported by industry and government on a nonprofit basis, there will be no charge to AI or its clients.

Under the business assistance program, AI also is pursuing a variety of novel solutions to business and industry problems, including some which would create new products.

Among these projects are a seismic burglar alarm which would detect footsteps within 100 feet of the sensor, an improved method of loading and servicing airliners and a heat exchange system for electric and gas home water heaters to lessen peak demands on public utilities.

Preliminary studies have been made on all three projects and AI is negotiating with a bank and a commercial airline on the first two.

The disaster relief program, suggested by Action International shortly after the organization was formed last November, would employ upward of 500 persons if implemented.

The United Nations has asked for the proposal for funding consideration in July. It is scheduled to be forwarded to Vernard Kofsky, special assistant to the U.N. Commissioner for Technical Cooperation.

'No Parking' Zone Set Along PCH

Additional "no parking" zones will be created along the median island separating Pacific Coast Highway and the service road at Park Avenue.

City Manager John R. Mansell said a study by the city traffic engineer has revealed cars parking on both sides of the median obstruct the view of drivers entering the highway from Park Avenue.

The matter came up during a recent hearing in connection with establishing a fashion merchandising and career school for women at 4825 E. Pacific Coast Hwy.

J. A. Kirkbride, 1570 Park Ave., one of the witnesses, brought up the matter of inadequate visibility. Kirkbride also suggested stop signs be erected, but the traffic engineer said the intersection has sufficient stop signs, as well as pavement markings.

Water Board Disregards Polluter's Cleanup Costs

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

There should be no thought of financial benefits when it comes to deciding how pure Orange County's water should be, in the opinion of Langdon W. Owens, manager of the Orange County Water District.

He prepared a lengthy report for the Santa Ana Regional Water Quality Control Board, considering more stringent standards for the flow in the Santa Ana River.

Owens bolstered his testimony at a recent hearing in Costa Mesa with the report attacking water interests in the inland counties of San Bernardino and Riverside "for introducing economics."

They sought to show that if the board tightened requirements for water quality they discharge into the river, it would work an economic hardship on them.

Owens held this point is something which the water quality board cannot consider.

"The Legislature did not vest the regional board with the authority to determine equity between discharger upstream and the user of the receiving waters downstream,' he insisted.

"Nor did the Legislature grant the regional board the discretion of weighing the economics of complying with its requirements, which the board is obligated to establish . . ."

The law requires a discharger to clean up its waste, or stand the costs if abated by any governmental agency, Owens reminded.

"The basic objective of the water quality control board is to protect the quality of state waters, and the concern of regional boards . . . is limited to . . . the quality of the discharge."

The counties, cities and districts in the upper reaches of the Santa Ana River watershed discharge treated water from their sewage treatment plants. The flow eventually reaches Orange County, where it is filtered underground to be reused.

Users in the inland counties contended that, even if they were required to better treat their flow and so produce water of improved quality, it would be "diluted" by inflow from streams in the Santa Ana Mountains near Prado Dam. Much of this natural flow is heavy in minerals.

Owens conceded this is a problem, but said "until a solution to such natural degradation is obtained, the regional water quality board must continue to set waste discharge standards recognizing the downstream beneficial uses to be protected."

Under board consideration is an order to upgrade flow as measured at Prado Dam; this would mean better water reclamation and treatment methods by upstream users.

CHARLES DAVIES REBUILDS HIS BUGATTI—AFTER "RETURN" TO LIFE

'Clinically Dead' Engineer Springs Back to Active Life

By JOHN LUNGREN JR.
Staff Writer

Can a 63-year-old retired engineer run a mile every day and rebuild a Bugatti five years after being "clinically" dead?

Charles Davies of Long Beach can, thanks to the cardiologists.

In early November, 1966, Davies, a project engineer working on the DC-9 at McDonnell-Douglas, began feeling mild chest pains and complained of indigestion.

HIS physician could not detect anything abnormal in Davies' electrocardiogram but placed him in Lakewood General Hospital for observation.

Davies had just finished his late afternoon meal when the massive heart attack struck. A nurse walked in to pick up his dinner tray and saw him lying lifeless — no breath, no pulse, his face blue.

She sounded the code blue emergency signal throughout the hospital. A cardiologist dictating case reports, heard it and ran into the patient's room.

He immediately started mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, closed-chest heart massage and then returned the heart to a normal rhythm by an electric shock (defibrillation).

THE DOCTOR'S swift response saved Davies from "biological" death.

"Mr. Davies was clinically dead — all his vital signs were negative — and unless his heart could resume replenishing the oxygen supply in four to six minutes his brain cells would die and biological death was certain," the cardiologist explained.

He regained consciousness in about 15 minutes, and recalls; "I remember coming to and feeling pretty good." His recovery from the attack has been just as sanguine.

He was placed in intensive care for two weeks and then with the help of his physician and the cardiologist he began a rehabilitation program that repaired the damaged heart muscle and enabled him to remain active.

AT MEMORIAL Hospital he entered the Cardiac Rehabilitation Program under the direction of internist-cardiologist Normand Bessette, M.D.

He attended one-hour classes three days a week for three months, and was taught exercises that promote a safe pulse rate, decreasing the heart's work load during a full day.

He did calisthenics to warm up and then exercised on the treadmill and stationary bicycle.

This improved effort tolerance is carefully monitored by cardiograms which measure the pressure against which the heart pumps times the heart rate. This provides an index which guides the physician and the patient in just how much he should exercise.

DR. BESSETTE said that 85 per cent of cardiac patients who have entered and completed the program have achieved "beneficial cardiovascular and cardiopulmonary changes."

Davies confirms this: "I can say that I feel better than I did before my heart attack. I exercise regularly—jogging and walking a mile, five times a week. In fact I even went back to work for a year before I retired."

Every six months his heart rhythm and blood pressure are measured on the treadmill monitor's cardiogram.

"If it were not for this part of the rehabilitation program I would be afraid to exercise because I would not know the limits of my exercise tolerance," he says.

HIS DIET is low in cholesterol, fats, sugar and salt. However it is not a stringent diet and he says that he can always enjoy a meal.

Now he is rebuilding a Model A Ford and planning a trip to Europe with his wife.

The Lakewood cardiologist who saved Davies life says: "This man is a living example of the recuperative powers of the heart and cardiology's advances against heart disease."

Charles Davies' ruddy complexion and rebuilt Bugatti testify to that.

2 Convention Groups Due to Meet in L.B.

Two events and two convention groups will meet in Long Beach during the month of March according to Bob Lichtenhan, Manager of the Long Beach Convention and News Bureau.

Judge Gets Library Post

Municipal Court Judge Lloyd E. Blanpied of the West Orange County Judicial District Court at Westminster will be the 1971 president of the Orange County Law Library, which this year expects to open its new building in the Santa Ana Civic Center.

Blanpied succeeds Judge Philip E. Schwab, presiding in the Central Orange County Judicial District Court at Santa Ana, who became chairman protem.

Superior Court Judge William Murray of Santa Ana was named secretary of the board for the sixth year.

Late Dog Licenses Cost More

If you haven't bought a license for the family canine, you're about to find yourself in a financial doghouse.

Ernest E. Allee, director of the Long Beach Animal Shelter, said Saturday that dog owners who haven't purchased 1971 licenses for their pets by midnight Monday will face a penalty assessment of 100 per cent of the license fee. That means that instead of buying your dog a license for $3, the price will skyrocket to $6.

Licenses can be purchased at the Shelter, at 3001 E. Willow St., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday

Allee said that a valid rabies innoculation certificate is required for all licenses; mail applications will be written without penalty if postmarked before midnight, Monday, but must also be accompanied by the rabies certification, Allee said.

Plans for Sidewalk Construction Dropped as Residents Protest

A halt has been called to a proposal to construct sidewalks along two West Long Beach streets, following a protest from more than 55 per cent of the property owners.

Councilmen concluded a public hearing and formally abandoned proceedings on the proposed 20th Street - 21st Street Sidewalk District.

Plans had called for the construction of sidewalks on both 20th and 21st streets between Santa Fe and Fashion avenues. The improvement has been initiated by a petition from property owners, backed principally by a West Long Beach beautification group.

City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson expressed sympathy with those protesting the project, conceding that it would be "quite expensive."

Bachelor's Life Fun, But It Get's Boring

NEW YORK — "I really enjoyed being a bachelor," Kevin McCarthy said.

"The trouble is, you have to be very mobile and free and persistent to keep up with them, and I was too busy making a living."

He'd found himself a bachelor-by-divorce, that single man so often needed. And being an actor, with a determined jaw and good looks, he got to know everybody including Jackie Kennedy, whose phone number he had, back before Onassis.

"The people that you met! The fascinating evenings! One night it was Clare Boothe Luce's house. I met Henry Luce. I met Bobby and Ethel at the Met and the next thing you're playing touch football with somebody from the All Stars . . ."

Kevin, now starring in the show, "Happy Birthday, Wanda June," sighed and said yes, those were the good old days, because later he met a girl and they have been happy for two years now — not happily married — because they're not married.

"You trade off that life for something that seems to have more, or a different value,' he said.

"Will we get married? . . . I think so . . .It might be fun. Except everything is so nice now with us we're superstitious about changing it.

"But the old bachelor life it was nice for a while, but it was parties, parties, parties to what end? It was largely narcissistic.

"The life I'm having now is not boring, it's not at all boring.

"Our 'marriage' — I call it our marriage, I proclaim it, I say this is marriage, this is true marriage. I feel I'm my best self in this relationship . . . even though we're 'married' but single."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Copa comic Morty Storm announced that Henry Ford was in the audience, then added, "Well, I thought Mr. Ford was here — there's a car outside with his name on it."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Women are funny. They think nothing of wearing skimpy hot pants, but get embarrassed if you see them without makeup.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Blessed is the man who is too busy to worry by day, and too sleepy to worry at night."

EARL'S PEARLS: Medical schools are working overtime, reports Arnold Glasow. There are hardly enough doctors being graduated to staff the TV shows.

Neil (Doc) Simon, author of many Broadway hits, was once asked how he forces himself to sit down and start work. "First," he said, "you send your wife out shopping in an expensive store . . ."

PLAYS IT COOL

Elke Sommers is shown here playing it cool in a garden. Miss Sommer's newest starring role is with Michael York in "Zepplin", the Getty and Fromkess production for Warner Bros., in which she plays a German technician working to perfect the airship as a mammoth war weapon.

Author Rips Russ for Pirating Play

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — American author Dale Wasserman has dared write a letter to the director of Moscow's Mayakovsky Theater calling Soviet producers thieves and felons.

When Wasserman discovered the theater would produce his "Man of La Mancha" he wrote a letter earlier this month to Andrei Goncharov that reads in part:

". . .I regret to say that I feel no more honored than I feel honored by burglars who plunder my possessions. In both cases the applicable words is 'theft.' Because we are colleagues and because I doubt that you personally condone such felony I wish there were a gentler word for it.

"But there simply isn't. You have neither applied for nor been given the right to do this production. Your country, by reason of its refusal to subscribe to international copyright conventions, is guilty not only of piracy but of contempt for the very writers it 'honors' by unauthorized and uncompensated use of their works."

IN A TELEPHONE call from his home in Spain, Wasserman told United Press International, "Russian theater people are ashamed about their government's policy in these matters.

"Sometimes the Soviets offer royalties to authors, but they are paid in rubles and writers must go to Russia to spend the currency."

Wasserman went on in his letter:

"In light of the current Soviet attitude toward Jews I suggest still another reason to reconsider your decision to produce 'Man of La Mancha.' There is a taint upon the work. Its authors are Jewish — I myself, as well as composer Mitch Leigh and lyricist Joe Darion.

"Worse, in fair warning I should reveal a fact generally unknown even to the audiences which have already seen the play worldwide. It has remained unknown because it occurs moments after the play's ending in which its protagonist, Miguel de Cervates, is seen mounting the steps toward his trial before the inquisition.

"BUT LET ME reveal it now: the charge against Cervantes (included) barring persons of Jewish blood from most kinds of employment . . . In short, Cervantes was charged with the crime of being wholly or partially Jewish. And from extensive research on the subject I can verify that virtually without doubt he was guilty.

"Of course it is possible that these considerations will affect neither your policy nor your conscience. In that event I have one further . . . proposal. You do not have in your possession the correct text or score. Previous productions in the Soviet Union . . . have mangled both horrendously . . .

"Consequently I offer, with the consent of my fellow authors, to send you the correct material — on condition that you perform the play exactly as written . . .

"Do consider my offer. With good will on both sides it is possible that something constructive may come of our complicity in the crime."

Wasserman has little hope of hearing from Comrade Goncharov.

FOLK GROUP AT CSLB

Hilltop Is Made of Happy Things

By PRESTON REESE
Pop-Music Critic

Camp Hilltop is made of things like roasted marshmallows, happy songs and a warm gathering of people on a cold night. And they perform like there's no going-home day.

The four-member folk group came with everything but the marshmallows Friday in two evening sets at Bristol Bay Trading Company, a recently opened weekend coffee house at California State college at Long Beach.

HILLTOP, which features Lenny Fomberg, bass; Bob Simpson, fiddle; Marty Fomberg, banjo; and Carole Miller, autoharp has revived the old coffee-house sing-in with highly polished professionalism on the traditional instruments as well as an overwhelming insight (for people their age) into the folk genre.

In contrast to the few remaining folk groups left, Hilltop neither flavors music with contemporary form or employs any electric rhythm base.

A renaissance of the age of specialization is returning folk, blues and country music to their original distinct forms after merging in the rock and roll era. Hilltop will be one of the first groups to reach homebase in its idiom.

In what must have been a carefully researched repertoire, they've shown that purist traditional folk isn't as dreary as it seems: none of those long, drawn out madrigal-like songs about an English lord killing his old lady. Not as light an approach either as say, Judy Henskie's.

HILLTOP can best be likened to some of the better works by Fairport Convention. I first saw them a year ago this month on their Judy Collins tour when they sprinkled their set with songs like, "In My Adobe Hacienda," "Home on the Range." They're much more sophisticated now but exciting arrangements keep the traditional stuff sounding as fresh as camp-fire songs.

The Bristol Bay Coffeehouse itself is just what Long Beach needs. Not that there wasn't anyplace for students on campus — there wasn't, the community in general was devoid of name entertainment in informal weekend spots.

Seeing the need, ten CSLB students volunteered to act as waiters and waitresses for Bristol Bay's first two weeks. Well-planned, with great service, Bristol Bay features a menu of health-food plates, exotic coffees, teas, you name it.

Fashioned after an English shipping-port cafe, handcrafted articles, leather goods, jewelry, books and candles can be bought in the rear of the coffeehouse at Bristol Bay Trading Center.

IN SPITE of the team-effort, planning, menu and a ten-thousand dollar sound system, Bristol Bay operates only one night a week in the converted school-cafeteria snack-bar.

Sponsored by CSLB Associated Student Body, managed and coordinated by Frank Shargo and John Dale Kennedy, Bristol Bay opens next week from 7:30 to 1 p.m. featuring Icehouse Blues Band. Admission is one dollar.

Anything Goes at Laundromat

— an old trick which Ivan says he can now circumvent.

Worst disaster in recent times was the morning he found a scared goose imprisoned in the shop which had been profusely sprayed with many bottles of orange pop.

Other vandals have broken toilet tissue holders, bathroom door handles, galvanized pipe racks and taken clocks from the walls.

"Kids will take anything that isn't bolted down," Ivan says. "I used to think these things happened to me just to repay me for some of the things I did when I was a kid. But now, I know different. These kids think up more stuff than I could ever dream about."

Unintentional contributions by customers add up to $50 to $60 worth of clothing and linens a month, which Ivan gives to churches and needy families. It's not unusual to find a drier full of sheets or half a doezn pairs of good jeans which someone has forgotten. Once he recovered seven brand new shirts — none his size.

Ivan, 50, and his wife, Amy, arrived in Bellflower from Missouri 25 years ago, parlayed a gas station job into a partnership which he sold three years ago. Once a year, he goes back to his farm to visit; the rest of the time he rides his motorcycles and grapples with the vagaries of the laundromat public.

Power Tools Taken

Power tools and other items were stolen from the garage of John W. Hodgkin, 5331 E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach police said Saturday.

Parent Talks Aimed to Span Generation Gap

Parents can learn how to "tune in on what's happening" with their offspring through a new seven-lecture forum series scheduled to begin Tuesday at Washington Junior High School.

The series, "Bridging the Generation Gap," is being presented by Dr. Arthur Kraft, psychologist for the Long Beach Unified School District. Lectures begin at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Kraft said topics will include: ways to promote maturity in children; ways of dealing with conflict; finding hidden problems; coming an straight; resolving conflict in a constructive way and "growing" with children.

Although no charge is being made for admission, the district requests that only those 18 years of age or older attend. Washington Junior High is at Pacific Avenue and 14th Street.

Lion Greets Newsman at Press Talk

Reporters who attend a Los Angeles press conference Wednesday will find themselves face to face with an adult California mountain lion.

The lion is part of a campaign by the Coalition to Save the California Mountain Lion, an organization made up of groups such as the The Canadian and American Wolf defenders, the Friends of Animals Inc., and the Sierra Club.

"The purpose of the coalition is to bring the combined strength of the entire conservation field behind protective legislation in a last-ditch effort to save this magnificent and valuable animal from total extinction," says chairman Donn Beattie.

Silver Dollars Gone

Prowlers who crawled through a window stole 34 silver dollars from the home of Kelley Rasmussen, 6145 Linden Ave., Long Beach police said Saturday.

Panel to Champion Cause of Coeds

If coeds at the University of California Irvine have problems — other than men — a special committee on campus will deal with them.

THE IDEA is to get some kind of equality, if not parity, between men and women — in the jobs they do, in the classrooms and in their responsibilities, according to Alice Anderson, its chairman.

Miss Anderson, who works with University Extension, said her committee is "unique" in that it will consider problems facing women on campus, including academic discrimination and "institutional bias."

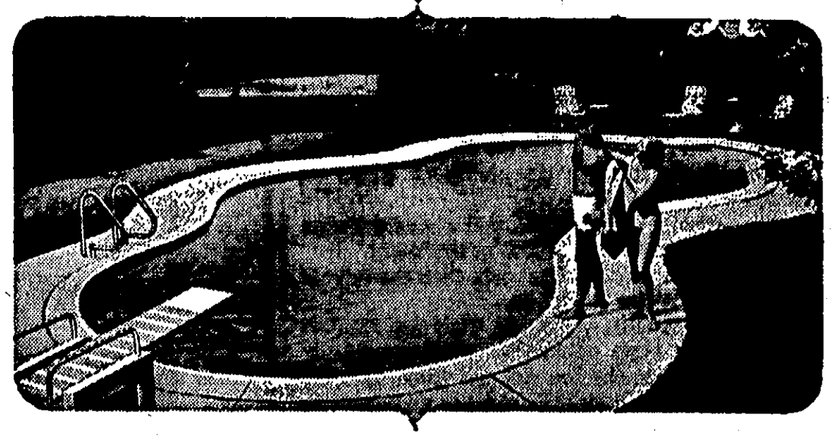

Reports reaching the group, known as the Chancellor's Advisory Committee on the Status of Women, indicate that there has been "discrimination" against women, it was explained. For instance:

Far more men than women are employed on campus, and women are paid less. On the UCI instructional staff, there are only five tenured and 13 nontenured instructors in a teaching faculty of 350. Fewer women graduate students seek advanced studies — and far fewer women applicants are accepted, it was claimed.

THE COMMITTEE had a bit of a problem in organizing, for a campus rule is that there shall be no discrimination between the sexes on committee appointments. Finally, two men agreed to serve; one is a student, the other a library employe, completing the 11-member committee.

BOULDER, COLORADO

Quietude No Accident for City in the Rockies

By ERROL W. KING

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) —This may be the quietest town of its size in the United States and retired Air Force Lt. Col. Tom Martin has a lot to do with that quietness.

Martin, originally from Longview, Tex., is "Boulder noise control officer." He took the job in this 60,000-person university town nestled in the foothills of the Colorado Rockies a year ago.

His job is to enforce what he believes is one of the most enlightened yet realistic noise control ordinances in the United States and all on a basic program budget in 1970 of $11,000. That includes his salary, equipment, part time help — everything.

BOULDER, home of the University of Colorado, the National Center for Atmospheric Research, and many other scientific operations is noted for its concern with the environment.

But Martin believes the town's noise control program could easily be applied to any town, and he says he is concerned that the experience he and others have gathered won't be getting the attention it deserves in President Nixon's noise standards under the Environmental Safety Act.

How it started was that a group of approximately 2,300 petitioned for — and got — a "mayor's committee on noise." The committee began by setting out to establish a rational noise limit, measured in decibels. Various decibel levels were tested on members of the petition group and, Martin said, the tests "actually demonstrated to those signing what the actual irritation level for humans is . . ."

MARTIN defines the level finally established, 80 decibels, as "the point where you can no longer carry on a conversation without raising your voice."

Then the City Council drew up a simple, one-page ordinance and hired Martin to enforce it.

They got a bargain.

Martin said court summonses issued to violators of the noise limit must be carefully documented with measurements taken at a 25-foot distance and charted on a graph. There was no such equipment available when Martin started, so he designed and built his own.

During 1970 (the ordinance took effect Feb. 20), Martin issured 625 warning citations and 35 court summonses to noise violators.

"As an end result, now, about 508 of those warned have come into compliance with the ordinance," he said. "Only one person contested a court summons," and he lost, including an appeal based on constitutional grounds.

"I REALLY think we were the first city in the nation to go this way," Martin said.

He explained that the 80 decibel limit contains one variance — for trucks. "Even a well-mufflered truck can't maintain the 80 decibel level, so trucks over 10,000 pounds are allowed up to 88 decibels, but restricted to main thoroughfares during the evening and night."

Why all the concern over a few decibels of noise one way or the other?

Martin, well versed in his second career, reels off the statistics in reply:

—"Anything over 80 decibels penetrates your mind, causing you to immediately lose four seconds concentration, and four seconds before you can get back. . ."

—"It hurts older people the most, because their inner ears have grown more rigid and can't "knock out" noise . . . They're actually in physical pain."

—"Noise, even as low as 78 decibels, could kill a heart patient, because noise "shook effect' (like someone pointing a gun at you) speeds up breathing . . . constricts capilliaries . . . your heart is getting less blood."

—"At around 83 decibels, you're going to have 50 per cent more cholesterol in you blood stream than mine, which is just shortening your life . . ."

DOWN TO EARTH

Battle of Words on Smog Front

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing editor

There are many different kinds of air pollution and even words can qualify in that respect.

At the moment a battle over words — a key one — may be contributing to smog, and it is possible that this battle may one day lead the federal government to take over the Los Angeles Air Pollution Control District.

As a long time anti-semantic, I dislike battles over words, because they are hard to explain and lead to confusion, but this one is too important to let go.
The health of 10 million people is at stake.

The words have to do with air quality standards.

Two sets of standards — and in one case they are STANDARDS, not criteria — for air have been established, one by the federal government and the other by the state. In both cases these standards were established on the basis of "the health effects of air pollution."

GIL BAILEY

To put it simply, these standards establish at what levels air becomes unhealthy.

The federal and state standards are not identical, but they are close enough together so that they can be lumped into one classification.

Both of these standards are violated within the Los Angeles Basin more than 200 days a year. Thus, if the federal and state scientists are to be believed, the air here is unhealthy more than 200 days a year.

Now the argument

Are these standards "long range goals" to be achieved someday, or do they represent immediate health hazards, which must be eliminated as soon as possible?

BASICALLY, Los Angeles County is proceeding on the theory these standards are long term goals — 1985 or something like that. Orange County isnt' doing anything really about air pollution, so it can't be criticized.

A. Alan Plst, legislative analyst for the state of California, in a careful and thoughtful critique of the air pollution programs, approves of the above theory.

He pointed out that these standards can't be achieved on short term basis with current technology and regulations.

He suggested "management goals" be set up, ones which can be reached.

The technical advisory committee to the State Air Resources Board reached somewhat the same conclusions, but with an important difference.

It suggested some specific changes to bring these goals within reach.

LIMITATIONS on use of autos, new industry, new residential areas, a change in the transportation system, and other equally radical proposals were among that committee's suggestions.

"A change in life style" is needed, the committee said.

OK, that's the argument. Now comes the villain, or the hero, as the case may be.

In 1970 Congress passed amendments to the clean air act.

The amendments required that the National Air Pollution Control Office establish air standards based on health effects.

Then, the amendments required that states draw up plans to meet those standards by 1976 at the latest.

And if the states don't do that job, then the federal government has the power to step in.

The feds have proposed standards. They are similar, but not identical to state standards, which everybody agrees can't be met in the Los Angeles Basin by 1976, maybe not by 1980 or 1985 or 1990, at least they can't be met using present regulations and technology.

Local air pollution districts have been slow to respond. They haven't responded so far at all publically. It may be that some of them haven't even informed their bosses, the county boards of supervisors.

BY THE WAY, the amendments do one other thing: They authorize private suits against the federal government to force the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to do his job, which can include taking over local air pollution control programs.

Law suits, anyone?

So the argument over words has some substance.

What do you want?

Clean air?

Or the status quo?

Eventually, that decision will be in the hands of the people. They elect the county boards of supervisors, which direct local air pollution control programs. They also elect the congressmen who put into law the clean air act amendments which demand a cleanup, no matter what the cost.

U.S. Eating Habits Called Source of Many Ailments

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A team of scientists at the University of Alabama Medical Center believes that Americans are suffering from everything from insomnia to cancer largely because they eat the wrong things.

And, according to Dr. Emanuel Cheraskin and Dr. W. M. Ringsdorf, the crisis of malnutrition — not to be confused with under-nutrition — is one afflicting the majority, possibly up to 80 per cent, of the nation's population.

CHERASKIN, chairman of the department of oral medicine in the University's school of dentistry, and Ringsdorf are in complete agreement that the body renders itself susceptible to cancer, heart disease, mental retardation, colds and many other afflictions because of diet deficiencies.

"We believe we can show that people who are well and do not have diseases are the people who eat well," said Cheraskin. "And the people who eat badly are the ones who have diseases."

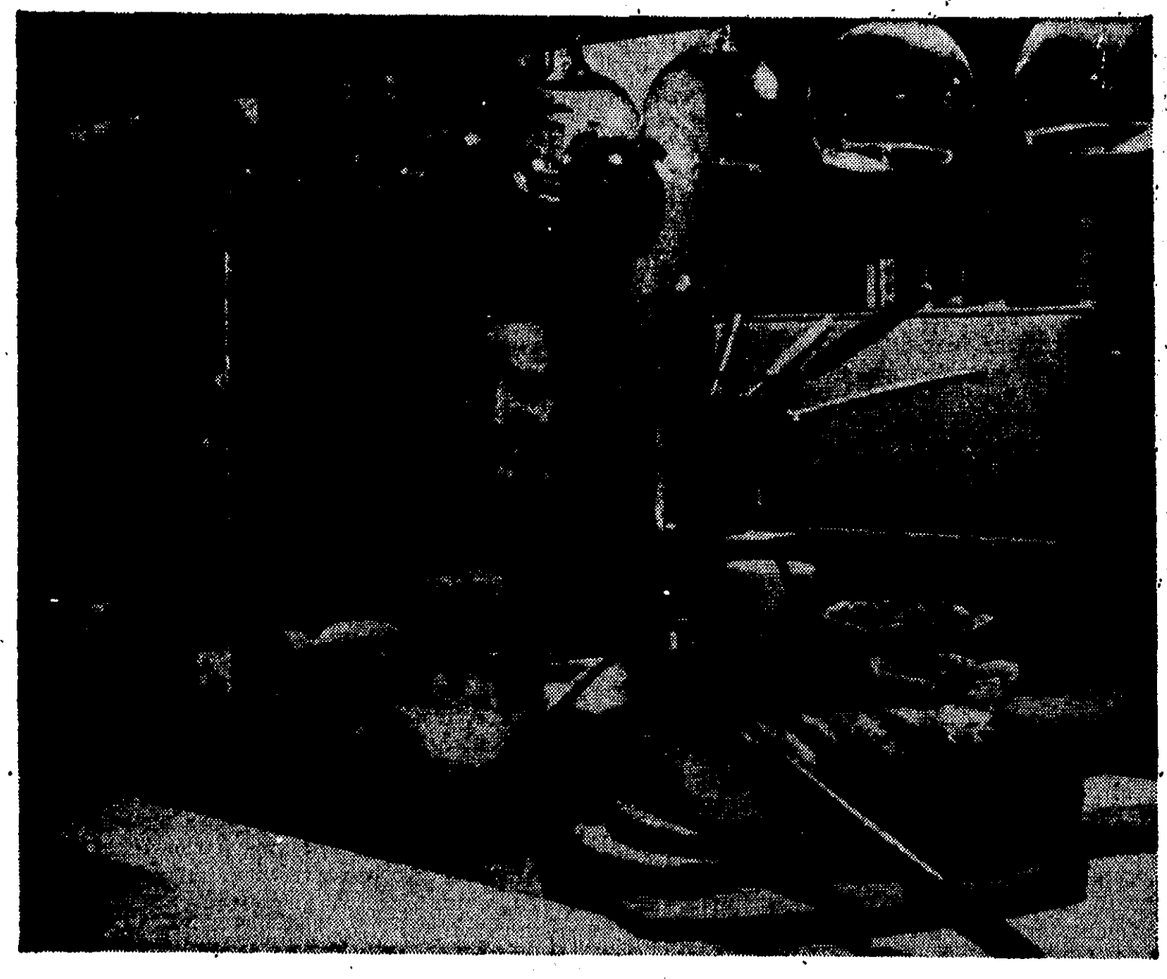

The problem of malnutrition is complicated by the loss of nutrition in foods because of modern harvesting methods, long-distance shipping, storage, processing and cooking, according to Cheraskin.

However, it basically lies in the tendency of Americans to eat the "wrong" foods.

"THE important thing is to eat as wisely as one can — at least cutting out the things that are bad," said Cheraskin, who adds that a balanced diet is most difficult even for the most nutritionally oriented person.

"There are certain foods to watch out for, such as white sugar and highly refined flour," he continued.

Transit System Bill too Good for Lester

ATLANTA — (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox says a measure to finance Atlanta's proposed rapid transit system is too good. The bill, already passed by the Georgia House of Representatives and now in the state Senate, would levy a one-cent sales tax in the Atlanta area to pay for the system.

Maddox said the tax would raise enough money to build rapid transit, construct a $400 million highway and give patrons "a free ride every day, a Coca-Cola and a 10-cent bag of peanuts."

'Disease of Youth'

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — When the February grand jury called for legalization of marijuana, Judge Lo Weinrott, 74, who received the recommendation, said drug use was a "young person's disease" which can "destroy the United States faster than anything else."

A TRIP TO WHERE IT'S HAPPENING

Luxurious Audi economical

Story and Photos
By BILL EMERY
Associate Auto Editor

Most cars have big, powerful engines that guzzle gas or they have little economical engines that don't use much gas but don't have much power either.

We found a luxury car that pays attention to the high cost of living . . . the Audi 100 LS, and visited a fashionable resort in North San Diego County . . . Lake San Marcos . . . which also offers luxury accommodations at very moderate prices.

The Audi 100 LS, borrowed from Circle Porsche Audi, Ltd. at 4400 E. Los Coyotes Diagonal on the Long Beach Traffic Circle, is different from every other car we've driven.

Available in both a two-door and a four-door model, the Audi features an advanced designed high compression 4-cylinder engine, front wheel drive, reclining chair-high bucket seats up front, genuine African wood veneer dashboard and luxury exterior and interior appointments.

Audi's power front disc brakes are in an unusual place . . . toward the middle of the car and not on the wheels. They're located in the car's airstream so that the brakes are cooled off while the car is moving and even while stopping.

By not locating the brakes in the wheels, Audi designed them larger in order to bring the car traveling 60 mph to a complete stop in 3 seconds flat . . . without swerving or fading.

Another advantage of Audi's front brakes not being in the wheel rims is that they don't add excess weight to the wheels which helps keep the car from bouncing up and down on the road.

The ride is actually so smooth and quiet that you find yourself creeping up to speeds far in excess of the California speed limit and you would swear that the speedometer is way off.

ALTHOUGH A FULLY synchromesh four-speed transmission is standard equipment, the Audi we drove had a three-speed automatic with a floor-mounted console that can be shifted up or down through the gears or driven fully automatically.

The 115-horsepowered overhead valve engine is more than adequately powered for the automatic. The sedan has a top speed of 105 miles-per-hour and delivered about 26 miles per gallon fuel economy. The economy is even better in the four-speed models according to reports to Circle's service department.

Longer lasting radial ply tires are also standard equipment and these add greatly to the road-holding-ability of the car. This, together with Audi's front-wheel drive, highly-stabilized suspension system and the simplest steering system in the world (rack-and-pinion), makes Audi one of the safest of any cars in rain, snow or ice.

When cornering, the harder you tromp on the gas pedal, the less you feel a sway in the corner. This is a driver's car, yet it's also a lady's car. The average car drives the driver. With Audi, it's the other way around.

MOTOR LOG AUDI 100LS (for luxury sedan) finds an appropriate weekend home for golfing and outdoor recreation at the Quails Inn Motel at Lake San Marcos.

LAKE SAN MARCOS, a luxury resort community about 5 miles inland from Carlsbad on the Palomar Airport Road in Northern San Diego County, offers one of the most complete and elegant resort facilities to be found in Southern California. It's a complete residential community of $30,000 to $50,000 homes built around a quaint shopping center, a private lake and a championship golf course.

The lake offers sailboats, paddle boats, electric runabouts, canoes and 11-passenger "party" pontoon boats. Tennis, shuffleboard and a dozen other activities round out the recreation facilities offered at the resort.

A value-packsd incentive offer to get the public aware of the resort's facilities and potential is being aimed toward golfers. The Quails Inn Motel and Lake San Marcos Country Club are currently offering a golfer's special of 3 days golfing and 2 nights at the inn for $24.80 double occupancy.

It's a fantastic value. The rooms are richly furnished and luxurious with cable TV in each room, heated swimming pools and views of the lake and mountains.

THE 18-HOLE championship golf course is 650 yards with a par of 72 and very challenging. One unusual feature about the course is that every green is elevated and you're in trouble if you try to roll onto these greens!

Dining at the Quails Inn is an experience in tranquility. Built partly over the water, diners overlook the lake and scenic mountains in the background. The cuisine is excellent and the dining room radiates luxury without penalty to the pocketbook.

A lower dining room is also over the water and is usually reserved for special groups. Another facility, the Gallery Room, will accommodate up to 80 for meetings or conferences.

Just re-opened last weekend is an ultra modern Spa which offers health club activities and massage for men and women. It features twin Finnish saunas, a hydro therapy pool, exercise pools and body conditioning equipment.

The resort community has much to offer in luxury recreational facilities without crippling the wallet . . . just like the Audi 100 LS. And, if you want to save even more, Audi also offers the Super 90 series which looks and performs almost the same but cost even less. Audi and Lake San Marcos is "where it's happening" today.

visit our dealership

We are new on the Traffic Circle in Long Beach. Our architecture is Spanish, our facilities ultra modern, our service personalized. Our Big Difference is CONCERN . . . CONCERN for dependable service . . . CONCERN for your pocketbook . . . CONCERN for your complete satisfaction.

The difference between what makes a car move and what makes the Audi move.

Most cars move by means of the rear wheels pushing them. Which is alright under normal driving conditions. However, in certain cornering situations, it can become quite a problem.

You see, when you take a curve in a rear-wheel-drive car, the rear has a tendency to go straight on instead of following the rest of the car. This can cause serious skidding under extreme conditions (especially when the front wheels may fail to hold).

The Audi moves by means of the front wheels pulling it. When you take a curve in this car, the rear doesn't swing out but obediently follows the rest of the car. The reason for this is, since the power is in the front wheels, when these wheels are turned, the power itself is turned more directly.

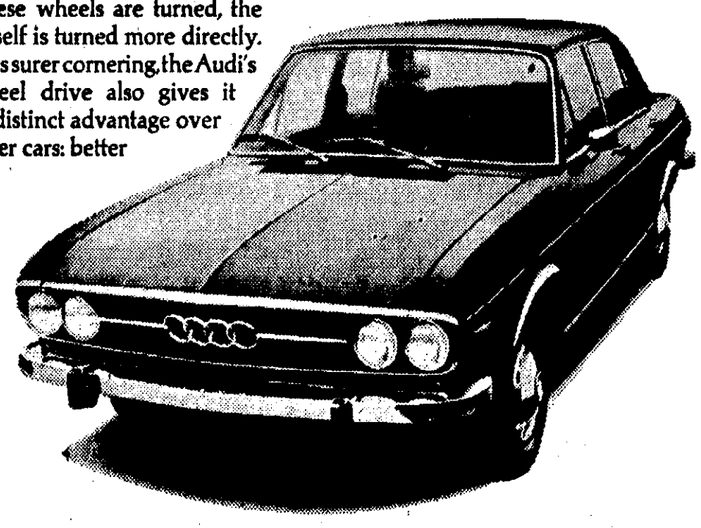

Besides surer cornering, the Audi's front-wheel drive also gives it another distinct advantage over most other cars: better traction. That's because the weight of the engine and transmission is right over the wheels that are supplying the traction.

Front-wheel drive is just one of the Audi's many advanced features. It also has inboard front disc brakes. Rack-and-pinion steering. And we could go on and on. But the best way to really get a feel for this car is to come in and drive it.

The differences are so apparent that just once around the block will tell a good part of the story.

RILEY GETS THE BIG POINT

Troy Scared, 81-80

SEATTLE (Special) — There wasn't much breathing room here Saturday night for USC, but the Trojans are still a factor in the Pac-8 basketball race and still within sight of UCLA.

It took a free throw by Ron Riley with 17 seconds remaining to provide the difference in Troy's 81-80 heartstop win over inspired Washington.

The win gave USC a 9-1 conference record, one game back of the Bruins whom the Trojans get a crack at on March 13.

Washington trailed by only two, 78-76, with 2:26 on go on the clock and the ball in Trojan hands. Southern California stalled until guard Paul Westphal picked up a loose ball and drove in for a layin to make it 80-76 Trojans at 1:05.

Washington center Steve Hawes countered with a layin to bring the Huskies back to within two, 80-78.

But Riley was fouled by the desperate Huskies with 17 seconds remaining and made the winning point.

ECKER'S TOSSES TUMBLE WSU

Squeaker for UCLA

PULLMAN, Wash. (Special) — No. 1-ranked UCLA stayed that way here Saturday night, but it wasn't easy.

John Ecker, who does most of his playing when the victory has been assured, Saturday assured the Bruin win with two free throws in the final seven seconds as UCLA clawed back from a shocking halftime deficit to tumble Washington State, 57-53.

UCLA, now 10-0 in league competition, thereby eliminated a next-to-the-last barrier in quest of a fifth consecutive Pacific-8 crown and NCAA tournament.

The Bruins were temporarily halted in the first half as the Cougars controlled the boards and clamped a solid check on Bruin stars Sidney Wicks and Steve Patterson. Dennis Hogg held all-America Wicks to only four points in the first stanza and 16 for the contest while pumping in 11.

Ecker, an 88-per cent shooter of free throws, pumped in a pair as a substitute for injured Terry Scofield.

Bolstered by the shooting of Jim Mereditch, who scored 17 points, and a strong defensive effort, WSU held a 30-27 halftime bulge.

UCLA pulled ahead with 8:45 remaining by drilling nine unanswered points, advantage 47-41 for the Bruins.

The Cougars narrowed the gap to trail 50-47 at 3:35 but couldn't stage a strong enough attack.

West Is too Much for S.F.

'Magic Number' Reduced to Four

SAN FRANCISCO (Special) — Jerry West, fighting a long slump, scored a season high of 42 points — 29 in the second half — to lead the Lakers to a thrilling 112-107 victory over the San Francisco Warriors here Saturday night.

The victory was the Lakers' first over the Warriors in the Bay Area and reduced their magic number for winning the Pacific Division title to four with 13 games remaining.

The Lakers missed their first 12 shots of the fourth period and fell behind by six points, but West snapped the scoring drought five and one-half minutes into the quarter and went on to net 16 of his team's final 24 points.

Only West and reserve forward Fred Hetzel made field goals for the Lakers in the last period.

The Warriors had a chance to take a one-point lead with 42 seconds to go, but guard Jeff Mullens dropped a pass from Nate Thurmond while he was all alone under the Laker basket.

San Francisco received a standout performance from center Thurmond, who controlled the defensive backboards and also netted 37 points, most of them long outside jump shots.

The Lakers, outrebounded 64-35, were not credited with one ball control error in the final 24 minutes, an outstanding achievement considering the pace of the game.

The Lakers return to the Forum tonight at 7 to face Cleveland. The first 5,000 youngsters to attend will receive a coupon for a free basketball.

Mortensen Enjoys 4-Stroke Advantage

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Little Los Alamitos golf course has the reputation of being a soft touch, but you couldn't prove it Saturday in the first round of the Long Beach Masters tournament.

Only Dick Mortensen of Skylinks shot a creditable round, a 1-over-par 68,

Masters Scores

D. Mortensen (Skylinks)	33-35—68
Ray Brett (El Dorado)	36-36—72
Bob Abbey (M'lark)	36-37—73
Jim Craig (Virginia)	35-38—73
M. Fedderly (Lakewood)	36-38—74
Mike Blum (Old Ranch)	38-36—74
Steve Cook (Los Alam., RP)	36-38—74
Tosh Sato (Navy)	41-37—78

and it earned him a surprising four stroke lead in an event which was supposed to be the strongest and most well-balanced in its 15-year history.

There is balance, with only two shots separating second from seventh place, but the runnerup, Ray Brett of El Dorado, is five strokes over par and that is nothing to rave about.

Teenager Bob Abbey of Meadowlark and Jim Craig of Virginia are next at 73, followed by Steve Cook, Mike Fedderly and Mike Blum at 74. Tosh Sato is last at 78.

While all but Mortensen felt their games were lacking, they were quick to point out that Los Alamitos is not a snap course just because it measures only 5,011 yards.

"It lulls you into a false sense of security," said Fedderly, whose sentiments were echoed by others. "The out-of-bounds inside the course can hurt you, and some of those par-3 holes are not easy."

Fedderly, the defending Masters champion who never strayed more than 2-over-par in any one round last year, lost four of his seven strokes Saturday on OBs. Sato also hit two out of bounds, while Blum, Cook and Craig had one each.

"You have to watch yourself on this course," warned leader Mortensen, who admitted he was lucky that he, too, wasn't in the 70s with the rest of the players.

Nicklaus Closes In on Second 'Grand Slam'

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Jack Nicklaus' hospitality is fine, says Gary Player, but right now he's more interested in winning the $200,000 PGA Golf championship and the $40,000 first prize.

"Gary has been my house guest all week," kidded Nicklaus, the No. 1 resident of nearby Lost Tree Village, "but I guess he doesn't trust me. He's going to stay in Miami instead.

Nicklaus carries a four stroke advantage over Player into the final round of the prestigious PGA today as the Golden Bear closes in on his second grand slam.

Nicklaus missed by a stroke of firing his third successive 69 Saturday, before 10,725 fans and a national television audience, settling for a two-under-par 70 and a 54-hole score of 208.

Player fired a 68, the day's best round, for 212 and Gibby Gilbert shot 72 and is five strokes back at 213.

"Sorry I bogeyed that last hole," Nicklaus said with a grin. "I could have had the hat trick."

Nicklaus, who has led this 53rd PGA from the opening round, had only a one-stroke edge over Player and Gilbert after the 10th hole when he strung together four birdies, spurred by a 40-putt at No. 11.

"That putt completely turned the round around," Nicklaus explained. "I was putting good all day and that one got me going."

Nicklaus blasted out a trap at No. 12 and sank a two-footer for a birdie. At No. 13 his 9-iron was within three-feet of the pin for another bird and then he sank a 20-footer at No. 13.

"But it all stopped after that," Jack said with a grin. He finished with pars at 15, 16 and 17 and then bogeyed the closing hole after missing a nine-foot putt.

"I feel I'm in good position but I certainly don't think I've got the tournament wrapped up," Nicklaus cautioned. "But," he added, "I have to like my chances better than anyone else's."

Nicklaus said the forbidding, wind-swept PGA National Club course "makes it tough to let up at all. On this course a guy can lose four strokes on any hole."

If Nicklaus wins it, he'll become the first golfer to bag the Big Four—the PGA, U.S. Open in 1962 and 1967. He took the British Open in '66 and '70. He's a three-time winner of the Masters—1963, 1965 and 1966. But his only PGA victory came in 1963.

"We'll talk about the grand slam—Sunday night," Nicklaus said, refusing to speculate on the double slam. "At least I hope we'll be talking about it," he added.

14,867 Watch Kings Lose Fourth in Row

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks goalie Tony Esposito took all the Kings had to offer, which was more than usual, and turned them away, 4-1, before 14,867 teeth-gnashing fans at the Forum Saturday night.

Esposito's older brother Phil, Boston's National Hockey League scoring leader, specializes in scoring but Tony, the All-Star goalie as a rookie last season, is just as expert at keeping pucks out of the net.

Frustrating the Kings at all but one turn, he sent them down to their fourth loss in a row as Jim Pappin scored a pair of clinching goals.

The Kings' play, featured by the vastly improved rookie defenseman Paul Curtis, was passable — but Esposito was not.

The Kings changed their opening act by taking the initiative, but Esposito upstaged them with point-blank stops on Ross Lonsberry and Ralph Backstrom.

Early in the second period Bob Pulford was still off from a first-period penalty when Dennis Hull, following up Stan Mikita's shot off the post, flicked the puck over fallen goalie Denis DeJordy and his defenseman, Dale Hoganson.

The next time down the ice the Hawks went to 2-0 when Chico Maki played Bryan Campbell's drop pass from 20 feet. An ill-timed announcement a moment later was that Minnesota had beaten Detroit leaving the Kings 13 points away from a playoff position.

To their credit, they continued to press. Esposito thwarted Bill Flett and the trailing Lonsberry on a bang-bang rush, and they finally broke through when Backstrom won a faceoff from Campbell and drove in alone on Esposito.

Pappin's goals did 'em in. The veteran right wing surprised DeJordy with an over-the-shoulder sizzler from the blue line, then made it 4-1 on Danny O'Shea's corner pass early in the last period.

"How you gonna win if you can't score?" King coach Larry Regan pleaded. "He (Esposito) played a helluva game. We had enough chances to win."

Lonsberry added, "He stoned us in the second period. Every time we tried to come back he was there."

Esposito set a league record of 15 shutouts last season. He has five now.

"Oh, I'd like to get a few more," he said, "but as long as we're winning I don't feel the pressure I felt last year."

The Black Hawks, 20 points atop the West Division are winning like nobody else except Boston and New York in the East, and their opposition isn't any easier. All play the

Chuck Terry: Can't Forget 1970

"You know when you play well and when you don't play well. I just try to play as hard as I can and not let it bother me. I don't like things to upset me." — Chuck Terry.

Instant replay is nice, but it always comes out the same. What sport needs is a real second chance for all of those terrible, irreversible agonies that are history.

What if Jack Dempsey had gone to a neutral corner? What if Ralph Branca hadn't hung a curve to Bobby Thomson . . . or Frank Selvy's jump shot had dropped. . . or Cal's Roy Riegels had run the RIGHT way?

"You don't forget something like that," says Chuck Terry, who knows how they all felt, "I don't think I'll ever forget it."

Terry's cross is the missed free throw that would have given Long Beach City College the California state junior college basketball title in the playoff with Compton a year ago. The burden has hardly been lightened by his superb play for Cal State Long Beach this season.

To Terry, the 49ers' steady 6-6 junior forward, the suggestion that LBCC wouldn't have even been playing that night had it not been for his season-long performance — he was the state's jaycee player of the year — is totally irrelevant.

There were three seconds remaining in the first overtime period and the score was tied. Terry was at the line for one-and-one try.

"I thought it was good when I shot it," he says. "If I would have made it we would have won . . . and I missed. It hit the rim and rolled out. I thought about it lying in bed every night for two weeks after that. Back then that was the most important thing in the world to me."

COMPTON WON in the second overtime and Terry went off to Europe to forget.

Well, not exactly. In a three-week tryout among 45 young prospects, he qualified as one of 12 players to tour behind the Iron Curtain as part of the U.S. Olympic development program.

The squad, also including USC's Paul Westphal, played two games in Finland, then dribbled through the curtain for three games in Poland and eight in Russia. The Russian national team, Terry believes, will be formidable at Munich.

"They're older," he says, "about 26 or 27, and about like an ABA team over here. I didn't expect them to be that good, but they beat us by 28. Just blew us out of the gym."

Terry says, "It was a good trip, I really enjoyed it . . . . but one of the things I noticed was that it's pretty nice over here.

"We didn't do a whole lot of running around, what with practicing and playing. They kept a pretty good eye on us. I did walk around Moscow quite a bit, though. The people? I'll tell you, it doesn't look like they enjoy themselves. Their lives must be pretty dreary."

FOR A DOZEN red-blooded American boys the three weeks were dreary in two respects: 1) food and 2) girls.

"Some of the ladies over there weren't too, ah,

The bigger they are the harder they fall.

All but Jacksonville, the nation's tallest ranked basketball team, came away unscathed in collegiate action Saturday.

Poo Welch, Houston's demon of defense, sank a pair of free throws in the final 26 seconds to give the unranked Cougars an 83-82 decision over the sixth-rated Dolphins to virtually assure the Texas school an at-large berth in the NCAA playoffs.

It was the 20th victory in 25 starts for the hosts, who nipped a Jacksonville win streak at 15 games before 10,122 fans. Houston is unbeaten in its last 28 home games.

The lead changed hands eight times in the first half before the Dolphins, assumed a 45-40 lead at the break. Houston switched to a 1-3-1 zone defense the final 20 minutes and grabbed the lead for keeps on Welch's layup with less than two minutes remaining.

Harold Fox and Ernie Fleming scored 24 points apiece for Jacksonville with Artis Gilmore adding 22, despite double-teaming. Steve Newsome tossed in 22 and Dwight Davis and Welch 20 each for the Cougars.

Dean (The Dream) Meminger made his final home appearance a memorable one for 10,746 Marquette fans, pumping in 33 points as the unbeaten Warriors ran off their 35th consecutive win, 90-76, over Tulane.

Equally unbeaten Penn clinched the Ivy League Crown, 93-63 over Yale, as the vanquished Bulldogs hit only two of their last 30 shots. St. Joseph's closed the Palestra doubleheader with a 66-56 triumph over LaSalle.

Kentucky clinched at least a tie with Tennessee for the Southeastern title, routing Vanderbilt, 119-90. Tennessee was pressed by Auburn, but survived, 76-71.

LSU coach Press Maravich benched Al Sanders, Gary Simpson and Jere Shockey for "disciplinary reasons" and went to a slowdown trying to cool off Ole Miss hotshot Johnny Neumann.

The Tigers held the nation's leading scorer to a season-low 17 points, but suffered a 62-54 defeat in the process.

North Texas State shot down Missouri Valley leader Louisville, 79-73, while North Carolina clinched a tie for the Atlantic Coast crown, nipping Virginia, 75-74, on Dennis Wuychik's two free throws with nine seconds to play.

South Carolina blitzed North Carolina State, 82-69, on John Rcohe's 37 markers. Fordham's mini-men, led by Charlie Yelverton's 30-point effort, smacked NYU, 102-78, while Notre Dame raced past St. John's 92-79, behind Austin Carr (32 points) and Collis Jones (21).

Ohio State upset 10th-ranked Michigan, 91-85, Alan Hornyak scoring 17 of his 37 points in the first five minutes. Henry Wilmore totalled 42 for the Wolverines.

TCU can do no worse than tie for the Southwest Conference championship, following its 74-71 defeat of Texas. Kansas reached similar status in the Big Eight, withstanding Colorado's scare and winning 66-65 on Dave Robisch's three-point play in the final seven seconds.

Julius Erving of Massachusetts scored 35 points, half his team's total, and snared 17 rebounds in a 70-65 win over George Washington. Walt Szczerbiak tallied 32 for the Colonials — 16 of them in a row.

Western Kentucky avenged its lone defeat by beating Murray State, 73-on Jim McDaniels' 25 markers.

Van Arsdale, Suns Shining

Combined News Services

Dick Van Arsdale scored 22 of his game-high 42 points in the first quarter Saturday night to lead Phoenix past Detroit 124-117 and highlight National Basketball Assn. competition.

It was the Suns' sixth win in their last seven games as they stayed on the heels of the Chicago Bulls in the battle for the second and final playoff position in the Midwest Division.

Although losing the services of forward Connie Hawkins who suffered a broken nose when he collided with Dave Bing in the first quarter, the Suns stayed in command all the way.

Lou Hudson and Willis Reed each had 35 points in leading their respective teams to victory in other contests.

Hudson canned 14-of-20 shots from the field and the Hawks weren't far behing as a team, with 61 per cent in an easy 134-117 victory over Buffalo. The victory enabled Atlanta to take over second place in the Central Division.

The Knicks cut their magic number to eight for clinching the Atlantic Division, holding off Portland 113-102.

Portland got as close as 66-64 with 3:17 remaining in the third quarter, but Reed led a 12-5 burst with back-to-back three-point plays.

MASON DOUBLES

L.B. Club Shreds Mile Relay Mark

POCATELLO, Idaho (Special) — The Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach smashed the indoor mile relay record to highlight the Jack Simplot Games Saturday night.

Frustrated at being disqualified after finishing first in the event at the National AAU Indoor Championships a night earlier in Madison Square Garden, the PCC quartet took out its anger on the board track of Idaho State's mini-dome, winning in 3:09.4.

Tom Jennings' crew led from Bob Frey's opening leg of 47.5 seconds, Len Van Hofwegen followed with a 48.3 and Terry Musika a 47.4.

Running his fifth 440 leg in two nights, Jay Elbel kicked home with a spectacular anchor leg of 46.2.

John Mason, nipped by Poland's Henryk Szordykowski in the AAU mile, chalked up two sensational victories, running the world's third fastest 1,000 yards this season (2:07.2) and taking the mile steeplechase in 4:24.5.

Mason's effort is the second fastest by an American, just a hair behind teammate Tom Von Ruden's 2:06.1.

Idaho State sprinter Carl Lawson established an indoor standard with a sizzling 21.4 220.

THE ONLY WAY TO RETIRE

SEATTLE UPI) — Seattle Supersonics owner Sam Schulman Saturday night gave 10-year-old NBA veteran Tom Meschery and his wife a trip around the world and $1,000 in spending money.

Meschery has announced his retirement at the end of the present year because "I am all basketballed out."

An estimated 9,000 fans drove through a heavy snowstorm and put on large fake black moustaches to honor one of the most popular Sonics on his "night."

Meschery, who sports a big walrus moustache, started his career with the old Philadelphia Warriors. He moved with the team to San Francisco where he played for five years before being picked by Seattle in the expansion draft four years ago.

Defense Key in Decisive Millikan Win

By GARY ELLIS

Saturay night 2,500 fans at Fullerton Junior College saw what a good defense can do to a good offense.

Millikan High held host La Habra to its second lowest offensive display of the year and rolled over the Highlanders, 66-54, in the first round of CIF 4-A playoffs.

High-scoring La Habra, of the Freeway League, faced a team that has yet to yield more than 70 points in a game.

Dave Leslie was the game's leading scorer with 24 points, but the real spark was Millikan's scrappy defense headed by the great play of Curtis Johnson, Dave Koch, and Gary Schiller.

Johnson, who scored only four points, was the ringleader in containing brothers Bob and Steve Manker.

Bob Manker, who was averaging 21.7 points per league game, ended with 20, but his effectiveness was cut down by a containing Millikan defense headed by Johnson. In his last outing, he scored 41.

Koch, who sat out most of the third quarter because of foul trouble, and Schiller were the key defensive players. Steve Manker, a 6-10½ sophomore center, could not dominate although he finished with 18 points, but only five field goals.

Schiller scored two-tip-ins over the much taller Manker and was the key in a Millikan control offense with the screens.

The Rams were in trouble early, falling behind 9-3 in the opening minutes of play. Thy rebounded and led by seven after the first quarter (19-12) and 50-37 at halftime.

Leslie fired in four consecutive baskets to help the Rams outscore La Habra 16-8 in the third quarter.

In desperation, La Habra began a full-court press. It rattled Millikan into four turnovers and the Highlanders closed the gap to nine (58-49) with 2:04 remaining in the game.

But the Rams had the bench strength and the patience and waited out the storm with a controlled offense.

The Rams next will find out if a hustling defense can stop an offensive power house. Millikan meets Verbum Dei, the No. 1 ranked team in the CIF, Tuesday night at a non-determined site. Saturday afternoon, Verbum Dei crushed Centennial 96-67.

Montreal Extends Streak

Combined News Services

Montreal extended its unbeaten streak to nine games Saturday night by downing St. Louis 3-2 in National Hockey League action.

The Canadiens, who have won eight and tied one since losing to the Kings 6-3 in Inglewood Feb. 6, used power-play goals by Yvan Cournoyer and J. C. Tremblay in the first period to get off to a fast start.

New York stayed ahead of the Canadiens in the race for second place in the NHL East with a 4-0 win at Pittsburgh.

It was only the third loss in the last 14 home games for Pittsburgh. The Rangers have inflicted all three setbacks.

Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin got his sixth shutout of the season.

In other action, Toronto blanked Buffalo 2-0 on goals by Paul Henderson and Guy Trottier plus the goaltending of veteran Jacques Plante.

Philadelphia exploded for five goals in the second period and went on to rip Vancouver 8-1 while Minnesota beat Detroit 4-2.

Eight different Flyers scored against Vancouver goalie Charlie Hodge.

Angels Unveil New Model Messersmith

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

HOLTVILLE — The events of Saturday did nothing to diminish the rosy hue hovering over the Angels' spring training complex.

Outfielder Tony Conigliaro arrived in Holtville instead of Boston and signed a contract for a reputed $70,000. Third baseman Ken McMullen also agreed to terms and said he would appear in camp this evening to ink a $34,500 document.

Andy Messersmith was a regular blithe spirit as he participated in his initial workout while helping to suppress lingering doubts that his pitching career was in dire jeopardy because of last season's rib and shoulders maladies.

It was a new Messersmith personality that surfaced Saturday, a personality diametrically opposed to the oftimes sensitive, distant and moody young man of 1970.

It was not unlike the Messersmith of 1969 when The Baron of Anaheim won 16 and lost 11 and was acclaimed as the most promising righthander in the American League.

He threw on the sidelines for 10 minutes and batting practice for another 10 and then clarified his physical condition.

"The only thing I felt was tired. There was no twinge in the rib area, no soreness in the shoulder. I wouldn't feel this happy if I didn't feel physically sound."

A sound Messersmith could all but insure a sound Angel pitching corps.

"There is no reason to believe that this staff isn't the best we've ever had," Messersmith smiled as he lay sprawled on his bed, his gaze alternating between the television set and his interrogators.

"I know what I'm going to do, I know Murph (Tom Murphy) is going to be better, I know Rudy (May) is going to break loose and I know Clyde (Wright) is going to have another good year. I wouldn't forget Jim (Jim Maloney), either."

But Messersmith will not make any succinct predictions about his own future.

"It would be silly for me to sit here and say I'm going to win 20 games and strike out 200 hitters. Heck, I may fall off a chair tomorrow and end my career. All I know is that I've never felt better and I think that should be evident to you guys.

"I can honestly say", Messersmith continued," that this is the first time I've really felt confortable about spring training. I used to worry about tomorrow. Even last spring, after a relatively good year, I wasn't relaxed. I found myself pressing too much and I also found that others had set goals for me.

"Maybe I tried to hard to live up to those goals."

Messersmith wound up with an 11-10 mark, 8-10 as a starter, a point much discussed in his salary negotiations with general manager Dick Walsh. But he appeared 11 times in relief with three victories, five saves and an 0.75 ERA.

"For all the things involved", Messersmith emphasized, "I thought I did a good job for the club last year. Sure the injuries were frustrating and I found it tough to live with myself sometimes. But self-criticism is a hard thing to adjust to."

Messersmith was advised to refrain from throwing baseballs at the conclusion of last season to give his rib injury time to heal. He was given the green light to throw early in January and has been working out regularly since that time with no apparent ill-effects.

He successfully resisted an 18 per cent pay cut from Walsh and was instead given a $2,000 boost to $32,000.

"I'll be honest with you," Walsh explained. "We wanted to get him here as soon as possible to find out if he could still pitch".

The general manager was seen breathing easier late Saturday.

"Yeah," Messersmith said assuredly, "I can pitch. I think I can do a lot of things. I know how to get along with people now . . . What to do and what not to say. I've also revamped my own ideas about this game. I still want to win with as much intensity as before but I also want to be happy and maybe rich."

"I would like nothing better than to have a great season and get a $20,000 world Series share. I could take a lot of psych courses with that money.

"Maybe," he laughed, "I could even learn to understand myself."

ANGEL ANGLES: Conigliaro said he felt "strange" after his first Angel workout. He also had an accolade for Walsh as a negotiator. "He's a pretty good fighter," Tony C. allowed. "He should get into the ring with Cassius Clay on March 8" . . . Eddie Fisher checked into camp Saturday and shortstop Jim Fregosi was due momentarily . . . Want to know about "Life in Holtville?" KMPC's Roger Carroll will try and come up with a description today between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. . . . Manager Lefty Phillips on non-roster catcher John Harrell, who, incidentally, is a Long Beach native: "He has a good arm as I've seen in baseball." Harrell's trip to the majors however, has been barricaded until now by a lack of hitting.

DAVE LEWIS

Maloney May Hold Angels' Flag Key

HOLTVILLE — The Angels bloomed into title contenders last year on the strength of aggressive wheeling and dealing in baseball's trade marts.

Their activities produced the likes of Alex Johnson, who won the American League batting crown, and another long-ball threat in Ken McMullen at third base.

So far this year, the Angels, encouraged by the success of their 1970 trading program, have obtained such key personnel as outfielders Ken Berry and Tony Conigliaro, and pitcher Jim Maloney.

Berry gives them the outstanding defensive centerfielder they've needed, while Conigliaro (34 home runs last year) promises additional batting punch.

But the man who looms exceptionally big in their pennant hopes is Maloney, the 6-2, 215-pound fireballing righthander from the Cincinnati Reds.

Although he was the workhorse of the Cincy staff in 10 of his 11 years with the club, Jim became expendable for several reasons. "I wasn't surprised at being traded," he admits. "In fact, I could see the handwriting on the wall." He pitched only 17 innings in '70 after rupturing his achilles tendon in his second start of the season.

FOR ONE THING, THE CLUB WANTED to unload his big salary — estimated in the $65,000 to $70,000 range. "So many of the fellows had big years and were up for big raises. The club had a budget to meet and felt they had enough young pitchers to fill in," Jim explains.

In Maloney, a native of Fresno, the Reds gave up a man who has pitched three no-hitters, five one-hitters and nine two-hitters, while his 134 victories are topped only by two other active National League pitchers — Juan Marichal and Bob Gibson. The Angels got him for what appears to be a "bargain basement" price — Greg Garrett, the 22-year-old southpaw who was only 5-6 last year.

Jim is an outstanding strikeout man — once whiffing 16 Braves in a nine-inning game, tying a major league record by disposing of eight in a row. In 1965, he tied the National League record for most strikeouts in an extra inning game with 18 against the Mets.

BEING DEALT TO THE ANGELS kept Maloney in baseball. "If Cincinnati hadn't traded me to a team with a chance to win a pennant, I would have quit the game," he says frankly. "After 11 years up here, there would have been no incentive left if I'd gone to an expansion team or a club with no chance of doing anything."

Although he will be starting his 12th major league season, he is only 30 . . . and his arm is as strong as ever.

Things started out badly in 1970 when a contract with the club caused him to miss all but two and one-half weeks of spring training.

He didn't get a decision in his first start. Then came that fateful day — April 17 against the Dodgers. "Bill Singer and I were the starters . . . and we both wound up in the hospital. It was the last game for Bill for several weeks. He pitched with a 104-degree temperature. The next day they diagnosed his trouble as hepatitis.

"I was leading 3-2 in the third inning when a ball was hit in the infield. I had taken four steps off the mound when the tendon snapped. I knew right away it was bad . . and the next day I underwent surgery," he reveals.

LATER, JIM WENT THROUGH an arduous program to strengthen the tendon, hopeful of making it back for the World Series. He finally was reactivated on Sept. 1, "but my arm wasn't quite ready. Even so, I could still razzle dazzle the batters and get by for an inning or two."

The club's World Series roster had to be set by Sept. 15. The day before, the Reds played an intrasquad game . . . "to test Jim Merritt's arm and to determine whether or not to make me eligible for the playoffs," Jim points out.

"My arm was coming around real good by then and I only gave up three hits in five innings. I was sure I had made the roster, but they chose Milt Wilcox over me." However, Angel scout Carl Ackerman, feeling Maloney might be available, was on hand . . . and was impressed enough to set the wheels in motion for the winter deal.

"Sure, I was disappointed in not getting in the playoffs," Jim says, "but looking back, it probably was the best thing for me. I might have hurt myself if I had kept on. An achilles tendon is a full-year injury."

MALONEY was playing on the Reds' basketball team the past winter when Bobby Tolan was injured. "At first everyone thought it was a twisted ankle, but when I felt it, I knew what it was — exactly the same thing I had. They're talking about him being back by June or July, but if he makes it by September, the Reds will be ahead of the game.

Jim readily admits he has had arm trouble, but that is common among pitchers. "Every year, I've missed one or two games, but my arm always has come back."

HE DID miss two months in '69 after pitching the third no-hitter of his career in April against Houston, "But I finished strong, winning my last five games in September for a 12-5 record and the lowest ERA on the staff."

What about this year in a new league? Angels general manager Dick Walsh says, "We will be mighty happy if he can win 12 games for us."

Jim feels that figure is much too low. "Frankly, I'm gunning for 20 victories. In fact, making it through this week here with all the running we've done, I'm confident I'll have no problem getting my share of wins!"

FERGUSON DEMANDS FATEFUL UNIFORM

No. 13 Anything but Unlucky

VERO BEACH, Fla. — It was a year ago that young Joe Ferguson reported to Nobe Kawano, keeper of the Dodger clubhouse, and, despite Nobe's pleas, ordered uniform No. 13.

There's nothing wrong with No. 13," Fergy pleaded. "I wore it all the time in school, I'll wear it this spring and, he added with a note of confidence, "I'll wear it when I come up to the big club."

"But No. 13?" Nobe argued. "You can't. You just can't.

Fergy stayed with his demands, and true to his word he trotted around Dodgertown sporting uniform No. 13. Then, late in the season, he was promoted to the varsity and got No. 13 again.

"I didn't even have a No. 13," Nobe said at the time." We had to have one made especially for Joe."

It isn't known just where all the uniforms bearing No. 13 went to but Nobe insists they weren't burned.

The last Dodger to wear No. 13 was Ralph Branca. Yes, Ralph Branca, the pitcher that fateful autumn day in 1951 when Bobby Thomson hit his home run that gave the Giants the pennant and the Dodgers nothing.

People tend to forget Branca once won 21 games for the Dodgers and three times was selected to the National League All-Star team.

All they seem to recall is the home run and No. 13 and bad luck.

"It doesn't seem quite fair," said Fergy who was all of five-years-old when Thompson ruined the Dodgers.

Branca, who lives in New York, was in Dodgertown over the weekend. "Just getting in shape for the Oldtimers game in Dodger Stadium June 6," kidded the former Dodger.

"It's the first time I'd met him," Ferguson said. "I didn't really think about the No. 13 thing. It's just a number I've always had and that's the one I wanted here."

So far No. 13 has been anything but bad fortune for the 24-year-old former prep basketball star from Northern California.

Ferguson received more than 50 collegiate offers, finally accepted one from University of Pacific and once scored 46 points in a frosh game.

"But I always knew baseball was my sport," said No. 13, and he signed a pact with the Dodgers.

He was an outfielder before the Dodgers made a catcher out of him. He was so impressive, his manager last year at Albuquerque, former Milwaukee Brave Del Crandall, bubbled:

"He has made almost unbelievable progress in the two years he's been catching and he's going to improve even more. He has a great future. He also has speed and power."

It's Ferguson's power that caught manager Walter Alston's eye last spring when the skipper labeled him "my darkhorse."

"Boy, was I surprised," Ferguson recalled, still a trifle flabergasted.

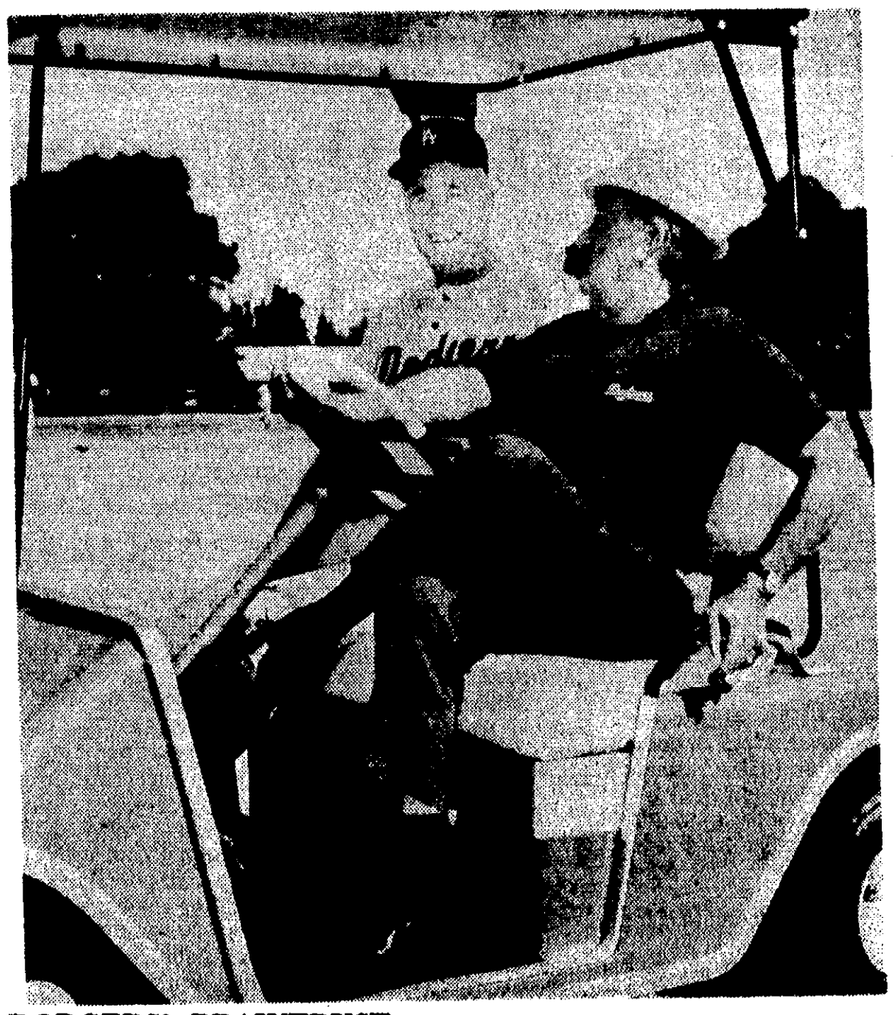

Ferguson has played baseball professionally only three years, batting .288 at Tri-City .286 at Daytona Beach and then .305 last season at Albuquerque, slugging 16 homers and becoming the Texas League's outstanding catcher.

"Every trade discussion we had someone would bring up Ferguson's name," explained vice president Al Campanis. "Every club likes him."

Fortunately, so do the Dodgers. Even Nobe Kawano.

"You sure you want No. 13?" Nobe asked one more time.

DODGERS' BRAINTRUST

Dodger manager Walter Alston takes leisurely ride with chairman of board Walter O'Malley across playing fields at Dodgertown training base in Vero Beach, Fla. Alston is dean of baseball managers, while O'Malley centers his activities around golf course.

DODGER DOPE: Maury Wills, Jose Pena and Tom Haller reported to camp, leaving only Manny Mota and Pete Mikkelsen absent . . . Mikkelsen is the only non-signee and Campanis says he hasn't heard from the relief pitcher in a week . . . Bill Singer threw his first batting practice Saturday. He says the index finger, which he broke last August and then had operated on during the off-season, feels fine . . . Montreal general manager Jim Fanning still wants a catcher, namely, Jeff Torborg, and Campanis has his eyes on Expo lefthander Dan McGinn.

Torre Joins Cards -- $110,000 Pact

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Joe Torre, the St. Louis Cardinals' last unsigned player, became the third $100,000 player on the team when he came to terms with general manager Bing Devine Saturday and immediately left for training camp by car.

Torre, a veteran of 11 big league seasons, was believed to receive a pay boost of $25,000, bringing his salary to around $110,000.

Moving to third base last season, a void caused by Mike Shannon's kidney ailment, the 30-year-old Torre had the best year of his career. The slimmed-down former catcher-first baseman batted .325 with 203 hits, 21 homers and 100 runs batted in.

Other $100,000 players currently on the Cardinals roster, are pitcher Bob Gibson, reportedly the National League's highest salaried player at $150,000, and outfielder Lou Brock, who was hiked this year to $100,000.

Senior vice-president Stan Musial, was a $100,000 player in 1958, arrived Saturday and put on his old No. 6 uniform to work out with the team.

Ted Sizemore, the infielder obtained from the Dodgers in the Richie Allen trade, also took his first workout as a member of the Cardinals, but he was not permitted to bat or field because he is still convalescing from recent surgery on his left hand.

"I've got to be patient for one more week," said Sizemore, "but I've been working out at home and if someone will catch the ball for me, the way they do for a football quarterback, I'll be able to do some throwing to get my arm in shape."

LBCC Rallies to Capture Salveson Title

Long Beach City College rallied for three runs in the eighth inning and Tom Lederer struck out four in two innings of relief to help the Vikings capture the first Jack Salveson Baseball Tournament championship, 5-3, over Glendale on Saturday at Blair Field.

Lederer relieved Dave Salg in the eighth inning in his first appearance as a Viking.

Rand Rasmussen doubled in two runs during the uprising and Tony Piraino singled home Rasmussen.

'Iron Mike' Shuts Out Atlanta on Four Hits

Combined News Services

Hurling with methodical precision, "Iron Mike" shut out the Atlanta Braves on only four hits Saturday.

"Iron Mike" is the team's pitching machine and it held both sides scoreless in a seven-inning intra-squad game.

The team won't get a rematch with "Iron Mike," however. They'll be facing live ammunition from now on. Ron Reed, out the first two months of last season with a broken collarbone, and Cecil Upshaw, who sat out the entire season with an injured finger, will be among the pitchers working Tuesday.

Rookie outfielder Andy Finlay hit a home run off the San Diego mechanical pitching monster during a simulated contest in Yuma, Ariz.

The Padres are still awaiting the arrival of third baseman Ed Spezio and shortstop Rafael Robles.

Catcher Dick Dietz came to terms with San Francisco for a reported $45,000. But negotiations between Giants' president Horace Stoneham and superstar Willie Mays remain at a standstill.

Mays is asking for a 10-year contract at $75,000 annually "to protect his future." Management is offering the veteran centerfielder a five-year pact or a shorter contract for more than $75,000.

Pity those members of the Boston Red Sox who remain on Eddie Kasko's "Lard Squad" after March 5.

"Anybody over his assigned weight — and this means even by one pound — is going to be fined $500," says the Boston manager. "It's amazing how quick players get into shape with the threat of money hanging over their heads."

Prominent members of the "Lard Squad" are George Scott, seven pounds overweight at 222 pounds, and Sparky Lyle, 22 over at 220.

The most unrecognizable player in the New York Yankees' camp is Curt Blefary. After spending a good part of the 1970 season on the bench as his body ballooned to 225 pounds, Curt reported at 196 and indicated he's going to let his bat take somebody's job away.

"I hope to snafu all the plans around here," he claims. "I didn't come here to sit on the pine, and besides, they are paying me too much to sit around. I'm going to relax, keep quiet and let my bat do the talking."

Other Yankees looking trim and fit are Pete Ward, 13 pounds lighter, and Danny Cater who shed 12.

Bob Oliver, who hit 27 home runs and drove in 99 last year, connected with several long drives Saturday in his first batting drill at the spring training camp of the Kansas City Royals . . . "I learned a lot about hitting in the winter league," Oliver explained.

Young pitchers Larry Yount, Paul Greif, and Ken Forsch showed the Houston Astros batters unexpected "smoke" as they cut loose under a hot Florida sun . . . "I've never seen so many hard-throwing young pitchers on one club in my life," said catcher Jack Hiatt, who has also been with the Giants, Expos, and Cubs.

Pitcher Diego Segui signed a 1971 contract with the Oakland Athletics and said he expected to join spring training at Mesa, Ariz., in five or six days . . . A club spokesman said Segui had not held out on signing to demand more money, but that he wanted to spend more time with his wife who is ill. Camp Campaneris and rookie pitcher Gilberto Mercano are still unsigned.

Third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez arrived in the Detroit Tiger camp, reducing the number of absentees to one . . . Rodriguez signed for an estimated $28,000. The only holdout is shortstop Cesar Guiterrez who hasn't been heard from since early January.

Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher John Lamb, struck in the face while pitching batting practice Friday, will be out of action for at least 10 days. Lamb was struck above the right ear, and is undergoing observation and X-rays in a local hospital.

The American League should ban use of colored gloves by pitchers, Washington manager Ted Williams said Saturday. "There are enough things to distract the hitters as it is," Williams said. "There should be a regulation that a pitcher can use only the regular tan glove."

The three Philadelphia Phillies' unsigned players who are represented by an agent made little progress in salary negotiations . . . Phillies' general manager John Quinn met with the agent, Mark Quinn, and the three players — Don Money, Larry Bowa and Chris Short—but later reported there was no "substantial progress." There are five other Phils unsigned.

49er Nine Wins Two of Three

Cal State Long Beach learned Saturday that three baseball games in 12 hours is one too many.

The 49ers amassed 20 hits in disposing of visiting San Francisco State, 5-2 and 8-1, in a daylight doubleheader but had little left for UCLA Saturday night at Blair Field.

Bruin ace Rick Pope put the 49ers down on six well-spaced hits as UCLA took its second decision in three meetings with Cal State, 6-2.

Coach John Gonsalves got route-going performances from righthanders Gary Addeo and Ray Brown in the daytime contests as the 49ers improved their season record to 8-3.

The Bruins lowered that standard a notch by jumping on John Keisler for 10 hits and five runs in eight innings. Two-run doubles, by Dave Landress (third inning) and Mike Gerakos (fourth) got the Bruins all the runs they needed to hike their record to 8-5.

Pope was in trouble only in the fourth when Jim Seida reached on an error, Dario Pini singled and Mike Douglas doubled home both with none out.

Pope (3-0) got Dave Demarest to line back to him for an inning-ending double play and then retired 17 of the last 19 batters he faced. Pope finished with 12 strikeouts.

Cal State's only offensive bright spots were Pini, getting a shot at shortstop, and Seida, returning after a bout with the flu.

Pini had six hits in the three games and Seida four.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Title Fight: A Divided House

The Frazier-Ali heavyweight championship fight March 8—one week from Monday night—may be the richest sports events in history but it has created a division between black businessmen.

On the one hand several prominent blacks such as Joe Louis, Sugar Ray Robinson, Archie Moore, businessmen, civic leaders, politicians, claim the "Fight of Champions" has created more significant black involvement than any other single entertainment event in the history of this country.

Sugar Ray, former middleweight champion and one of the unofficial black athletic leaders in Southern California, declared during the past week that "concerning the role of the black community in this historic event, not only are the two principals and their managers black, but together they are grossing and netting more money than almost any other black business in the United States."

On the other hand, however, three black promoters —two Los Angeles attorneys and a building contractor— have accused the Jack Kent Cooke promotion of being a conspiracy and four days ago filed a whopping $45 million suit against Cooke and his partner, Jerry Perenchio, president of a Beverly Hills and New York talent agency with annual bookings of $30 million.

The Southland trio charged that Cooke and others, including two men they have labeled "black Benedict Arnolds," conspired to grab promotional and closed-circuit television rights to the multi-million dollar bash.

WHILE POOH-POOHING the charges as "sour grapes" and "the viciousness of poor losers," Negro businessmen cite 10 points to show how this one boxing match has "united" black communities "except for contemptible, isolated cases."

The popular Sugar Ray calls the 10 points "representative of black achievement and excellence." Herewith they are listed:

1. Both principals are black.

2. Both fight managers, Yank Durham and Herbert Muhammad, are black.

3. More black promoters are involved than ever before, including Robinson and Dootsie Williams in Compton; Charlie Powell, former San Francisco 49er professional football player and heavyweight boxer in San Diego; Congress of Racial Equality in Harlem; Operation Breadbasket in Chicago; and major arena operators and promoters in St. Louis, Houston, Atlanta and Oakland.

4. The $5 million divided between Ali and Frazier represents one of the highest gross of any black business in the country and is one of the most profitable business arrangements ever made in the black community.

5. More than 200 black employes have been hired by the fighters as business associates, trainers, lawyers, secretaries, public relations directors, etc.

BOTH ROBINSON and Louis consider the next point a very important one.

6. For the first time, a film of a major sporting event will be made by a black motion picture company using a predominantly black crew. The company, William Greaves Productions, now has three film crews—one in Miami, one in Philadelphia and another in New York—covering the events leading up to and including the fight. Of the 25 people working on the production, 17 are black.

7. Several financial contributions will be made to prominent black organizations which include the University of Islam, "Fight of Champion" college scholarships to the National Scholarship and Service Fund for Negro Students; Operation of Breadbasket of Chicago, and Operation Charity of Philadelphia.

(The proposed contribution to University of Islam touched off a mild controversy within the black leaders' group, but all went along with it at the dogged insistence of Muhammad Ali.)

8. The finder and initial contact for the fight's arrangement is black — Eugene Dibble, a Chicago businessman and elected public official.

9. Three blacks have key roles in the fight's promotion—John Ali, closed circuit coordinator; Chuck Stone, press secretary (shades of Nixon), Kennedy, Eisenhower, et al), and a prominent black ringside commentator. It is thought here that the latter role will be filled by Robinson, a pleasant, knowledgeable talker who certainly should contribute more to the affair than one already contracted by Cooke, Burt Lancaster.

10. The culimination of a long and hard battle by Muhammad Ali for black liberation and black self-sufficiency and self-respect through a series of innumerable social obstacles.

(The black establishment apparently has a leaning toward the loquacious Mr. Muhammad Ali.)

MEANWHILE, back on the other side of the street, the three black promoters who filed suit claim that they have a clear case of traitorism against the two "Benedict Arnolds" who originally represented their black group in negotiations and now are working for Cooke.

"Two of our own agents turned on our group to help another group deprive us of our chance to swim in the mainstream of American industry," charged one black promoter.

"Our black men, influenced by Cooke's group, turned against us. We made every effort to compete in the traditional American manner. At one point we were willing to post a $5.2 million guarantee for the fight, $200,000 more than was posted."

Crossing color lines, the plaintiffs charged additionally that Cooke's "high-handed methods left a bad taste in the mouths of both blacks and whites all over the United States."

Boxing has created black involvement with production of the Frazier-Ali match.

Arizona Triangular Win

Sprinter Jackie White won the 100 and 220 and anchored a winning 440 relay team Saturday as Arizona dominated a triangular track and field meet with Arizona State and Occidental.

White, former California state high school sprint champion from Santa Ana, won the 100 in 9.8 against a stiff wind and then took the furlong in 21.4. The winning Wildcat relay team was clocked in 42.1.

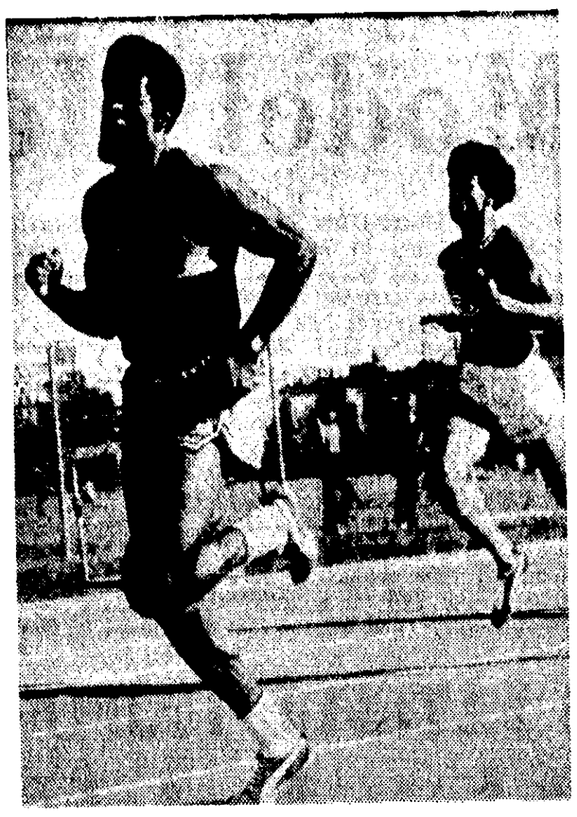

Mark Murro, Arizona State's American javelin record holder, began his comeback from 1970 injuries, winning his specialty with a toss of 249.5.

Oxy's Hugh Brown won the 440 in the good early-season time of 47.7. He also ran a 46.9 lap on the winning mile relay.

That mile relay victory enabled the host Tigers to beat ASU in dual meet scoring, 77-67.

Arizona won the triangular 87-55-39 with Arizona State second. Arizona took ASU in their dual meet 86-59 and the Wildcats beat Oxy 105-41.

At San Diego, freshman Jerry Culp set a San Diego State high jump record Saturday, leaping 7-1 in a dual meet between the Aztecs and the San Diego Track Club.

MOORE SHOWS WAY
Cal State Long Beach sprinter Dan Moore, shown here winning 220 in 21.1 over UCLA's Reggie Echols, also won the 100 and anchored 49ers' winning 440 relay team.

49er Spikers Give UCLA a Good Run

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Jack Rose didn't look like a coach who had just lost, 101-44.

"We're extremely pleased with the outcome," smiled Rose after his 49ers were blitzed by UCLA's talented track troops Saturday afternoon in Westwood.

"I don't think we could have squeezed another point out of the meet," continued Rose. "We're very happy with the way the kids performed."

The 49ers went into the meet at UCLA's stylish track stadium hopeful of being competitive in the sprint relay, the sprints and the two-mile.

Cal State got more than even the optimistic Rose had hoped for — victories in the 440 relay, 100, 220, second in the 440 and first in the two-mile to give the 49ers a 27-14 edge in those events.

Rose was ready to pack his bags and return to Long Beach when the 49ers overcame a poor exchange between Curtis Biggers and Eugene Jones and upset the Bruins by a 10th of a second in the 440 relay.

Jones overcame the bad exchange, making up almost eight yards on John Smith before handing to Ernest London. London gave Danny Moore a four-yard edge going into the final leg and the 49er captain protected that advantage as the 49ers won in 40.7.

Jones came back to run 47.2, a lifetime best, in pushing Smith to a 47.0 win in the 440.

Moore won the 100 in unusual fashion.

He was trailing Warren Edmondson 20 yards from the finish when the Bruin flash suffered a charley horse and pulled up, Moore whizzing past in 9.6 even though he was running virtually sideways to see what had happened to Edmondson.

Moore came back to win the 220 in a heady 21.1. despite coasting the final 40 yards.

Cal State's final victory came when Mike Wood won the two-mile in 8:59.6. Wood was boxed on the first lap but built a 70-yard lead a half-mile later and was never challenged.

The 49ers also got a brilliant field event effort from workhorse Doyle Steel, who finished second in the triple jump (school record, lifetime best 49-¾), third in the long jump (24-2½) and third in the high jump (6-6).

UCLA got a weight double from Mark Ostoich (61-½ shot, 179-8 discus), a 6-10 high jump by Doug Huff, a 1:52.6 880 victory by sprinter Wayne Collett, a 25-9½ long jump by freshman Jim McAlister and a 51-8 triple jump by Denny Rogers.

WRESTLERS PROVE SKILL TO BURGLAR

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A burglary suspect in Sacramento still may be wondering what hit him.

A suspect identified as Sidney E. Wallace, 20, was booked at city jail Friday on a burglary charge after being captured by wrestlers Ray Stevens and Rich Renaldo.

The wrestlers were visiting a friend early Friday when they heard an alarm ring at a nearby television store and saw two men running inside the shop. When they investigated, the two suspects fled in different directions.

The wrestlers told police they managed to catch one of the suspects, who tried to kick Renaldo. But Renaldo belted his opponent and quickly ended the match.

CHARLIE POWELL: Title Fight Won't Last 15 Rounds

A guy who fought 'em both "when," Charlie Powell, makes only one firm forecast about the heavyweight title titanic a week from Monday It won't last 15 rounds.

But if it turns into a track meet, Powell picks Muhammad Ali to win by a nose — Joe Frazier's bloody nose.

"Ali just might be hitting him so much that they'd have to stop it," says Powell, who capped

TITLE TICKETS ON SALE

Tickets for the closed circuit title television fight March 8 between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier are on sale at Long Beach Arena box offices.

eight years as a defensive end for the San Francisco 49ers and Oakland Raiders with a brief but moderately successful boxing career.

What are the chances of Frazier, the 7-5 favorite?

"Only way he's going to win is by a knockout," says Powell. "But I wouldn't bet more than a fifth of whiskey either way. Especially in the heavyweights, one punch can turn the whole thing around — and neither of these guys has ever lost."

Powell is a man of many talents. Now in the soft drink business in San Diego, he has a piece of the closed-circuit TV promotion at the International Sports Arena.

As a high school football player, he was San Diego's first CIF player of the year. But instead of accepting a college offer, he signed a pro baseball contract with — are you ready? — the St. Louis Browns.

"Then one day I was standing in the outfield during a doubleheader at Pocatello, Idaho," Powell recalls, "and I decided I didn't like baseball. The game was too slow for me. I always liked contact."

His wish was soon answered. He went home and was sitting on his front porch when 49er coach Buck Shaw drove up and asked him to sign with San Francisco, which had just landed a hot rookie prospect named Hugh McElhenny.

"I WAS 19 YEARS OLD," Powell says. "They were using me as an offensive end — I could run a 9.7 100 — but because of injuries on the team I had to start at defensive end in the league opener against Detroit, the defending champion.

"I was spitting up teeth all day long — but I personally threw Bobby Layne for 67 yards in losses, and we won the game."

Powell played six years with the 49ers, quit to became a fighter, returned to football with the Raiders when he "got hungry," then quit again "to get whatever I could out of fighting before I got too old."

Eight years ago, a 6-3, 215-pound contender himself, he fought Ali in Pittsburgh — "two fights before he won the title from (Sonny) Liston. He knocked me out in the third round with a good clean punch.

"I could tell then he was no ordinary fighter. I hit him with a very good right hand to the body that darn near jack-knifed him, and he came back.

"This guy is strong enough and big enough that Frazier can't bull him around. That's why (Oscar) Bonavena has gone the distance with Frazier twice. Ali was strong enough to tie up Liston when he was only 21. He's a grown man now."

Powell sparred with Frazier one day five or six years ago at Jake Shugrue's 78th and Hoover gym in Los Angeles.

"He's very awesome," Powell says. "Ali isn't going to discourage him.

"But a key point in this fight might be that neither man has ever been cut. The first time you get cut, with that blood streaming down and those punches coming in, it's a very frightening thing. How would these guys react?"

Another key point, Powell believes, will be the size of the ring.

"When they get to New York next week a very big thing is going to be the size of that ring. The smaller it is, the better it will be for Frazier. But Angelo Dundee (Ali's manager) is a very shrewd man. I'm sure he'll see that Ali gets a good shake.

"The way I look at it, it's a 'pick 'em'."

BILLIE JEAN, ROSIE MOVE INTO FINALS

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — Billie Jean King of Long Beach and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, the top-seeded Americans, disposed of the leading foreign entries Saturday to move into the finals of the $12,500 National Women's Indoor Tennis championships.

Mrs. King eliminated Ann Hayden Jones of Britain, 6-2, 6-2. Miss Casals ousted Francoise Durr of France, 6-3, 6-2.

Billie Jean and Rosie meet today in the finals for the sixth time in eight tournaments on the Virginia Slims $100,000 women's pro circuit. The winner will receive $2,500, the runnerup $1,800.

LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT SHOWDOWN

Venezuelan Wins Crown

CARACAS (UPI) — Vicente Paul Rondon of Venezuela knocked out Jimmy Dupree of Jersey City at 2:58 of the sixth round Saturday night to win the World Boxing Assoc. light-heavyweight championship of the world.

The referee stepped between the fighters and ended the bout as Dupree hung helplessly on the ropes and Rondon pounded away.

The American was a 7-5 favorite and ranked first in the light-heavyweight division by the WBA. The WBA stripped the title from Bob Foster earlier this year for refusing to fight Dupree.

It was the 31st victory against four defeats for Rondon. The 35-year-old Dupree's record dropped to 31-6-2.

If Money Talks, Frazier Will Have the Last Word

NEW YORK (AP) — Pressure is building for The Fight — Muhammad Ali is talking faster than ever while Joe Frazier is hardly talking at all.

Frazier says he is saving his talking for Ali when they meet in a scheduled 15-round title bout at Madison Square Garden on the night of Monday, March 8.

If money talks, Frazier will have the last word. The heavyweight champion has been made the 7-5 favorite by the Nevada bookmakers.

Frazier has become increasingly incommunicative with sportswriters covering his training sessions in Philadelphia while Ali has increased his sayings and ramblings to the point that writers covering him in Miami Beach run the risk of being overwhelmed.

"I don't mind talking to you guys, it's just that I always know what you're going to ask," Frazier said.

This reluctance to be interviewed grows into a moody silence as a fight approaches.

Ali's chatter increases as a fight approaches until it reaches the point when it often seems he doesn't even care if anybody is listening.

At the weighins for his fights with Jerry Quarry and Oscar Bonavena, Ali put on non-stop talking performances.

"I'm gonna talk to Clay," said Frazier, whose most telling shots in his verbal skirmishes with Ali are his references to Ali as Clay.

"There ain't gonna be no fight if you don't stop calling me Clay," Ali muttered at the fight signing.

Frazier's previous verbal assaults in the ring match his fighting style — right to the point, nothing fancy.

"That's your best punch baby, you're a sissy. You don't hit any harder than a girl. Now it's my time," he told Jimmy Ellis before knocking him out.

NEWCOMERS PERFORM LIKE VETERANS
If freshmen Mike Wood and Jim McAlister continue to come through as they did Saturday, there's no telling what kind of track season is in store for them. Cal State Long Beach's Wood, from Liverpool, England, won 2-mile in 8:59.6 over Ruben Mejia. McAlister, who came to UCLA on football scholarship, soared 25-9½ in long jump.

51 Drivers Chasing $207,675 at Ontario

By ALLEN WOLFE

ONTARIO — The element of surprise is fine for birthday parties, but not auto racing.

That's the situation drivers face today for the inaugural running of the Miller High-Life 500 at Ontario Motor Speedway.

A turnout of 85,000 was expected to begin filing through the turnstiles at 4 a.m. this morning awaiting the 11 o'clock green flag for the $207,675 event richest purse in grand national stock car history.

For the 51 drivers who will line the starting grid, the race offers several unknowns — a factor most drivers would just as soon do without.

"It's going to take a whole lot of nerve to drive this course at top speed," says Bobby Isaac, 1970 grand national champion who qualified his 1971 Dodge Charger second on the grid at 150.097 mph. "They didn't build this thing for stock car racing. It is going to be a real challenge, and the guy with the most nerve — and willing to use it—is going to have the advantage."

The 2.5 mile low-profile (9-degree) banked turns at Ontario are unique to grand national racing, a circuit dominated by southern tracks like Daytona International Raceway where 32-degree banks in the turns are commonplace. Such ovals virtually "hold" the car to the track by centrifugal force at speeds approaching 185 mph.

"If it were a dirt track," stated Isaac, "I'd hang the car's rear end out and slide through the turns. That would be the natural way around.

"But you can't do that on asphalt. So, we're going to have to brake heavily going into the turns — and trust to luck after that."

Another factor, and one that has caused mild controversy throughout the week, is that for the first time in NASCAR history cars will line the pre-grid three abreast in 17 rows.

"Back home we never start more than two side-by-side," grins Isaac, who hails from Catawba, N.C. "That means the up-front starters are going to have to take a deep breath and hold it for awhile. Three cars going into that first turn together is going to require fortitude.

"If I'm up there near the front, I'm going to back off and let the nervy ones have it. I don't want any part of it."

The action won't be limited to the track, either.

Evel Knievel, the surgeon's best friend who once commented, "Some people say I fell on my head when I was six months old — and never recovered," will attempt to jump his big Harley-Davidson motorcycle over 19 cars at 10 a.m. as a featured prelude to the race.

If he succeeds, Knievel will break his existing "world record" of 18 set last year in Seattle. The Montana daredevil once attempted to vault over the water fountain at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, but fell short of the mark. He was hospitalized for several weeks with a broken spine and fractured skull.

Evel warmed up to his task by easily clearing 15 cars Saturday immediately following the conclusion of the Sportman's 250 won by George Folmer. "I broke the index finger of my right hand when the handlebars collapsed," he said, "but I'll be back tomorrow. All it needs is a little tape."

Follmer Captures Sportsman's 250 —by Three Feet

ONTARIO — George Follmer and Sonny Easley are listed as stock car drivers, but for a few tense seconds Saturday it appeared they were more suited to drag racing.

Follmer, the former insurance broker from Arcadia, gunned his 1961 Ford Fairlane to a dramatic victory over Easley in the $38,250 Sportsman's 250 race for early model stock cars at Ontario Motor Speedway.

The margin of victory was three feet.

After dueling for 99 laps, 247.5-miles and two hours and three minutes over Ontario's 2.5-mile oval, the race remained a tossup with less than a car length separating the pair as NASCAR official Pete Keller gave Follmer the white flag signalling one lap to go.

What transpired during the minute that followed would rival anything turned out by a Hollywood script writer. A crowd of 21,038 can attest to it.

Follmer went deep into the groove through turn one and maintained his lead in the short shute heading for turn two, Easley glued to his tail.

Sonny made his move coming off the second turn. Executing a perfect "slingshot" maneuver past Follmer, he stretched out a two car length advantage on the back straightway.

Almost unbelievably, Easley's engine, which had performed magnificently all afternoon, let go entering the third turn with clouds of blue smoke enveloping Follmer's car.

Sonny maintained control of his ailing 1964 Ford and still held the lead as the two drivers entered the long three-quarter mile front straight. It was a drag race to the checkered flag.

Follmer swung wide to the left, pulled even with Easley's faltering car barely 100 feet from the finish and won by a mere wheel well.

"I knew what Sonny was up to," commented Follmer after the thrilling finish. "He did exactly what I thought he would — slingshot past me on the back straight. He really set me up, but there was nothing I could do to prevent it.

"I was pretty sure I could get the lead back on the front straight because my car had a little more flat-out speed. Sonny's blown engine didn't affect me too much, it was mostly smoke, not oil."

It was a bitter defeat for Easley, a 31-year-old fender and body repairman from Van Nuys.

"I started losing oil pressure with three laps to go," revealed the father of four. "All I could do was hope it would hold, but it didn't. I think we burnt a piston. The car slowed considerably when George passed me. I just don't know . . ."

Follmer led nine different times for 66 laps at the wheel of his yellow 350-cubic inch Ford.

It was an appropriate color.

Marvin Panch, former NASCAR great now retired, was awarded 38 leading laps — and he wasn't even entered in the race. Panch, driving the 1971 Dodge Charger pace car, assumed the lead every time the yellow caution flag was displayed for oil on the track or minor wrecks and spins which plagued the event.

With better than one-third of the race being run under the caution, Follmer's average speed was a paltry 120.064 mph, considering pole sitter Clem Proctor qualified at 141.882 mph.

LYON, France — Building on her commanding figure skating lead, European champion Beatrix (Trixi) Schuba of Austria free-skated to the 1971 women's world ice skating championship Saturday night with Julie Lynn Holmes of Los Angeles in second place.

WINTER SPORTS

North American champion Karen Magnussen of Vancouver, B.C., was third with 17-year-old Janet Lynn of Rockton, Ill., fourth to a standing ovation from the 10,000 crowd at the Sports Palace.

Miss Lynn came on the ice third from last and stole the show. The slim blonde wore a pink dress for a dazzling display of jumps and spins that won her the best marks of the night from seven of the nine judges. This included two top scores of 6.0 points for interpretation which drew a roar of approval from the crowd.

The Austrian and Hungarian judges on the panel, however, drew whistles and catcalls when they gave her two points less than maximum.

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE — Gustavo Thoeni, the young Italian skier who may revolutionize the sport with his new style, plowed through a blinding snowstorm at Heavenly Valley Saturday to win the men's giant slalom and take a firm grip on this year's world cup title.

Thoeni, slammed down the 61-gate men's course with its 1,675 foot vertical drop in 1:33.56 seconds to finish third for the day but he wound up the winner in the overall time of 3:10.27 because of an easy 1:36.71 victory in the first run Friday.

INZELL, Germany — Anne Henning of Northbrook, Ill., who set a world speed skating record of 42.91 seconds for 500 meters in the sprint championships here last weekend, won that event Saturday at the two-day Golden Skates competition.

Soutar Annexes 12th PBA Crown

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Dave Soutar collected the 12th Professional Bowlers Assn. title of his career Saturday when he rolled a solid 209-160 victory over Don Johnson in the $10,000 Miller Open tournament.

Johnson, Akron, O., advanced to the finale by whipping Johnny Petraglia, Brooklyn 224-161. The second-place finish earned Johnson $6,000 and Petraglia won $3,000 for third place.

Petraglia began the day with ousting Bill Beach, Sharon, Pa., by a score of 201-194. Petraglia then nipped Joe Joseph in the most exciting match of the day, 237-235.

LINDA KURTZ
U.S. Record Holder

Atwood, Simmons, Kurtz Dominate U.S. Swim Team

The United States women swimming team competing in West Germany this week lists three Long Beach athletes among its four members.

Susie Atwood and Ann Simmons, both 17 years old and seniors at Millikan High, swim for the Lakewood Aquatic Club, while Linda Kurtz is a 23-year-old Cal State Long Beach junior, who represents Phillips 66 of Long Beach.

They will be joined by Lynn Colella, 18, outstanding butterflyer of the Cascade Swim Club in Seattle.

Teams from East and West Germany, the Soviet Union, England, France, Yugoslavia, Hungary, and Italy will compete against the United States team in a three-day meet in Bremen, West Germany beginning Friday.

The Long Beach swimmers were selected because each was a 1970 national champion in one or more events.

Miss Atwood, world record holder in the backstroke led the U.S. last year in her specialty and in the 400-meter individual medley. Susie's toughest competition in Bremen will come from Andrea Gyarmati of Hungary in the backstroke and Evelyn Stolze, East Germany's European record holder in the individual medley.

Miss Simmons will be challenging East Germany's Gabriel Wetzco in both the 200 and 400-meter freestyle events. Gabriel ranked first in the world last year in the 200 while Ann was No. 2. In the 400-meter distance Ann will have the pre-meet edge based on their 1970 times.

Reported to be the oldest national champion in U.S. swimming history at 23, Miss Kurtz began swimming in 1957 and won her first U.S. title last year. A powerful breaststroker Linda will be facing, for the second time, Galina Stepanova and Alla Grebenikova of the Soviet Union, two of Europe's leading swimmers. Linda's first encounter was at the World Student Games in Turin, Italy, last September.

Susie, Ann, and Linda have represented the U.S. in foreign countries before, but this is the first time they all have been together.

Susie went to Yugoslavia and West Germany last summer and then joined Ann in September on the U.S. team touring Japan, Philippines, and Hawaii. This will be Linda's third European trip in as many years.

Neither Jim Montrella, coach of Lakewood Aquatic Club, nor Don Gambril of Phillips 66 and Cal State Long Beach will be accompanying their charges due to their own heavy training schedules.

"This is a marvelous opportunity for our U.S. swimmers to meet some of the finest European competitors — perhaps the same ones who will compete in the Munich Olympics next year," says Gambril.

"The Bremen meet is a high point of European competition each year and I'm sure they have all tapered down to do well against our U.S. team," claims Montrella.

"I think our girls will make a good representation even though they will be traveling with no workout time, for two full days just prior to the meet."

S'Anita Hit by Ack Ack, Shoemaker

Even-money favorite Ack Ack made it a runaway in the $88,200 San Antonio Stakes at Santa Anita Saturday and reinforced his claim as the favorite for the Santa Anita Handicap.

Jockey Bill Shoemaker, registering his fourth trip to the winner circle under sunny skies before a crowd of 44,000, sent the top-weighted Ack Ack, 124, into a quick lead and breezed home 3¼ lengths in front of a longshot, Good Manners.

Plucky Hanalei Bay, 117, was third in the field of 11 older horses in this final major test leading up to the big Cap March 13.

The time for the 1⅛-mile run on a fast track was 1:47. Ack Ack paid $4, $3.60 and $2.60.

Good Manners, lightly weighted at 115 and ridden by Ismael Valenzuela, paid $17.60 and $7.40 and Hanalei Bay $2.80.

The 5-year-old Ack Ack was purchased several weeks ago from the estate of the Cain Hoy Stable for a reported $500,000 by E. E. (Buddy) Fogelson and his actress wife Greer Garson, for their Forked Lightning Ranch. Ack Ack has earned $127,900 at this meeting.

The San Antonio victory was worth $54,450 and Ack Ack's previous stakes victories at this meeting were in the San Pasqual and San Carlos handicaps.

Figonero, 122 and ridden by Alvaro Pineda, was the second betting choice following his triumph in the San Francisco Mile at Golden Gate a week ago.

The 6-year-old Figonero was never far out of it most of the way but he couldn't catch Ack Ack nor the lightly regarded Good Manners. Figonero was fourth.

Warheim, the upset winner of the Charles H. Strub Stakes two weeks ago, raced in the middle of the pack but couldn't run back to the form he showed in the Strub.

Loud, 117, remained something of a mystery compared to his 1970 performances and never figured.

It was the seventh time Shoemaker had won the San Antonio and it was the 510th stakes victory of his celebrated career.

Shoe won the first race Saturday on Jim N Jan for $14.40, the fifth on Wife's Objection for $10.80 and the sixth on Opening Bid for $4.20.

By winning the fourth race on Peace Message, Laffit Pincay, Jr., maintained his streak of consecutive racing days with at least one winner a day. Saturday was No. 20.

The record covers the entire 20 racing days in February of the current Santa Anita season, from Feb. 2 through 27.

Pincay rode one other day in February, on the 16th at Golden Gate Fields, and he had a winner there, too, in the featured stakes with Kfar Tov.

The former Santa Anita record prior to Pincay was 16, first set by John Longden, then equalled on three occasions by Shoemaker.

Drumtop Hialeah Surprise

Fort Marcy Third in $143,600 Race

Combined News Services

MIAMI — Drumtop, the only female in the field, scored a stunning upset in the $143,600 Hialeah Turf Cup Saturday as she broke the track record for 1½ miles and defeated The Pruner by a head.

Fort Marcy, the prohibitive favorite, tired in the drive after leading most of the way and finished third, ¾ lengths behind the top pair and three quarters of a length in front of Shelter Bay.

Drumtop, the first filly or mare to win the Turf Cup, was timed in 2:26 4-5 over a very hard course and broke the track record by 2-5 of a second.

Ridden by Chuck Baltazar, Drumtop paid $28.80, $8.60 and $3.60. The Pruner paid $7 and 3.60 while Fort Marcy, the 3-5 choice with the crowd of 24,601, paid $2.40 to show.

The winner carried 119 pounds. Fort Marcy the horse of the year in 1970, was the highweight at 128 pounds.

Drumtop, a five-year-old daughter of Round Table, earned $93,340 for the victory. Last year she won four of 16 starts, was second six times and earned $109,708.

BOWIE, Md. — Lion Sleeps had a six-race win streak snapped at Bowie Saturday as Towzie Tyke came on in the stretch to win the $28,350 Bowie Handicap at seven furlongs.

Second, three-quarters of a length behind the winner, was Dance To Market.

NEW ORLEANS — Boldwood, an 8-1 longshot, mastered the field to take a surprising victory in the $25,000-added A.B. Leteller Memorial Handicap before 16,571 Saturday at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Ridden by Louis Spindler, Boldwood covered the 1⅛-mile distance in 1:51⅘, paying $19.80, $8.80 and $5.60.

Player Trails His Host

four-stroke advantage, though, will be a formidable assignment for Player, who admits "I'm playing the best golf of my life right now."

It was two years ago, at Dayton, that Player trailed Ray Floyd by five strokes entering the final round of the PGA. Player came within a stroke then, almost wiping out the biggest 54-hole advantage since the PGA format was switched from match play in 1958.

Player shot both sides in 34, scoring five birdies without a bogey. He started the day six strokes back after rounds of 71 and 73.

"I could have shot 64 just as easy," the crewcut Sauth African said. "I putted well and just missed a couple of long putts that could have fell. This is as fine a round of golf as I can play.

"I've been playing in a lot in the wind in Capetown so I guess I'm a little used to it."

Gilbert, from Ft. Lauderdale, was paired with Nicklaus and, added Jack, outplayed the Golden Bear on the front nine.

But Gilbert bogeyed No. 11 and then double bogeyed the 12th. He hit into a bunker and needed two strokes to get out, losing five strokes to Nicklaus on the two holes.

Nicklaus admits there's added pressured playing before his home fans. To battle it he's simply staying at home.

"I've stayed out of everything socially," he said. "The crowds have been great and it's nice to see a lot of your friends following you. But there's pressure. Too, I have an office in Palm Beach Gardens and I haven't even been there for two weeks."

"You know," he added with a grin, "television isn't all that bad."

MORTENSEN MASTERS LEADER

"I almost hit it out on No. 1 and No. 9," said the 25-year-old collegian. "A sand trap saved me once."

Mortensen's round included a 90-foot chip shot for a birdie on the par-3, 163-yard second hole, but all three of his bogies came on par-3 holes. His other birdie was on the par-4 13th.

Putting made the difference as Mortensen, the 1969 Masters champion, needed only 27 taps, four better than his closest pursuer. He also chipped well.

Cook and Fedderly were supposed to challenge Mortensen, but Cook putted poorly and Fedderly had those two OBs, plus his iron play was not up to par.

The 22-year-old Cook, who shot back-to-back 68s at Los Alamitos some months ago, three-putted five greens and finished with a whopping total of 38.

"I've been putting worse than that," said the former city champion who managed to smile every time he missed a makeable putt — which was often.

Considering that Cook failed on eight putts of eight feet or less, including 1 and 2-footers, his round of 74 wasn't so bad.

He did predict a birdie on the 18th hole and delivered with a 12-footer.

For about 13 holes the weather was perfect, but a bone-chilling wind came up and the last five holes proved the downfall of several of the golfers.

Jim Craig had a chance to stay within two strokes of Mortensen, but he missed a three-foot putt on No. 17 for a bogey and then hit out-of-bounds on No. 18.

Brett canned 50 and 30-footers for birdies on Nos. 13 and 14 to creep within two shots of the lead, only to lose three strokes on the 16th and 17th holes when he hit traps.

Sato lost four shots on OBs in the last four holes.

Everyone seemed to be putting in bad luck. Craig had several go in-and-out, and there were only a half-dozen putts sank from more than 10 feet.

Fedderly rolled in a 60-footer from off the green on No. 6 and a 20-footer on No. 15. Brett had his two long ones and Cook holed a pair of 12-footers, but that was about the size of it.

Action shifts to Lakewood today, beginning at 10 a.m. The 72-hole tournament ends next weekend at El Dorado and Meadowlark.

Flood, now with the Washington Senators sued baseball a year ago when he was traded by St.Louis to Philadelphia. He sat out the entire year as the law suit, which challenges the legality of the reserve clause, was dismissd but is now under appeal.

Giusti attended the annual spring meeting of the Assn. Friday in Miami.

49ers Prohibitive Pick for PCAA Swim Crown

Cal State Long Beach, virtually unchallenged in league competition since Don Gambril became head coach four years ago, is heavily favored to win the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. swim championships which will be contested Friday and Saturday at Belmont Plaza Olympic pool.

The 49ers have won three successive conference titles under Gambril and are expected to do nearly as well this weekend as they did last year when they won 15 of the 18 events in the PCAA meet.

"We're in pretty good shape," Gambril reports, indicating his swimmers have gotten over the bout they were having with the flu last weekend when they finished their dual meet season with a 68-43 victory over Pacific and a 11-0 forfeit decision over San Jose State.

The double triumph hiked Cal State's season record to 13-0 and its three-year win streak to 33. The 49ers actually have records of 14-0 and 34-0, but one this season was over Golden West Junior College and the NCAA does not allow NCAA teams to count contests with junior colleges.

Following the PCAA meet, which will have sessions at 1 and 8 p.m. each day, the 49ers will enter the NCAA championships at Iowa State in Ames, Ia., hoping to improve a fifth-place finish from last season.

TEACH, PLAY TENNIS

Kathy Harter Will Court Two Careers

Kathy Harter, 24, one of the nation's most famous women tennis players, will join the staff of Old Ranch Tennis Club in Seal Beach Tuesday as a teaching pro.

Announcement of her appointment was made Saturday by Bob Litrich, who on Feb. 1 succeeded Glenn Turnbull as director of tennis at the club.

Mark Elliott will continue as a resident pro, and Litrich also will continue to do some teaching.

"Kathy will give private and group lessons and will be involved especially in our big junior program this summer," Litrich said. Non-members as well as members may take lessons at the club's courts.

Miss Harter and Elliott returned recently from a series of tournaments in Australia and New Zealand. They shared several mixed doubles titles and Kathy won a number of women's singles crowns.

Kathy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Aubrey Harter, is a product of Long Beach's courts. Dr. Harter is a former Wilson High coach and tennis pro at Lakewood Country Club. The Harter family lives in Seal Beach now.

Miss Harter was a semi-finalist at Wimbledon in 1967 and was ranked No. 5 in the nation in 1968. A wrist injury sidelined her for most of 1969.

"Kathy plans to play at Wimbledon and Forest Hills but will be with us most of the summer," Litrich said.

Twins, Giants Tangle Today

The Long Beach Twins met the San Francisco Giant Minor Leaguers today in an exhibition game at 1:30 at Houghton Park.

Last Sunday the Twins came from behind to down the L.A. Lions, 3-2.

Fate Young's Twins finished in second place in the Southern California Baseball Assn's American Winter League, one game behind the Long Beach Rockets. The Giants finished third in the league's traveling division.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

New Officers for L.B. Rod and Gun

The Long Beach Rod and Gun Club, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in this area and which has had its ups an downs through the years, came to life again in 1970 with several new members — "young blood," the outgoing president called them — and it pointing toward an even more active year now.

BERYL BUNCH
Takes Over Gavel

The club had its annual installation, dinner and dance at the Long Beach Elks Club Saturday night, with Beryle Bunch taking over the gavel from John Charney, who automatically became a member of the board of directors.

Bunch an his wife, Jackie, live at 1917 Harding St., and they have four children, Susie, 20, living at home; the others, Janet, 21, Andy, 23, and Nancy, 25, are away from the family nest. Andy is doing his bit for Uncle Sam in Vietnam.

The club had its own home at 3333 Pacific Ave. and has a very strict conservation policy. It welcomes visitors on certain nights and hoped to increase its membership again this year. Taking office with Bunch were Lee Rutledge, vice president; Jack Heber, secretary; Jackie Moore, treasurer; Sid Carpenter, recording secretary, directors Jess Harper and John Homuller, plus Charney, the outgoing president.

Trophies went to Dick Power, fisherman of the year, most ducks and geese an largest bonito; Bunch, most chukar and pheasant; Jess Harper, largest bass an largest deer; George Hutchison, hunter of the year, Terry Pertee, most quail; Willie Macy, largest corbina, John Homuller, largest corvina, and Al Hiatt, largest trout.

THIS NEXT SUBJECT ISN'T NEARLY as pleasant to write about as club installations and sportsmanship. In fact sportsmanship and good feelings among adults for children are forgotten in such situations and the "meat hogs" move in to get their share, or else. What's more, the City of Long Beach apparently has to go along with the old codgers who will push kids out of the way to catch a few trout or small catfish.

I'm speaking of El Dorado Park East, the city's newest recreational area, with a couple of small ponds (eight surface acres to be exact that will support sunfish, even trout for a short time and catfish, especially the bullhead variety.

The City of Long Beach had El Dorado Park East planted with fish at its Feb. 6 opening. Recreation Department officials were hoping that the youngsters would have a chance to fish an get the utmost enjoyment in catching what might be the first fishes of their lives. So what happened? The so-called senior citizens raised such a howl about the plan that the City of Long Beach said that all persons had a right to fish there.

Some complaints have come to me from youthful supporters that elderly men came from Leisure World, even Santa Ana and Anaheim with fishing outfits, "beach chairs" and virtually took over the fishing that first week.

WHEN I TOURED THE AREA LAST SUNDAY for the first time, I watched kids trying for an hour without success. Where were the fish? Virually all had been caught on that first day and, I'm told by at least a half-dozen adults, the boys and girls got very few of those fish.

Anther plan is to be made sometime this week and I presume that the same thing will occur. In fact, I know it will.

When the Tackle Busters an other kids have their five-hour City-Wide Fishing Derby at Belmont Pier in August, I always make pleas for the grownups to let hundreds of boys and girls have the pier.

Invariably, some of the old Belmont Pier "hardheads" come down with their equipment an announce that they have a right to their favorite bench.

The same thing happens at Legg Lakes, a group of ponds just off Rosemead Boulevard that the Department of Fish and Game plants, hoping that the youngsters will get a chance. The DFG, incidentally, stocks only those areas that will support trout for at least a week, and the total water surface acreage must be at least 20 acres.

Ed Dorado Park has become a wonderful place for young and old. If you don't think so, go out there and have a look. Enter the new areas off Spring Street east of Studebaker Road, There is something for every age to enjoy and it's real wilderness in many spots, but please, let the kids have first chance at the fishing.

THE 1971 FISHING REGULATIONS regarding licenses, sizes, etc., appeared in last Wednesday's editions. There were two mistakes, one my own, the other a typographical mistake on the computer. My own: I said that the legal limit on barracuda and white sea bass would be 22 inches, which is what the new legal limit is on halibut. It should have read 28 inches.

The typo mistake: It read that all kelp, sand and spotted bass must be 11 inches; it should have read 12 (TWELVE!), with a 10-fish limit on bass. There also is a 10-fish limit on 28-inch barracuda an white sea bass and a five-fish limit on 22-inch halibut.

Sherwood Lake, about 70 miles from downtown Long Beach via the San Diego and the Ventura Freeways, opened Friday to a capacity crowd. The anglers hit pay dirt in a hurry inasmuch as Norm Dye, lake manager, had made two plants of privately reared trout. Best trout reported was a two-pounder.

Curt Dills, Covina, got the best bass, a 5-pound, 2-ounce beauty, on a purple worm, of course! Sometimes I wonder if the largemouths have suddenly gone out of their minds on this plastic worm bit, especially the purple ones.

Loyd Wicks, of the Escondido Mutual Water Company, sends word that Lake Wohlford will open Friday, March 26, with angling hours from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. He said that by opening day two an one-half tons of trout will have been planted to augment the bass, catfish, crappie and bluegill populations.

HAVE MODS TAKEN OVER PRO GOLF?

Golfers Measured by Length of Hair, Color of Bell-Bottoms

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — At the risk of sounding like a commercial, the 30-million arm chair spectators — the network estimated — need a color TV set to get a true appreciation of big-time tournament golf today.

You can tell all the players by the cut and design of their pants — or can you?

"Oh, look, there's Tom Shaw," gushed one of the fans at the 53rd PGA championship here. "I can tell by his red pants. I saw him on television."

"No, that's Larry Hinson," corrected a friend. "Shaw didn't make the cut. Both have got blond hair.

"I'm sure it's John Miller," a bystander interjected. "They all look alike."

All were wrong. It was Jack Nicklaus — the new Nicklaus, with his long mop of unruly golden hair and fresh slimmed-down image.

"It's really hard to tell them apart these days," acknowledged the original speaker.

"Yeah, the mods have taken over," said the companion.

That is not entirely the case but it's certainly true that the tournament golfers — like actors — have become conscious of how they look on the big screen.

Slacks of red, white and blue candy stripes, checks and paisleys have gained new popularity. The plain ones come in an assortment of colors — tangerine, mustard, canary blue and burgundy red. Shirts must match.

"YOU DON'T SEE white shirts much any more — they say it gives a glare on television," said Ron Kauffman the press chief of the PGA tour.

An exception is Arnold Palmer. Palmer took a fling at striped slacks for a while and then went back to his conservative grays and blacks. He always wears a loose-sleeved white shirt.

"Millionaires are inclined to be conservative," a Palmer advocate insisted.

Another arch conservative, Frank Beard dubbed "Mr. Dullsville" by some writers, showed up Saturday in a pair of red checkered slacks.

"My wife insisted that I add a little color," Beard confessed. "I must admit I'm basically rather drab. I feel as long as my pants are clean and I'm comfortable I'm all right.

"I don't think we're out there to win any sartorial prizes. We're not a circus. We're a golf tour."

THE YOUNG turks — Shaw, Hinson, Miller, John Schroeder and Ron Cerrudo, to name a few—are the most flamboyant of the dressers. They almost have chased Doug Sanders into retirement.

Sanders, who carries 40 pairs of matching slacks and shoes around him, no longer stands out in the crowd. Besides, he also didn't make the cut.

South Africa's Gary Player, once renowned for wearing basic black, has shifted to bright colors. Saturday he wore bright blue slacks with a striped shirt. In practice, he affected a small-brimmed British cap.

Cerrudo, one of the long-haired new breed is the champion of the bell-bottom trousers.

Some manufacturers have been forced to go to flaired and bell-bottom slacks, forcing normally conservative players such as Dave Stockton and Al Gelberger to wear them.

SPONSORS have been forced to follow the wild style trend.

The PGA contracted with a big sports apparel house, DiFini, to outfit all the marshals and committee members for the PGA tournament here. The result was blood red pants suits with white jockey caps for the ladies' red slacks and red-and-white striped shirts for the men.

They expect to get on television, too.

In winning at Hawaii there weeks ago, Tom Shaw turned up in a wide-brimmed straw plantation hat.

"Of course," said Helga Brett of the PGA pro shop, "There was a run on plantation hats—and we didn't stock them."

Dolph to Meet All 4,750 New Owners

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Commissioner Jack Dolph plans to attend the game between Memphis and Denver Sunday night to officially welcome the 4,750 local team owners to the American Basketball Assn.

Gate prices were reduced—$5 seats went for $2 and the remainder of the coliseum for $1 a seat—and prizes were promised as the Pros staged "stockholders night" on behalf of those who purchased shares at $5 each in order to keep the state's first major league professional sports team in town.

The public subscription ended the uncertainty that began in mid-December when P. L. Blake, the man who brought the franchise from New Orleans to Memphis, bowed out. Blake said he had lost $200,000 in two months and was surrendering the operation to the league.

The intensive two-week campaign began after Dolph established a deadline for local interests, warning them to act or the team would be sold to bidders who likely would move it to another city.

same balanced schedule.

Former King defenseman Bill White double-taked a writer when he said, "This was a big win for us."

"It's never routine," Esposito said. "But I'd rather have a 20-point lead and no shutouts than 15 shutouts and the battle we had last season."

Regan rated the Hawks "not far from Boston, except Boston's tougher physically. But Chicago has by far better goaltending, and they don't have (Bobby) Orr but they have a better defense."

The NHL is taking on the air of another all-America Stanley Cup final — Boston vs. Chicago.

White, who only dreamed of such things with the Kings, smiled, "Wouldn't that be something?"

BLUE LINES: The Kings play at Oakland this afternoon (Channel 5, 2 p.m.) . . . Next home game is Wednesday night against Buffalo . . . Defenseman Harry Howell will debut for the Kings today. The 38 year-old former NHL All-Star, acquired from the Golden Seals three weeks ago, says his back "feels pretty good. It hasn't bothered me for a week and I've skated pretty hard. But I haven't had any contact for a long time."

Former King goalie Gerry Desjardins, who is Esposito's backup man this season, was in uniform but hasn't played for two weeks because of an ankle injury . . . Hawk center Pit Martin is out with torn rib cartilage . . . Chicago defenseman Keith Magnuson leads the league with 244 penalty minutes, only 29 short of Howie Young's record set eight years ago. Magnuson picked a first-period fight with Bob Berry, who is not the hostile type . . . Berry's 47 points (19 goals, 28 assists) are a club record for a rookie.

Iowa State Gets Drake Cage Coach

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Drake University basketball coach Maury John, whose teams have won three Missouri Valley Conference crowns, was selected Saturday as head coach at Iowa State University.

John, 51, will replace Glen Anderson, who was fired recently after 11 seasons at the helm of the Cyclone basketball squad.

Chuck Terry: A Coach's Dream

good-looking," Terry says. "They don't even shave their legs.

"But the one thing you miss is a good meal. I swear we must have eaten about a hundred pounds of potatoes apiece. That's all they had — potatoes and this meat. I drink a lot of milk but they didn't have any — at least it wasn't pasteurized — and you couldn't drink the water. The highlight of the trip was when we went to the American embassy and they gave us Cokes.

"They told us we wouldn't get a lot of second or third helpings. I came back 15 pounds lighter."

So much for the darker side of the trip. Was there anything funny?

"Some of the gyms we played in," Terry says. "They told us that we couldn't expect much, by our standards, but the one in Poland looked like it had just been bombed."

Tre squad flew on domestic airlines most of the time.

"That was a little shaky, too," Terry recalls. "Like Polish Airlines. Some of those pilots, I didn't know if we were going to make it or not."

THROUGH IT ALL, Terry kept his poise, which is his most notable characteristic, on or off the court

"Oh, I don't know," he shrugs, "I like it when it's a close game and there is pressure, but I really don't think about it. You just go through the things you've been taught."

Coach Jerry Tarkanian finds that Terry is one of the easiest players to teach.

"When we have long practices," he says, "most of the kids have a tendency to lose their concentration, but Chuck is just as sharp at the end."

Tarkanian calls Terry "a fine pro prospect. He's a great competitor and has great character, which you have to have."

Terry is his own critic. "The coach might say something," he says, "but in your mind you know how you did. There's a lot of things to do out there — working on defense, playing offense, running and rebounding — but you can tell if you're hustling or not. After some games this year I knew I hadn't worked as hard as I could have."

Terry, a physical education major, intends to become a coach, and he knows what type of player he will seek:

"A player that will work his tail off and do the things I say."

In other words, a coach's dream. Like Chuck Terry.

'Sing to Spring' a fashion fantasy

On March 11, members of the Women's Guild of the Long Beach Civic Light Opera Association will "Sing to Spring" with a fashion show and musical extravaganza at Rochelle's Convention Center, 3333 Lakewood Blvd.

Spring fashions from Buffums' will be shown amid a motif of butterflies of all sizes and colors. The butterfly theme was selected because, as one poet has written, "Butterflies bring a touch of poetry; a promise of good luck; the magic of spring; the romance of now."

Highlighting the program will be a musical show with a parade of stars from Long Beach Civic Light Opera shows, 'Oklahoma," "M a m e," "Carousel," "Music Man," "Man of La Mancha" and others.

The fashion and musical extravaganza, "Sing to Spring," is produced by the Women's Guild of the Long Beach Civic Light Opera Association, a civic-minded organization now in its 23rd year. The group has been named "the best of its kind in America" by a national survey on the arts.

Mrs. Arthur Nickerson is president of the Guild. Chairman of the event is Mrs. Charles T. Smith and assisting her are Mmes. J a m e s Sidford, Walter Groshong, J. Michael McNulty, Robert J. Jones, Marshall Grobert, Howard Conrad, Edgar Palarea, Jack Wilantt, Richard Fay, William Maas and Brennan Thomas.

The affair will begin at 11 a.m. with a social hour, followed by luncheon at noon. Donation is $6.50. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Wilantt, 1945 Maine Ave. or Mrs. Grobert, 11941 K e n s i n g t o n Road, Los Alamitos by March 4.

LDS families open hearts and hearths

By PAT McDonnell
Staff Writer

Through the years, Navajo families have harvested crops on Utah farms. And so it wasn't unusual in the fall of 1949 for an Indian family to work the fields of a Mormon farmer.

But to the daughter of the migrant farm workers it was an unusual sight to observe the farmer's children leave each day for school.

In time the child asked to look at the books the white children carried and she made the awesome discovery of the written word.

When harvest was over and the Navajo family prepared to return to the reservation, the Indian child timidly approached the farmer and asked if she could remain in his home and go to school with his children.

Her request was granted and years later she graduated from Brigham Young University.

FROM THIS humble start, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints initiated a program which today sponsors more than 5,000 school-aged Indians in foster Mormon homes in seven states.

The LDS church views Indians as a chosen people and regards helping them as its mission. Hopefully, the home-based experiment in intercultural education will enable Indian youth to gain higher education before returning to the reservation as potential leaders or integrating into the white man's society.

In Southern California more than 800 Mormon families have opened their hearts and hearths to Indian youngsters each September as they make their exodus by bus from reservations throughout the United States.

Food, clothing, educational, special tutorial and medical-dental expenses are assumed by the foster parents, who in most cases, welcome the same child into their homes through the senior year of high school.

BUT WHAT of the adjustment demanded of child and the foster family?

This question was put to three of the thirty families in the Long Beach area who are taking a grassroots approach to helping Indians overcome the rejection and failure that have plagued them for 400 years.

The Ronald Linford family of Seal Beach sees no noticable change in its routine since 11-year-old Adrian Nasafotie came to live with them last September.

But changes have taken place in Adrian who has learned to read this year and has been elected president of his fifth grade class at Hopkinson School.

On the Hopi-Navajo reservation near Tuba City, Ariz., Adrian's mother is a storekeeper and his father a jewelry repairman. Two of his six brothers and sisters also are living in Southland homes.

In the Linford home, Adrian has

Nautical but nice

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

IT SEEMED everyone was a winner at the Power Squadron costume party last week at St. Bartholomew Hall. The invitation said come as your favorite nautical song or story. Marvin and Veronica Tincher walked off with a magnum of champagne for their rendition of Yankee Clipper. Their costume consisted of a rope which tied them together. Veronica led with a pair of garden shears in hand and Marvin brought up the rear with a flag stuck in his trouser pocket. "Arrrrrgh," as my friend Charlie Brown says.

Dr. Frank and Ruth Blair came as the rich couple from "Gilligan's Island" but no one could figure out just what the bicycles had to do with their costumes.

Champagne was in order for Mel and Ann Widman who also wore shipwrecked attire.

The most exciting winners had nothing to do with costumes. Results of the annual predicted log contest for ladies were announced. In case you don't get as far as the sports pages I will tell you what a predicted log contest is.

A course is charted by a committee or someone in charge. It can be in the harbor or to San Diego, it doesn't matter where as long as there are several check points along the way. Everyone entered must log all the check points and regardless of starting time or boat speed, every boat must cross the finish line at the same time.

That doesn't sound so complicated you say? Well, the catch is that the contestants predict the exact time, to the second, that they will log each check point along the way. These predictions are turned in to the committee along with all clocks and watches and then, carrying an impartial observer (he gets to have a watch), proceed to run the charted course while the observer logs actual time at the check point against predicted time. Afterward they figure out who has the least percentage of error and, voila, a winner! Many long "races' or contests of hundreds of miles have been logged with less than a one per cent error. This takes a great deal of navigational skill. In the ladies race we are talking about, some of the gals logged better scores than the men had done in a previous contest.

Ruby Kandler took first, skippering the Gimlet. Jerri Pattee was second in Dolphin, Pat Hodges third in Shamrock and in fourth place was Marianna Clark in C-Lark. Husband Ralph Clark took first for the men.

Among those toasting the winners were Squadron Commander Laurel and Marilynn Linn, Vic and Mike Bourbonnais, Jerry and Alberta Hixon, CJ and Ann Smith, Earl and Kay Lukas, Fred and Louise Christ, Warner and Ginny Moore, Ted and Bernice Marvis and Gloria and Jack Baldwin.

IT WAS FIESTA time at the home of Nancy Lobdell when she gave a Mexican themed coffee hour welcoming new-bride-just-returned-from-a-Mexican-honeymoon, Pat Carter, to Long Beach. Pat, a former San Diegan, is the wife of Hugh Carter.

Those enjoying coffee and conversation included Ellie Johnson, Nancy Latimer, Dee Van Dyke, Roseanne DeGraw, Kitty Hall, Dorothy Wise, Betty Buffum, Shirley Merrill, Susie Meager, Bette Arntzen and Dee Redman.

Those assisting Nancy were Joan Sternberg, Sadorus Lower and Marion Heedwohl.

PUT ON your list of most recent brides Judy Price who wed Don Grisham in a ceremony Saturday evening at the home of Frank and Millie Vessels.

BILL AND CAROLINE Hardcastle entertained at a "let's celebrate EVERYTHING in February party."

Of course there was Valentine's Day and then Abe's and George's birthdays. But did you know that Hal Halvorsen also had a birthday AND Lee and Bernie Perry, Ray and LaNelle Fosholdt and the Hardcastles were married in February?

They sipped and munched at the Hardcastle's mobile home which doesn't ever go anywhere and then went on to Long Beach Yacht Club for dinner.

Guests included Les and Mary Alice Dahl, Dick and Vera Brookins, Marion and Lora Aiken, Dana and Myrna Brown and Jonah and Helen Jones.

THIS YEAR the month of February also brings Mardi Gras time and Herman and Shirley Allen, along with young son, Brian, took full advantage of the festivities.

They winged their way to New Orleans where they were house guests of the James Kendricks. They were special guests of Forrest Singer, 1971 King of the Carrolltons, at one of the balls. The Carrolltons was founded in 1923 and is one of the oldest Krewes participating in the festival. Shirley says you can't beat good old Southern Hospitality.

SAN FRANCISCO hospitality wasn't very good for Joe and Pat DeGiorgio on a recent vacation. They drove up with Dick and Gloria McWilliams on a leisurely sightseeing tour of wineries and various points of interest.

On arrival in the city of the cable cars they parked the De Giorgios' Cadillac in an indoor garage because everyone knows taxi cabs are the only way to go in SF. They were a bit disconcerted to learn that they had to leave the keys in the car but were assured of tight security.

So . . . they saw the sights and three days later returned to find the car had vanished without a trace. So they left their car in San Francisco.

Time marched on and on. They were finally notified by the authorities that the badly damaged car had been found abandoned after being involved in a hit and run accident.

The DeGiorgios went this past week to pick up repaired car and discovered what might have been a contributing factor in the hit and run accident. Missing from the trunk of the car were two cases of wine and two dozen wine glasses which they and the McWilliams had bought from the Little Old Wine Maker.

THE HOSPITALITY at Jack and Gloria Palacios was a lot better when they had a few friends over recently for popcorn and home made Kahlua.

Among the guests was former Long Beacher, Topper Smith, visiting here from the Land of the Viennese Waltz.

Among Power Squadron members cast up on the shore for gay, mad evening were Commander Laurel and Marilynn Linn left, and Kay and Earl Lucas.

HARRIS SURVEY FINDING:

Lib movement has strong male support

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Women, more than men, are responsible for perpetuating the idea that a woman's place is in the home, a Louis Harris and Associates poll has revealed.

And except for matters which deal with sex, most American women are quite content with their role as wife and mother.

The Harris poll, taken during the fall of 1970 for Virginia Slims, showed that 42 per cent of the 3,000 women interviewed were strongly against organized groups seeking to improve women's status. Only 39 per cent of the 1,000 men interviewed were against such groups.

Women also showed less support for the liberation movement. While 44 per cent of the men favored such a movement only 42 per cent of the women indicated support.

Significant, says the Harris organization, is the fact that being a mother and raising a family, being a homemaker and being a wife were rated as the top three things women find most enjoyable about being a woman today.

THE RECENT freedoms women have achieved, including job opportunities, educational opportunities, being able to have a career and sexual freedom, were cited by only a small minority of women as "greatest pleasures," indicating that few women as yet are ready to recognize their progress toward equality as an enjoyable attribute.

On the job, men were more alert to discrimination than working women themselves. Some 50 per cent of the men as compared with 32 per cent of the women believed that women were not given equal opportunities in promotion. Men, more than women, also believed that women have less opportunities in responsibility, salary and in becoming an executive.

Most women, with the exception of divorced, separated and black women, were also satisfied with their roles in the home and the roles their husband played in the home. Although many women might appreciate a bit more male help around the house, they are far from ready to turn over to their husbands chores such as child-rearing.

In responses that conflict with one platform of the women's liberation movement, 69 per cent of the women say they would respect a man less if he decided to stay home and take care of the children while his wife worked. Only 58 per cent of the men, however, say they would respect another man less.

IN THEIR personal relations, most women generally think kindly of men. A notable exception, once again, is divorced, separated and black women who believe "most men think only their opinions about the world are important," and "most men find it necessary for their egos to keep women down."

When it comes to sex, a majority of women feel they are not treated as sexual equals and they resent it. Most women, too, want to be respected for their minds and not as sexual objects.

The findings show, however, that while women contend they should not be prevented by law from having an abortion, women are far from ready to assert their complete independence from men in matters of sex. When it comes to decisions about abortions, for example, most women feel the man involved should be consulted.

AMONG OTHER conclusions reached by the Harris poll:

An essentially urban coalition of black women and the young and the educated of both races is ready to follow the examples of the blacks and the young and challenge the status quo in American society.

Many women recognize the need for change but are reluctant to "rock the boat" to achieve it.

Women are not afraid to disagree with their husbands, although they tend to agree with them on most issues.

Women want to feel — and for the most part they do feel — that they are an important part of the world in which they live.

To cope with perceived inequalities, women have found unique and subtle techniques, which they feel give them as much power as men.

As more women come to realize that men are sympathetic to their desires, the face of American society may well undergo a significant change — one which will improve greatly the status of women.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Koppels flip over pancakes

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

The accent is on the last syllable of his name — but the accent on his accomplishments is NOT confined to any syllable or thing.

Today's Chef of the Week, George E. Koppel, is president of Koppel Bulk Terminal, a family-owned business of 45 years endeavor.

Main headquarters now is located at Pier A, but the firm's old Cerritos Avenue plant is evident while crossing the Ford Bridge. Though being rejuvenated, it is still in operation. It was formerly the big Ford plant.

Born in San Pedro, Koppel attended Jefferson Junior and Wilson High Schools in Long Beach, then joined the U.S. Air Force in the Cadet Program, where he remained two years.

Study at Long Beach City College followed his discharge, after which he joined Koppel Bros., Inc. With the founding of Koppel Bulk Terminal, he transferred activities to that firm.

Engaged in operating export grain terminals and international trading, the firm also has plants in Sacramento, Stockton and the Gulf of Mexico.

ACTIVE IN civic affairs, Koppel is past president and currently a director of the Los Angeles Grain Exchange; president of the California Association of Terminal Elevators, and chairman of the Colorado-California Wheat Council. He is also a director of the Lakewood Village Community Church.

Married to the former Harriett Steel of Long Beach, they're the proud parents of daughters, Melinda, 20, a student at Long Beach City College, and Susan, 16, who attends Lakewood High, as does son, Greg, 18. The youngest, John 15, "bones-up" at Hoover Junior High School.

Our "Chef" loves tennis and swimming, but mostly deep sea fishing off Mexico and the Island of Kona in Hawaii. In fact, he is a member of the International Hawaiian Team, which will stage a bill fish tournament off Kona come the last week of July into early August.

Their home-away-from-home in Arrowhead is a popular family hang-out, especially when winter skiing is in season.

GEORGE E. KOPPEL

As for his recipe . . . it may sound ambiguous, but he takes on another foreign country, and comes up with French Pancakes. It's an unvarnished fact, that he can roll 'em out to perfection.

FRENCH PANCAKES

SIFT: ¾ cups flour
RESIFT with:
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
BEAT: 2 eggs — add and beat with ⅔ cup milk
⅓ cup water
½ teaspoon vanilla

Make a well in the sifted ingredients. Pour in the liquid ingredients. Mix them with a few quick strokes. Don't worry about the lumps, they will take care of themselves.

Heat a 5-inch skillet. Grease with a few drops of oil. Add a small amount of batter. Tip the skillet and let the batter spread over the bottom. Cook the pancakes over medium heat. When brown on one side, turn and brown on other side. Use a bit more oil if necessary. Spread each pancake with strawberry jam. Roll and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

To spur on the festivities the Long Beach City Council has declared the next seven days as CATHY Week.

Tonight's program will take the form of a Service Fair in Christ Lutheran Church. The public is invited to view "The Homeless Child" at 7 p.m.

The movie will be repeated Monday in the Dana Library at 1 p.m. and in Glendale Federal Savings and Loan at 9:30 a.m.

AN IDENTICAL program will be aired Tuesday with the film being shown at 7 p.m. in the library and at 1:30 p.m. in the savings and loan.

Market Day is planned for Wednesday at 10 a.m. at Quigley's, Cal Stores and Lucky Market.

Bullock's Lakewood will be the setting for a child's fashion show in the Laguna Tea Room during the lunch hour.

Foster Parents Night is scheduled for Friday in Fidelity Federal's Community Room. John Milner from the University of Southern California's School of Social Welfare will speak at 7:30 p.m.

WRAPPING UP the week will be Children's Day on Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Youth Center, Lakewood.

The purpose of CATHY Week is to publicize the need for foster homes and volunteers, and to offer recognition to foster families.

Further information about the program may be obtained by calling CATHY, 435-4311.

Indian youngsters here for schooling learned to assume household chores with his brothers, Clay, 10, and John, 5, and sister, Cheryl, 9. He speaks slowly and clearly in English, but readily goes back to his first language of Hopi on the rare times he talks to his parents on the telephone.

HIS DARK EYES twinkled as he pointed to the miniature pool table he received for Christmas. With a reluctant nod of his head, he admitted he experienced homesickness during the holidays.

Explained Mrs. Linford: "It sounds heartless, but a visit home over the holidays would entail a long period of adjustment upon returning. We had a few gloomy moments, but I think there was enough excitement about the house that Adrian came through the separation pretty well."

When asked if Adrian addressed her as "mother" or by her first name, the soft-spoken blonde noted:

"I don't think Adrian has ever directly called me by any name. We've come to appreciate the fierce family loyalty that he holds for his parents — it's an unexplainable, unbreakable, bond that I regard with respect."

Added her husband, a certified public accountant who is bishop of the Long Beach Eighth Ward, LDS Church:

"We've gained a lot by having Adrian live with us. We've become aware of our material belongings and the gratification of sharing them. When I learned what the Church was trying to do I decided we could financially afford to bring someone into our home. I definitely feel the American Indian is the real forgotten minority and educating the children is the best way to help."

COMPETITIVE sports have helped Belinda Watahomigie, 13 (left), accept the white man's approach to life, especially as seen through eyes of her foster sister, Lorraine Cutler, 12.

IT'S NO SIMPLE matter to become foster parents as the Linfords discovered. After applying to the Social Services Department of the Church, families are screened by social workers who check the emotional stability, financial security and physical conditions of the home.

According to Kent Pulsipher, a LDS Church social worker:

"The foster family must be a happy, harmonious one if the Indian child is to benefit from the separation from his natural parents."

After the Indian parents apply to the church, the social worker visits the reservation and interviews the child to see if his attitude and verbal ability will be conducive to adjusting to a new environment. Another consideration is to place the child in a home where foster brothers and sisters are of a corresponding age.

Similar age and interests of their daughter, Lorraine, 12, and Belinda Wathomigie, 13, are what the John Cutlers of 727 E. 37th St. attribute to the success of Belinda's third year in their home.

"Each year Belinda has become more at ease, more outging," said Mrs. Cutler, a former school teacher. "At first she spoke only to Lorraine, but her reserve is slowly disappearing, particularly when she takes part in competitive sports — then she's unbeatable."

Belinda is a member of the Supai tribe, which lives in the Grand Canyon. Her father is a director of a community action program on the reservation and his letters to the Cutlers express an intense desire and appreciation for the advantages she is receiving in California.

EAGERNESS to share proud tradition of his Navajo forebears and gain approval from his foster family keys attitude of Ross (Rusty) Charley who sits still for hair-brushing session from his adopted mother, Mrs. Donald Ralls.

"We were fortunate that Belinda had excellent teachers at Longfellow School. Thanks to them and a special reading course we enrolled her in at the Pearlman Institute she was able to skip the sixth grade and now is a seventh grader at Hughes Junior High.

"I think we're better organized for having Belinda in our home," Mrs. Cutler said. "I've felt obligated to offer her an example of a well-structured, efficient household.

"Too often I find myself demanding more of her than I do my own children. It's not that I'm a cruel task-master but she has so much more to learn if she is to catch up to the 20th Century."

NEWCOMERS TO the program are the Donald Ralls family of 1006 Silva St. When they applied in 1969, the family-of-four was turned down because its two-bedroom home was deemed too small to accommodate a fifth member.

"Then last Thanksgiving a social worker phoned and said he had a Navajo son for us," said Mrs. Ralls, an attractive brunette whose husband is an appliance repairman.

The newest addition to the Ralls family is 10-year-old Ross (Rusty) Charley. Accustomed to frequent moves with his divorced mother to several reservations in Arizona and New Mexico, Rusty caught onto the Ralls household routine within days.

"Rusty's third grade teacher at Clara Barton Schools says his achievement has increased enough for him to move into the fourth grade this month," said Mrs. Ralls who then asked the youngster to bring some examples of his favorite subject — art.

Beaming proudly, Rusty showed off sketches of desert hunting scenes.

"Navajos are good hunters, they eat bluebirds — and robins are good to eat, too," he said.

Mrs. Ralls recalled a recent hunting trip on which her husband took Rusty and their son, Don Lee, 13. "Rusty took to that gun like a duck does to water," she said, "and he brought home the biggest catch.

"We've bought several books on Navajo life and each week when we have our family home evening Rusty reads the books aloud or tells us Indian stories his mother taught him.

"We don't want Rusty to lose sight of his own heritage, but we hope that we can help him to get an education and be able to earn a good living.

"In comparison to many people, we don't have a great many possessions, but I think our children have come to realize we have a great deal more than the Indians. Rusty has helped us appreciate this and he's brought us a glimpse of another culture and value system that puts a premium on family ties and living harmoniously with nature."

AT WIT'S END

Morning silence rarely broken

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have always said if the Good Lord had meant for me to speak in the mornings, He'd have put a recording in my chest and a string in the back of my neck.

I don't understand people who can hop out of bed and synchronize their lips with words to form sentences and communicate ideas. I don't reach this point until after lunch.

I have a basic morning vocabulary of 20 words: No. I don't care. It's in the dirty clothes hamper. What's your name? Mustard or catsup. In your father's billfold. There have been no subtractions or additions in 21 years.

The other morning I shuffled to the kitchen and mechanically did my thing. My daughter said, "I need to buy . . ."

"In your father's billfold," I interrupted.

"Where's my favorite V-neck sweater?" said a son.

"In the dirty clothes hamper."

"Can I wear it?"

"No."

"Then I'll sit by an open window and probably die before lunch."

"Mustard or catsup?" I muttered holding his sandwich.

"Catsup."

As I opened the bottle and tried to force the catsup out, the phone rang . . .

"Hello," said my daughter. "Just a minute. It's for you, Mom."

I shook my head.

"She can't come to the phone now," she said tartly, "She's hitting the bottle."

"What's your name?" I asked my youngest. He told me and I scribbled it on his lunch bag.

"Wilma Whiplash called," said my daughter pressing a message in my bathrobe pocket. "She'd like to meet you for lunch at one at the House of Chicken."

I NODDED MUTELY. All morning I thought about Wilma Whiplash. Who was she? Had I met her and couldn't remember? Was she an old schoolmate? An Avon lady? A program chairman? An editor's wife? One of my children's teachers? A secretary trying to pedal underground pictures of the office Christmas party?

"I'm Wilma Whiplash," said a voice at 1 p.m. at the House of Chicken. "I know you don't know me, but I read your column in the newspaper and figured you'd be a scream at lunch."

"What's your name?" I asked dryly.

"Wilma Whiplash," she smiled. "Your dress is darling. Where did you get it?"

"In the dirty clothes hamper."

"Ah . . . what are you drinking?"

"I don't care. Mustard or catsup."

"Where do you get all your wild ideas?"

"In your father's billfold," I said numbly.

I felt sorry for her, but it served her right.

DEAR ABBY

'I married the wrong man'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What does a girl do when she realizes she married the wrong man? I knew right after I married Tom (not his real name) that I should have waited for Roger (not his real name either). Roger was in the service at the time.

Three years later I realize that I still love Roger. My husband is good to me and our two babies and I really have no complaints, but I feel so guilty not being able to return the love he gives me. My thoughts keep going back to Roger.

I hear that Roger is still single. Should I try to get in touch with him and see if he still feels the same way about me? Or do you think it's too late? — WRONG CHOICE

DEAR WRONG: Don't try to get in touch with Roger. If he still feels the same way about you (or you let him know how you feel), he might be encouraged to revive that love he once had for you, then what would you have? Possibly an affair outside your marriage. Or a broken marriage, which would be unfair to your husband and children. To seek happiness at the expense of another never works.

DEAR ABBY: I am 6 foot 4, weigh 240 pounds, am told I'm good looking and I play college football. They all call me "lady killer," but when I go out with a girl I'm the one who gets killed. Would you believe I don't know how to get anywhere with a girl? I get all the encouragement a guy in his right mind needs, but I don't do anything about it. When I get home I could kick myself. Am I normal or not? — CAN'T SCORE

DEAR CAN'T: Every guy fumbles a little before he learns how to complete a pass. You need more experience. If 11 guys don't kill you, one girl won't.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please ask one of your medical experts what can be done about a face that has been badly scarred with acne. My scars are very bad and people just stare at me something awful. On top of that, my complexion is dark because I am part Indian and I have heard that if a dark-skinned person has plastic surgery, the scars can be worse than what you started with. Is this true?

I am 28 and female. I don't have much money, but if there is any hope for me I could save enough. Can you help me? — UGLY AND SAD

DEAR SAD: My medical experts agree that having a dark skin can complicate many cases of "sanding" (dermabrasion) and some plastic surgery, but it is by no means hopeless. You should be examined by either a plastic surgeon or a dermatologist to determine what can be done for you. You could be pleasantly surprised, so don't put it off. Good luck.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FELLING BLUE": If you want to feel better, do something for someone today. Make a telephone call to some forgotten soul whom few remember. Write a letter (but be careful not to spread depressing news). Call on a shut-in. Just find someone who's worse off than you and cheer him up. You'll lose your blues. I guarantee it!

These are the ones who watched --This is what they saw!

It was dark of the moon. Lights under water and red, green and blue spots molded the jetting streams of the fountain and surface of the reflecting pool at California State College, Long Beach.

Three dancers, often almost invisible in their shiny, black wet suits, used their bodies to sculpture the falling water. Russ Beasley, Bruce Smith and Irene Nichols moved in rhythm to the sounds of a tape recorder—sounds of its own mechanism, electronic and eerie.

On a floating foam platform, some 25 spectators sat, while about twice as many watched from outside the pool. There was no wind to deflect the water patterns that the dancers created.

W-8—INDEPENDENT, PRESS-TELEGRAM
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Feb. 28, 1971

The esoteric performance Tuesday night was designed by Margene Larson and Christina Ramirez, their project in a week-long display by the Experiments in Art and Technology at CSLB.

After the "Dance in the Fountain," the audience walked across campus to Gallery C to view other exhibits in the EAT show, outgrowth of sessions conducted last semester under guidance of Dr. August Coppola.

George Lucas of USC showed his master's thesis film, "Technological World of the Future." Conceptual drawings, computer films, papers on the relationships of art and technology, demonstrations and research problems were part of the exhibit.

One involved student summed up the general feeling, "Thank goodness, everything worked!"

An art walk for Chicanos

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

On Feb. 8, a group of concerned citizens who call themselves Los Amigos del Paseo del Arte, met to discuss plans for Plaza de la Raza, first Mexican-American cultural center in the United States. The facility is to be constructed in Lincoln Park, East Los Angeles.

From that meeting came specifications for an art walk to be held Sunday, March 28, between 1 and 5 p.m. in the area of the galleries on La Cienega Boulevard and Melrose Place.

Co-sponsoring the event are the Art Dealers Association of Southern California, prominent public figures from the Chicano and Anglo communities, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, Santa Barbara Art Museum and Palm Springs Museum.

In addition to raising funds for the cultural center, the Paseo del Arte will bring attention to the work of major Chicano artists in the Los Angeles area. Tickets for the art walk are $2.50 for adults, 50 cents for children. They are available from American Masters Gallery, 724 N. La Cienega Blvd., Art Dealers Association members, member galleries and Mutual Ticket Agencies.

To aid in the Plaza de la Raza fund-raising, the renowned Mexican artist David Alfaro Siqueiros has created a lithograph of the late Chicano newsman Ruben Salazar.

'RUBEN SALAZAR' BY SIQUEIROS

Salazar, who was involved in the struggle of the Mexican-American people in the Los Angeles barrio, was killed in rioting Aug. 29, 1970.

The 20 by 26-inch work, reproduced by Tamstone Group, Inc., is in a limited edition of 125 hand-pulled, signed and numbered lithographs. These are for sale on a first-come basis for a pre-publication price of $250 plus tax. After March 28, the price will be $275 plus tax. Fifty per cent is tax deductible. Special order forms are available from the ADA and member galleries.

In addition, there will be commemorative posters of the Siqueiros work at $12 each; price to students is $10. Mailing cost is $2. Checks for lithographs and posters may be made payable to Plaza del la Raza-Paseo.

UCLA ART COUNCIL'S Exhibition for 1970-71, March 1 through April 4, will be a major retrospective of work by kinetic sculptor George Rickey. Organized by the art council and the UCLA Art Galleries, it later will be seen at six other institutions throughout the United States.

The exhibition includes 58 sculptures in motion, several of which are placed in the plaza outside the galleries. Those inside the galleries will be activated by concealed fans.

A STANDING ovation and a plaque commemorating his 18 years as secretary honored M. Paul Tosso Jr. at the February meeting of Spectrum Club. Tosso will be succeeded by Alfred Danfelt; John Nutsch is the new president of the all-male art club.

The next meeting will be the annual Ladies Night Banquet March 8 at Knotts Berry Farm Steak House.

GARY SCOTT MILTIMORE, graduate student at California State College, Long Beach, has an exhibit of sculpture and other studies at the Jewish Community Center Gallery through March 14. Hours are Sundays through Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., Fridays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays, 7 to 10 p.m.

AGO to mark Diamond Jubilee

To mark the Diamond Jubilee of American Guild of Organists, Long Beach Chapter will host a recital Saturday at 2 p.m. in First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue. Soloist will be M. Searle Wright, national president of AGO. The public is invited.

At 4 p.m., Wright will give a lecture-demonstration on improvisation; admission is $3. Simultaneously, Dr. William D. Hall of Chapman College will conduct a choral workshop in Pilgrim Hall; the fee is $3.

The celebration will conclude with a banquet at 6:45 p.m. in the church dining room.

Transitional art in LBCC faculty show

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Faculty Show at Long Beach City College reflects the present state of art which is transitional, between two-dimensional and object art. Faculty members who teach at the BTC and Extension Campuses are included in the exhibit at the Liberal Arts Campus, 4901 E. Carson St.

Joe Hooten, Laird Plumleigh and Jim Simpson, once painters, reflect the new direction. Hooten's five canvasses are nude of pigment; they are made dimensional by puncturing, stuffing and stretching over nails.

Simpson also works with unbleached muslin, in this case, innocent clusters of stuffed bags, perhaps a reflection on multiplicity in the world of commerce.

Plumleigh is hung-up on growing, or process art. Six bell peppers march across a green-painted flat of Scotch moss next to a "Mealy-worm Farm" of raked rye seed and potatoes which has a striking resemblance to a Zen garden of raked gravel and boulders.

NORMA MATLIN'S sculptural "walls" are composed of molded Styrofoam packing forms for typewriters and Suzuki motorbikes, reflecting both on the trend to multiples and the elegance of white-on-white.

Two-dimensional forms, in other words, paintings, drawings and graphics are strongly represented in the works of Ted Baird, Robert Adams, Thomas Hawkins, Dick Keyes, Wilbur Broderick, Joan Binkoff and Geneva Heron. Lois Venne's canvasses are a three-part, floor standing screen.

THERE ARE, as well, a number of art-crafts including the spectacular weavings of Toshi Goto and Linda D'Amico, cases of superb silver jewelry by Jim Shaw, and fine ceramic pots and a poetic mobile by Robert McMenomy.

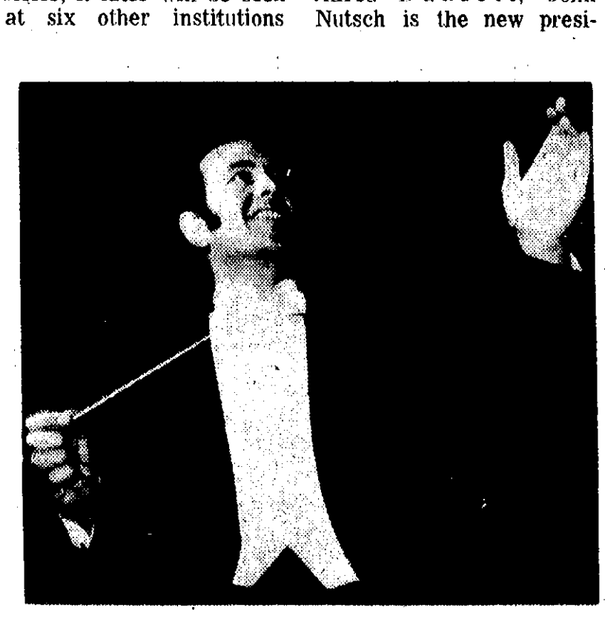

The works share the qualities of fine craftsmanship and individual insight.

L.B. youth soloist with orchestra

The All-California High School Symphony Orchestra will play its annual concert today at 8 p.m. in Lobero Theater, Santa Barbara. Stanley Chapple will conduct.

Soloist will be Wayne Selover, 18, trombonist and senior at Millikan High School. He will play the "Concerto for Trombone" by the contemporary British composer, Gordon Jacob.

Wayne has performed in February with the All-State Band at Bakersfield and with the All-Southern California Orchestra at The Music Center. Previously he played with the All-Southern California Band and the Long Beach All-City Orchestra. He also is drum major of the Millikan Marching Band and director of the Millikan Straw Hat (pep) Band.

To conduct 'Elijah'

William Hall will conduct his 125-voice chorale in Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah," next Sunday at 4 p.m. in Covenant Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue. Soloists will be soprano Maurita Phillips-Thornburgh, contralto Pauline Law, tenor Paul Mayo and bass James Tippey. Organist Ladd Thomas will accompany. Tickets, at $3.50 and $2.50, will be on sale at the door.

Musical Arts meets Tuesday

Members and guests of Musical Arts Club will hear excerpts from light and grand opera at their dinner meeting Tuesday in Covenant Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue. Vocalists will be Patricia Woods, soprano; Joseph Parisi, tenor; and Silvio Barto, baritone.

Dinner will be served at 7 p.m.; the program will begin at 8 p.m. The public is invited to make reservations today with Margaret S. Jameson, 3824 California Ave.

Pyramids are just a camel ride away ...History comes alive

By HERB SHANNON
Travel Editor

GIZA, Egypt — Riding a camel to the Pyramids is not exactly a voluntary proposition. Theoretically, you have a choice of walking the last half mile from the bus stop at the bottom of the rise, riding sanely in a donkey cart or humping up the hill a la Bedouin.

I don't recall making any decision. When I looked up from adjusting my camera, I was staring smack into the arrogant eyeball of the very first of a long line of camels lying in wait for tourists.

Before I could leap out of biting range, the lead camel driver inserted my left foot into a stirrup and pushed me into the saddle. While he slipped an Arab headdress over my ears I tried to explain that I hadn't made up my mind about the mode of transportation.

TOO LATE. The camel rose like an elevator on its way to the fifth floor and we ambled away.

"See how easy it is," the driver asked, grinning ingratiatingly as he loped alongside. "You're doing fine."

Hanging on to the camera with one hand and the front saddlehorn with the other, I turned to see what was happening to the rest of the Trans World Airlines tour group.

With shouts of "Hi, Yo, Silver!" and "Up, Up and Away!" the camel drivers had captured everybody on the bus.

The American visitors were bobbing and weaving in the saddle as far back as the joggled eye could perceive. Suddenly I was glad to be heading the caravan instead of bringing up the rear in the donkey cart.

INTREPID TRAVEL Editor, Herb Shannon, waves from back of his camel.

MY DRIVER, Abou Ben Adhem (for did he not lead all the rest?) gained my attention again by reaching up to extract the camera from my grasp.

"I know all about cameras," he said. "I was assistant to Cecil B. DeMille when he made 'The Ten Commandments' here."

He put the viewfinder to his eye professionally and pressed the right button. The effect was slightly spoiled by an absence of clicking noise.

"Cock the shutter," I suggested, hoping he would take no offense. Meanwhile, I tried to remember what was said on the bus about paying for the camel ride. Afterward, like a taxi? Or en route, as on a train?

The question was resolved when A. Ben Adhem returned the camera and simultaneously rubbed thumb and forefingers in a familiar gesture. Pay as you go, in any language.

The amount was somewhat academic, since I happened to be down to two items of Egyptian currency. One was a Pound note, worth $2.40. The other was 50 piastres, half a pound. I handed over the 50 piastres.

AT THIS point, Abou B. Adhem, average camel driver, showed his true mettle. Tentatively, reluctantly, almost fearfully he held the money up to about the level of my ankle.

"This is less than a dollar," he said sadly, maintaining a steady pace alongside.

Well, not quite so. We both knew $1.20 is more than a dollar. But you have to credit a camel driver who risks the rent money, double or nothing. I took the 50 piastres and gave him the Pound.

"Don't tell the sheik," he said, pointing to the distant figure in flowing headgear at the top of the road.

He moved ahead, making room for a runner in bedsheet and turned-up-toe slippers.

"For good luck," the runner exclaimed, thrusting a green soapstone carving into my lap. "You pay nothing."

BUT HE kept jogging along under my elbow.

The small mummy figurine was obviously no ancient relic, but nicely made. I gave the runner my 50 piastres.

"Don't tell the shiek," he warned, peeling off toward the next camel in line.

After we dismounted and crept through a long and narrow passage to the interior chambers of the Chephren Pyramid, I compared purchases with the other camel riders.

The traveling salesman apparently had switched lines after running out of home-made mummy charms. Hugh Brannan, travel editor of the Baltimore American, exhibited a small sliver of rock.

OUR GUIDE, archaeologist Zaki Yousif Saad, explained the frantic sales activity along the road.

"Most of the tourists who come here now are Russian," he said. "They prefer to barter cigarettes for souvenirs. When Americans show up, its like treasure."

Later, we took seats in a roped-off section of the open desert before the Sphinx for the nightly dramatization of 5,000 years of Egyptian history. The spectacular display of colored lights playing on the massive and authentic stage setting with accompanying amplified sound recordings attracts a large audience the year around.

THE SHOW also attracts the souvenir vendors.

Walking back to the bus afterwards, I held up my soapstone mummy to fend off the eager street salesmen. It seemed to work.

Brannan had less luck with his piece of rock. Finally, he was forced to buy one of the carvings.

"Don't tell the sheik," he muttered, forking over another 50 piastres.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Beware of wild animals

By STAN DELAPLANE

Mikumi National Park, Tanzania

This is 450 square miles of game preserve in East Africa.

There's one hotel for tourists, who drive game wardens wild by photographing lions closeup as though the animals were on the park payroll.

THE HEAD game warden said: "I've seen a tourist get out of his car and try to get a closeup of a pair of mating lions."

A sign in your room says: "Our guests are respectfully reminded that the wildlife is very wild in blue smocks along the road. But when they spotted us, they took off. The wildest wildlife in East Africa.

"We are taking a round-the world cruise ship and have introductions to many people abroad. We would like to avoid social mistakes ....

Generally, Westerners shake hands a lot. Always when meeting. Also when parting.

Far Eastern people avoid body contact. The bow — or something similar — replaces the handsake. And they cringe on body contact. Don't slap them on the back.

For table manners: Stall and watch your host. In Arab countries you may run into eating with your hands. Right hand only. NEVER the left hand.

SMALL PRESENTS are always in order in Arab and Far East countries. No so much in Europe.

Bathrooms are a little different around the world. You'll just have to learn them — and keep your balance.

A lot of the world eats with chopsticks. Get some from your Chinese restaurant and practice.

"My husband will meet a Japanese business friend in Tokyo and wants to take in a gift ...."

A bottle of Johnny Walker Black Label is considered a gift from the gods. Has to be Black Label! (I don't know why, but this is the daijobu word.)

"Later he must give a business dinner for Chinese businessmen in Hong Kong ...."

I think they'll tell him where to eat. And he can have the manager do the proper number of courses — usually nine in a banquet dinner.

First thing though, he orders a bottle of Scotch and glasses put on the table. Not drinks by the drink. The full bottle establishes him as a generous and knowledgeable taipan.

and in many cases carnivorous, and should be treated with the greatest respect."

This is part of a tour — Tanzania, Uganda and Kenya hungry for foreign exchange.

EAST AFRICAN Airways trying to fly it in tourist pockets from New York: $900 for the package.

Mikumi is on the "Hell Run," 1,200 miles of mostly unpaved road that links Dar-es-Salaam and Lusaka, capital of black Zambia.

Red China is building a railroad to replace the motor road.

THOUSANDS OF Chinese are said to be in here. But the tourist sees fewer of them than he does of the rare rhino.

We did see a truckload

African safari to depart L.A. in September

Noted African scholar-traveler, Jean-Pierre Hallet of Los Angeles will offer only one special Congo Safari to the dark continent this year, instead of his usual four trips.

The Safari, which departs Sept. 10, will be limited to 20 persons. Countries to be visited include the Congo, Kenya, Tanzania and in-depth tour of Ethiopia, with stopovers in Copenhagen and Athens.

Cost with air fare from Los Angeles via SAS is $3,362 for the 32-day excursion.

Further information is available from Hallet, 5630 W. 79th St., Los Angeles, 90045.

Rent-a-horse in Italy started by American

Several years ago a young American woman on tour of Italy was told that many of the country's most beautiful, unusual and historic sights were inaccessible to 20th century visitors because of poor roads and their remote locations.

The only way to get to most of these places, Ann Summers was informed, would be to go by horse.

And her Italian guide reasoned it took too much effort to do that.

Miss Summers disagreed. She became captivated by the possibilities engendered in her mind that day, and stayed on in Italy to help found an organization called "Rent-A-Horse."

DESCRIBED as a way to discover and get the feel of "another Italy," Rent-A-Horse offers a variety of horseback tours to the more adventuresome visitor to the country.

Tours range from gallops in the surprisingly peaceful backhills of bustling Rome, to enchanting jaunts and campouts along the fabled Tyrrhenian coastline in Tuscany.

Rent-A-Horse provides everything from horses and riding lessons, to English-speaking guides and grooms, overnight accommodations, meals and bus transporation to the various itinerary centers scattered over the land.

Library de-sands its books

HONOLULU — A shelf marked SAND at the Waikiki-Kapahulu library is for books that need de-sanding.

Sand in your shoes is the expected result from a stroll on the beach, but sand in books returned to the library is another thing — the result of bikini-clad borrowers, who find the library an easy walk from the beach at Waikiki.

Set in a grove of 100 palm trees at the base of Diamond Head, the Waiki-ki-Kapahulu Library building of native wood and stone is distinctively Hawaiian.

VISITOR TRAFFIC is heavy at the main library in Honolulu's civic center.

Adjacent to the historic and only royal palace in the United States, Iolani, the main library is a drawing card for visitors who can find newspapers from Australia, Canada, England, Japan, The Philippines and the U.S. mainland.

For visitors wanting to learn more about a particular Hawaiians subject, there is the Hawaiian Room with its books on every conceivable island subject.

TRIP TIPS:

Bargain your way when shopping the world

By MARIE MATTSON

Bargaining takes place on every continent in the world — a bit more on some than others.

Prices for merchandise — and in off season, often for hotel rooms, tours and car hire — can be negotiated in most countries.

Look upon your shopping expeditions abroad as theatrical performances in which you are the star.

Follow this script closely:

PRELUDE: Before the curtain goes up you must know whether bargaining is standard and, if so, value of items you wish to buy. In most foreign countries, when the owner is on the sales floor you can assume bargaining is in order.

Stores that cater almost entirely to North American tourists or that are owned by North Americans, however, generally have fixed prices; so do government shops and large department stores.

You can't make an intelligent offer for merchandise until you know the going price — learn this by doing comparison shopping beforehand in fixed-price stores. Play a little game with yourself then — before you check the price tag, guess what it will be. Are your estimates too high? Too low?

ACT I: Now you sweep onto the stage. The owner may meet you at the door and escort you to a sales clerk. They're both looking you over carefully to decide whether you're seriously interested in buying and how much you'll pay.

You should be doing some sizing up, too. Are they anxious to sell? (If you're the first customer of the day, a superstitious shopkeeper may give you a good price — it's considered lucky to make a sale soon after opening. Just before closing also can be rewarding — especially if business has been bad that day.)

Ask to see the item you're interested in and hold onto it throughout this act.

Look it over very carefully; request whatever information you need; then inquire about cost. Now is when your star performance begins. Register surprise — also disappointment — that the price is so high.

ACT II: Throughout this entire act the item you want to buy remains in your hands. If you're with a group of friends, they should go on to another shop — or at least give you privacy — as a very confidential scene is coming up.

You, of course, know the price quoted in Act I is not what you're expected to pay — the shopkeeper merely set the ball rolling. You now offer perhaps 50 per cent less than you are prepared to pay.

The shopkeeper laughs at your ridiculous offer (it's written in the script), but he comes down a bit on price. There are offers and counteroffers.

Be friendly — perhaps even discuss how much you like his country or how hospitable his people are. Look for flaws in the merchandise and other reasons why the price should be lowered.

ACT III: Every drama needs conflict. Now your performance should make the shopkeeper worry about losing a sale.

Be concerned over whether your husband will like the item (even if you don't have a husband). Fret over its fitting into your suitcase. Have second thoughts about the color being right for your livnig room. Put the item down — be uncertain whether you want it.

The shopkeeper now may name a more realistic price. With your next offer he may even flick his wrist "take it away — it's yours." Perhaps you can't agree on a price and decide to leave — don't be surprised if he comes onto the street after you to say he accepts your offer.

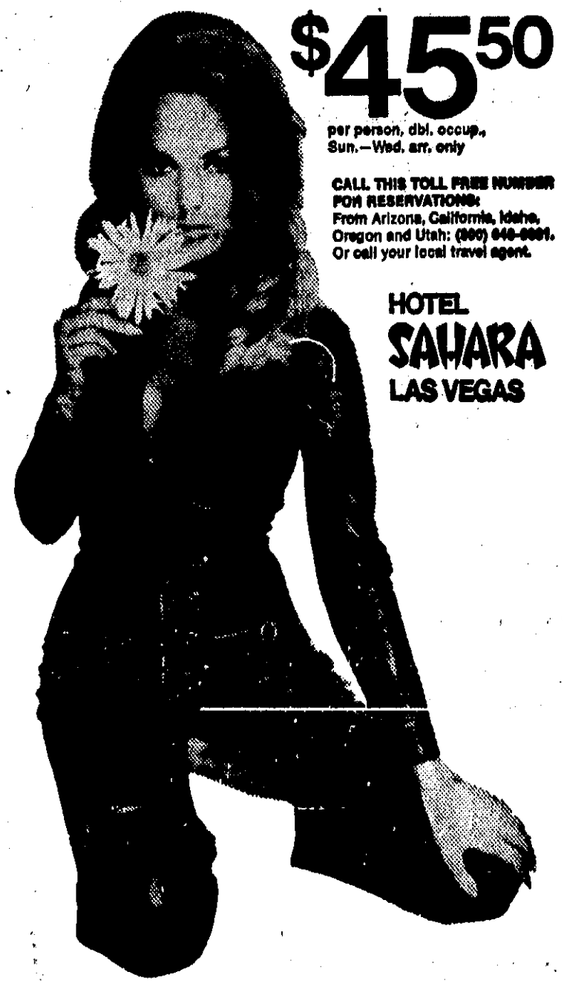

If you don't reach an agreement today, stop in another time. Perhaps business will have been off then and he'll be ready to sell at your price. Of course, if you really want the item badly enough, you always can pay his price.

The curtain never rings down on the thrid act until you're ready for it to.

Throughout the world bargaining ranks as an art involving social and cultural interchange; the more skilled you become at it the more you are respected. Strive at all times to to give an award-winning performance — you'll feel less like a tourist.

HOTEL SAHARA LAS VEGAS

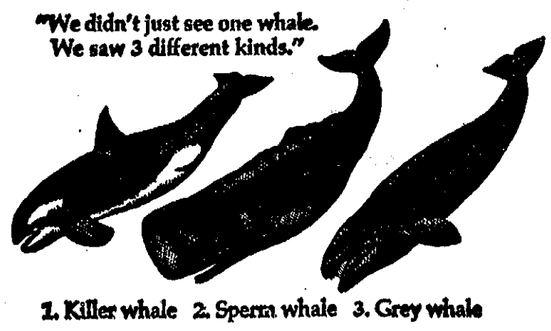

A P&O Cruise to Alaska. It's a good place to get acquainted with your husband.

This summer, P&O Lines is offering a beautiful experience for people to have in common: Alaska. On four separate cruises, P&O's S.S. Arcadia will sail up the smooth Inland Passage past some of the most spectacular scenery in all of nature.

A ringside seat in nature.

From a deck chair or lounge aboard Arcadia, you'll get a clear, close look at evergreen forests, sheer rock cliffs, ice mountains, and marine wildlife. There'll be fascinating shore stops at places where the flavor is Russian (Sitka) or Victorian (Victoria). Plus non-stop shipboard entertainment: dance bands, movies, four night-clubs, an English pub.

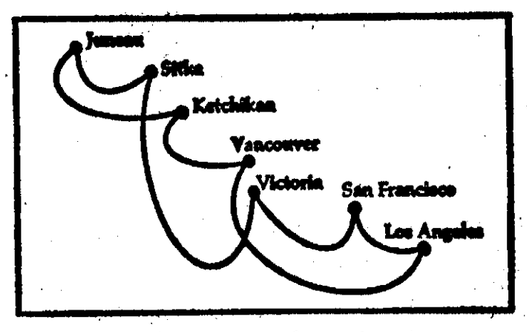

"We didn't just see one whale. We saw 3 different kinds."

1. Killer whale 2. Sperm whale 3. Grey whale

Even the time is reasonable.

A P&O Alaska Cruise fits comfortably within the two-week span of an ordinary vacation. There are four sailings to choose from, including a Thrift season cruise in May, priced 10% less. Family budget fares, too. When you think about it, there probably isn't a better place in the world to meet people — including the ones you already know.

Alaska Cruises from $395.

Two weeks. S.S. Arcadia leaves Los Angeles on four Sundays, May 23, June 6, June 20, July 4. Sail to Vancover. Cruise the Inland Passage to Ketchikan, Juneau, Lynn Canal, Glacier Bay, (complimentary tour of Mendenhall Glacier). Return to Los Angeles via Sitka, Victoria and San Francisco. All P&O ships are of British registry.

A LOVELIER YOU

Fashion—the knitty gritty

By MARY SUE MILLER

Knit fashions continue to grow — and grow. The newsiest are fine gauge single knits, cotton knits with silky surfaces, knit denims and polyesters with jacquard and tapestry patterns knitted in. Colors come clear, with black the important exception.

Designing is soft, sometimes even slinky. In the separates group, shrinks have really shrunk. Other tops come close, only sleeves balloon out. Skirts widen to dirndl and ruffly proportions. Below-knee to above-ankle lengths get the nod. Pants, knickers and short-shorts are right in there.

In the dress department, possibly the first target of spring shoppers, a totally fresh look prevails. Knit dresses have gained distinction and individuality. Just by way of example, there are smashing giant plaid coat dresses, long "tunics" rippling with pleats, rows of fringe circling a late-day dress. All body-touching.

Therein is the key to wearing . . . the undertouches. Bras, pantie girdles, the new again all-in-one, slips and petticoats must shape languidly to the figure without show of seam or wrinkle.

It is possible that many a Lovely will have to rethink her lingerie. Her figure, too.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

While playing rubber bridge a few nights ago, my partner was dealt two consecutive Yarboroughs (nine high). Can you give me the odds on this?

Unlucky Partners, Pittsbugh.

Answer. Assuming a good shuffle each time, the odds against a player holding two consecutive nine-high hands are about 334,500,000 to 1. Even if you play 100 deals a day, this should not happen to you again for something like 10,000 years. If it does, either change partners or take a closer look at the shuffle.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner and I lost at duplicate last night because of our opening bids on these three hands. We would like to know the bidding you recommend.

1. ♠ J 7 6 4 3 2 ♥ A K Q 10 8 ♦ A Q ♣ —
2. ♠ K 2 ♥ A 10 ♦ A K J 4 ♣ J 10 8 6 3
3. ♠ A Q J 7 6 4 2 ♥ — ♦ K 10 6 ♣ A 4 2

A Loser, Erie, Pa.

Answers.

1. One spade. With six spades and five hearts, it is never right to bid one heart regardless of suit texture.

Some players erroneously open one heart, intending to rebid spades. However, this almost always leads to disaster because responder never can read the correct distribution.

2. One diamond or one club are both acceptable. However, I prefer an opening bid of one no-trump. The hand meets the point-count requirements of an opening bid of one no-trump, and the advantages of minimizing rebid problems outweigh the disadvantages of unbalanced distribution.

I would not open one no-trump if I held a five-card major.

3. One spade. The hand is too weak for a stronger bid and too strong for an opening four bid.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Please answer a silly question. With a part score of 60, my partner deals and passes and I bid two hearts knowing she would pass a one heart opening. She quotes the book and says she must bid. She raised me with no support. I know there are rules, but how about a little horse sense?

Down A Bundle, Denver.

Answer. As a practical matter, when the partnership has a part score of 60, responder will make every effort to keep the bidding alive. Therefore, there is little reason to stretch matters to open with a demand opening two-bid.

If your partner held a weak hand without trump support, her proper bid was two no-trump and not three hearts.

Cable TV Awaits FCC 'Go'

By ISABELLE HALL
United Press International

"We sit in a state of nervous prostration," said Donald V. Taverner.

Taverner is president of the National Cable Television Association. He's sweating out a ruling by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) on how far and how fast Cable Television will be permitted to expand its operations.

The seven-member FCC may rule on the issue this spring. If it gives Cable Television all it's seeking, Taverner predicts the new medium will quickly burgeon into a giant industry, "bigger than the motion picture industry ever was."

But Cable Television's dreams are threatened by opposition from the regular or "free" television industry whose welfare the FCC also is charged with protecting.

COMMUNITY Antenna Television (CATV), as Cable TV is formally called, began in the rolling hills of Pennsylvania more than 20 years ago. The first CATV system started in 1949 in Mahanoy City, Pa., importing distant television signals into otherwise inaccessible areas.

CATV systems pick television signals out of the air with a very high antenna, amplify them and carry them by cable to subscribers' television sets — all for a fee, of course.

The system worked so well that it soon spread to some cities and other areas with access to "free" television. The selling points were the reduction in local interference and the fact that CATV frequently could offer a wider choice of programs than were available locally.

TODAY, THERE are approximately 2,400 such systems serving 4.5 million homes in 3,900 communities in 49 states. The CATV industry has annual revenues of about $300 million and an investment of more than $600 million.

Given what it calls "reasonable regulation" from the FCC, the industry predicts that in 10 years it will serve 30 million homes via 7,500 systems, have annual revenues of $3 billion, an investment of $5 billion and directly employ 750,000 persons. Eventually it hopes to see the entire nation wired for sight.

Starting April 1, all CATV systems serving 3,500 or more homes must begin originating some programs of their own. This move, ordered by the FCC, brings them

CANADIAN RADIO-TV

Rock Around the Dial

By Associated Press

A Canadian government order is making sure that Americans visiting Canada get a full quota of country and rock music. That was not the aim of the regulation, but it has worked out that way.

The Canadian Radio - Television Commissioner ruled that the music programing of radio stations must show a 30 per cent Canadian content.

The new rule became effective Jan. 18 without fanfare, since most stations already had been shifting gradually to music featuring Canadian artists or recorded in Canada. For many it meant little change, but some of the middle-of-the-road stations had to double their Canadian content, mostly with rock.

Some station owners complained that the new system was going to make all stations sound the same, and that they were going to have to include inferior records to meet the 30 per cent requirement.

But the change apparently is achieving one of the goals set forth by Pierre Juneau, chairman of the commission. That is the development of Canadian talent and a Canadian recording industry.

Don Tarlton, Montreal music impresario, said: "The Canadian record industry didn't have a market place two years ago . . . Now it's the third largest seller of contemporary records in the world. And this happened only with the threat of legislative radio."

There has been more grumbling about directives which will require Canadian television to increase its Canadian content to 60 per cent. No more than 30 per cent of the remainder can come from any one country. This will cut back the use of U.S. shows.

The government-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has until October this year to comply. The private network CTV has until October 1972.

One of the critics is Douglas Marshall, TV writer for Maclean's magazine. He notes that Toronto is a TV viewer's paradise because he can choose among the three U.S. networks and the two Canadian, while in "have not" areas only the Canadian networks will be available.

"One can applaud the CRTC decision on patriotic

under rules similar to those governing the nation's 8,000 radio and television stations. The programs may be sponsored and they must meet the FCC's fairness and public service tests.

The National Association of Broadcasters, voice of the "free" broadcasting industry, is opposed to another proposal advanced by the FCC that CATV stations also be allowed to import distant television stations into other markets. This proposal, for example, might bring Cleveland progams into New York or Detroit programs into Boston, New York City or Boston programs to San Francisco.

THE PROPOSALS under study by the FCC would:

—Allow importation of up to four distant independent signals into each of the nation's top 100 markets.

—Require deletion of all "foreign" commercials and substitution of local commercials in all such imported programs.

—Require CATV systems to pay 5 per cent of their quarterly revenues to public broadcasting to support educational television.

—Prohibit cable broadcasting of sports events unless they have not been televised live on free television during the preceding two years.

—Bar joint ownership arrangements among cable television, over-the-air radio stations and newspapers, and place limitations on the number of CATV systems any one owner could hold.

Most of the members of the commission have indicated their belief that CATV must be given the chance to see what it can do competitively. They also appear agreed they should not wait for Congress to act on various proposals that CATV begin paying copyright fees for material it plucks from the air. CATV has agreed to make such payments if this is the only way it can expand. However, Sen. John O. Pastore (D-RI), chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee says he expect the FCC to consult Congress before adopting rules.

IN AN interview with UPI, Taverner told how CATV systems are gearing up to offer original programs. He also looked into the future at the "blue sky" world of satellite-to-home television, international program exchanges, mail delivery, facsimile newspapers shown on the screen with a printout copy on the side, shopping by television with the bills automatically paid and the goods delivered, and two-way educational programs.

"Once the industry opens up, these things can become very real," he said. "The broadcast industry quite naturally feels threatened. I don't think we're going to put the broadcaster out of business but we're going to diminish his market. That's pretty healthy."

What about the cost of cable television service?

To begin with, Taverner says, a CATV system costs only a fraction as much as an over-the-air station to operate. Besides, he sees lots of local advertising revenues that are unavailable to free television because the message would be too local for their high rates.

"CATV will be more of a people's television," Taverner said.

"Cable television doesn't have to have a mass audience. The days of the crusading newspaper is pretty well gone and television seems to have difficulty facing it. Cable television can do it."

PAN AND FAN MAIL

CH. 4's "Adam-12" has been moved to 9:30 p.m., Thursday, and my kids are heart-broken. They can't stay up that late on a school night. Also, in the interest of police community relations, you'd think they would have it scheduled earlier, for the benefit of our young people.

Susan Merrissett, Wilmington

HITHERTO a "reader only" of your marvelous "Pan & Fan," I can no longer sit and breathe my yeas and nays to myself since a writer criticized the Dick Van Dyke show recently.

My family of six kids (19-8 years) and I are enjoying the reruns of this show for the fourth time (also seen in Iowa and Illinois) and I would gladly let the supper burn rather than miss a segment. For clean, wholesome really fun and true-to-life script it is tops.

Movies, documentaries and travel shows (are) on my list of favorites, with brickbats to all soap operas, game shows and most series. Hated to see "Stump the Stars" tossed out though — good family fun. Any talk of a specific astrology show?

Mrs. C. Hughes, Lakewood

(Haven't heard of one).

JUST A line to say how much we enjoyed the Sunday night movie, "Ben Hur." It was wonderful to see an inspiring movie such as this. Wasn't this the same film made back in the '20s or '30s, starring Francis X. Bushman?

Also, we greatly enjoyed the special on "The Ever Glades." Let's hope area can be kept just as it is now. . . .

Mrs. C. Shallcross, Long Beach

(The Motion Picture Academy says "Ben Hur" was made five times, 1907, 1912, 1926, 1931 and 1959. Francis X Bushman appears on the credits for the 1926 silent version; Raymond Novarro was in both the 1926 and 1931 versions).

PAN AND FAN (Feb. 21) states that the "Jim Nabors show" reruns will start March 25. Does this mean we will only get reruns after that date? How come?

Jim Nabors is my favorite. I do hope his show won't be cancelled. Will you please give some data on him? How is he rated as a singer and performer? He never appears as a guest on other shows. His records are never played on radio. How come? Also, where does his show place in the ratings?

Mary Kramer, Long Beach

The normal run of 26 shows will have been completed by March 25 — except for the one pre-empted. There will be some reruns, the number is not definte. About next season, no definite word as yet. Nabors is about 38 years old; he doesn't do many guest appearances but has been on a Johnny Cash show. He records for Columbia. His last Nielsen rating was 19.4 which put him out of the top 20 but in the first 30 shows. As to how he rates as a singer and performer, I guess that's up to you).

. . . I HAVE a minor complaint regarding the list of credits on TV pro-

ALISTAIR COOKE

British Series On U.S.

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

On a sideboard in Alistair Cooke's book-lined study in New York is an English Staffordshire statuette of Franklin that is labeled "G. Washington."

Since the Revolution the British have often had a distorted view of the United States, a task Cooke has devoted the past 35 years to untangling as a correspondent for an English newspaper.

Now Cooke, on leave as chief American correspondent for the Guardian, is filming a personal history of the United States for BBC.

THE 13-WEEK series will be done in the same manner as Lord Kenneth Clark's "Civilisation" and has the same crew and producter, Michael Gill.

"This started when Stephen Hearst of BBC asked me to distill my experiences of the past 35 years into a television series. He said it should be pretentious and it should take three years to do," Cooke said.

Cooke, an American citizen since 1941, began sketching out the 13 shows in May 1969 and began filming this past October. The showings are scheduled to begin in England on Nov. 10, 1972, the Sunday following the American presidential election.

COOKE, a cultured and urbane man who is trim and ruddy at 62, is well known to American audiences as the host of "Masterpiece Theater" on the Public Broadcasting Service and as the host of "Omnibus" on CBS for seven years in the 1950s.

Sitting in his 15th-floor apartment overlooking Central Park, in a study filled with Americana, Cooke said, "We agreed there would be no actors, no wigs, no quill pens. That makes it harder, but you can show that you're walking through the artifacts of a civilization.

"You have to pick a place and say this represents something. For instance, in the episode 'The Making of a Revoution,' we go from the Archives Building in Washington and the Declaration of Independence to Ft. Ticonderoga to the Old South Meeting House in Boston to Williamsburg."

HORIZONS OF HOPE (4), 1 p.m. — How and why people help each other in personal and community involvements is explored in an hour's profile of "people who care" — a New York rehabilitation home for drug addicts, a Mexican-American neighborhood group in San Antonio, an Atlanta newspaper produced for the city's poor, and a free reading clinic, also in Atlanta. Hour was produced by the National Council of Churches.

QUEEN OF SPADES (28), 10 p.m. — Jennie Tourel and Vahan Khanzadian star in an English-language version of Tchaikovsky's 1890 opera, produced by Peter Herman Adler for "NET Opera Theatre" and directed by Kirk Browning. SPECIAL

HERE'S LUCY (2), 8:30 p.m. — And here's an encore of the segment that brought Lucy the second highest ratings of her 19 years of TV! Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton play themselves, with that famous 69-carat diamond! Lucy mistakes Burton for a plumber, and he leaves the $1.5 million ring in the office long enough for Lucy to try it on and get it stuck on her finger just as Liz is due to show it off to the Hollywood press. It's the first of summer (?) reruns for the renewed series.

CRITICS' CORNER

THE DRAGONS OF GALAPAGOS, aired Feb. 24, Ch. 7.

There is no question that ABC-TV's occasional series of specials, "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," has proven itself one of the most individual, worthwhile and entertaining projects in television history.

"The Dragons of Galapagos," about the marine iguana and why it is the only living animal that has reversed the course of evolution, was another fascinating offering for followers of Cousteau and his scientific efforts.

Produced and written by Andy White, with Rod Serling the narrator once again, the program took us to the Galapagos Islands, about 600 miles off Ecuador, where we saw these dragon-like iguanas. It was here that Charles Darwin last century uncovered clues that led to his theory of evolution. And it was here that we learned that the marine iguana returns to the sea for food and survival, diving into the cold waters it doesn't like in its struggle to exist at the barren volcanic islands.

The technical equipment and devices are always an added source of fascination on these specials. And so it was again

It was another first-class hour of . . . a series with a near-perfect formula: Enlightment combined with exhilirating adventure.

THE SELLING OF THE PENTAGON, aired Feb. 23, Ch. 2.

"CBS Reports" spent 10 months rounding up material on the far-flung public relations activities of the Department of Defense. The result was "The Selling of the Pentagon," a hard-ihtting description of the means used to sell the military establishment to the American public.

It pictured the largest agency in government as spending millions — its estimates ranged from $30 million to $190 million — on propaganda films, free radio and television tapes, blizzards of press releases, demonstrations, displays, lectures and guided tours of military installations for civilian VIPs.

The tone of Roger Mudd's narration was accusatory. A film showed Green Berets demonstrating for a group of school children their fighting tactics, followed by scenes of the children trying to imitate the stabbing and stomping.

A former information officer in Vietnam described how he "cast" certain pilots and made only these men available when a CBS camera team sought to make a feature. A former Army cameraman said a report on Vietnamese troops in action was staged for him.

Mudd's narration emphasized the significance of clips from department-made films on the menace of communism and excerpts from speeches by Pentagon spokesmen.

He charged that "the public and the press" has been "beguiled by the activity" which he called "the creation of a runaway bureaucracy."

It was sharply edited from a viewpoint and probably will make some waves in Washington.

'Montserrat'
Play Debuts on Ch. 28

Hollywood Television Theater's "Montserrat," a drama that pits a young man's ideals against his desire to save six human lives, will air on Ch. 28 at 9 p.m., Tuesday through Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

The cast includes Jack Albertson, Michael Baseleon, cott Colomby, Keir Dullea, Hurd Hatfield, Earl Hollinman, Noah Keen, Geraldine Page, Martin Sheen, Paul Stevens, Rip Torn and Jess Walton. David Friedkin is directing.

The drama focuses on Montserrat, portrayed by Keir Dullea, an idealistic young officer in the Spanish Occupation Army in Venezuela in 1812, who becomes a follower of the revolutionary leader Simon Bolivar. Six innocent hostages are threatened with execution if Montserrat refuses to betray Bolivar. The play deals with the confrontation between these hostages and Montserrat and the pressures on him to save their lives.

The play by Emmanuel Robles was first presented in 1948. Lillian Hellman adapted the play for a New York production, which ran on Broadway in 1949.

KEIR DULLEA, as Montserrat (foreground) agonizes over choice of betraying revolutionary leader to Rip Torn (left) or cause death of hostages including Geraldine Page.

TV NOTEBOOK

DINAH SHORE, discussing with Johnny Carson life in televisionland, last week complained mildly that NBC censors had "bleeped"—erased-references by a guest on her daytime show to an expensive San Francisco restaurant and to a brand of French wine that sells for $15 a bottle.

"I guess they thought they were free plugs," said Dinah. "But when I had quite a discussion with the author of 'The Sensuous Woman,' they never touched a word. Bureau of standards, where were you when I needed you?"

Edward G. Robinson, reminiscing about the early days of talking pictures on the educational stations, "The Movie Crazy Years" recalled that in "Little Caesar" he died while invoking "mother of mercy" because he was not allowed to use the word "God."

SESAME STREET will make its British debut next month on Harlech Television, one of Britain's independent commercial companies.

Harlech, which has four million viewers in Wales and western England, said it would show the children's program for two weeks to see if British kids like it.

If they do, the nationwide commercial network will take it over.

The British Broadcasting Corp. didn't think the program would go over and turned it down.

NBC NEWS correspondent Frank McGee will return to "NBC Nightly News" Tuesday, March 2, as co-anchorman for the daily news program.

Mr. McGee has been away from the newscast since Nov. 20, due to illness. Rejoining David Brinkley and John Chancellor, he will anchor the report from New York.

"NBC Nightly News" is colorcast seven days each week on the NBC, Ch. 4.

FORD FOUNDATION has awarded a total of $10.3 million to public television stations in New York, Washington, Chicago and Dallas for news and public affairs programming.

The bulk of the money was in two grants totalling $9.2 million to the Educational Broadcasting Corp., which operates New York's station WNET Channel 13. The funds were to support programming through mid-1972. An additional $1.5 million was given the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and to Community Television of Southern California (Ch. 28) to support public television's Hollywood Theater.

SOME PEOPLE call television the "Boob Tube" but British actress Glenda Jackson believes TV has made audiences more selective than ever about their entertainment.

Miss Jackson, voted best actress of 1970 by both the New York film critics and the National Society of Film for an Academy Award said in an interview:

"Television has brought about an enormous change of attitude toward entertainment, both in movie fare and at the theater."

She points out that television at home is free, which makes audiences more demanding when they must pay for fun.

"And television has made us all terribly conscious of the world as one unit. Problems are universal. Of course, TV is sheer unadulterated rubbish in the main, but the news coverage has made an enormous difference. Think of the drama in most news situations.

makes audiences more demanding when they must pay

"Turn on the news and — bam! — Vietnam, Biafra. It increases people's awareness. They have seen people living and dying on their television screens. So they demand more from their entertainment — greater depth and quality, the realities of life have to be made more real."

PLANS for future video cassette production now involve all three of the top American commercial broadcasting organizations.

Previously, CBS and RCA, parent company of NBC, announced long-range development of cassette players as well as projected programming in the entertainment and informational areas. Now ABC says it is joining with Britain's Associated Television Corp. to form a company "for the production and distribution of video cassette programming covering educational, industrial training and specialized home entertainment" fields.

IN THIS time of economic recession for the television industry 60 seconds of network time that normally commands $55,000 can be had for $40,000.

It is not unknown for an advertising agency to call up a network around 5 o'clock on a Friday afternoon and negotiate an even lower price for a weekend show.

But one show above all others is bucking the trend against knocked-down prices with a full head of steam — Flip Wilson.

The cost of time on the Flip Wilson show has nearly doubled since NBC first announced it a year ago.

Last winter, after announcing his new show, NBC asked for $46,000 a minute. In September, when the show premiered, the price went up to $55,000 a minute.

By October the price had climbed to $60,000. The following month it went to $65,000 a minute.

When the 30-second commercial was adopted by the networks that became the basic unit for the show and the price went to $40,000 for a half-minute. And that was at the time of the loss of the cigarette money.

In addition, the lead-in audience from Flip's show pulled up the price of "Ironside," which follows on Thursday nights. "Ironside" had always been a success, but its minute price went from $52,000 a year ago to $57,000 in October and to $60,000 in November.

The 30-second price for "Ironside" goes for $34,000.

THE INTERNS (2), 7:30 p.m. — Calling Dr. Kildare. Lew Ayres, who played the young doctor in movies more than 30 years ago returns to the hospital corridors as a stiff-necked heart specialist treating the ailing Dr. Goldstone — and resented by the interns because he seems less interested in Goldstone's recovery than in taking over his post at the hospital. David Sachs, M.D., heart surgeon turned actor, performs the surgery on Goldstone.

TV's Longest Running Show Shakey

Associated Press

After 23 years, virtually from the birth of television itself, the end appears to be at hand for Ed Sullivan's "really big show."

All signs indicate that television's longest-running show — when he began in June 1948, CBS had only five stations stretching from Boston to Baltimore — will be canceled at the end of this season. It goes into reruns in April, the earliest it has ever done so.

"We haven't picked up Ed's option for next year, but that also goes for 75 of our other shows," said Robert D. Wood, president of the CBS Television Network.

Sullivan's producer, Bob Precht, who is also his son-in-law, said, "Ed's not ready to retire. We've discussed changes in the show with CBS, but we also have feelers out to the other networks and we're looking into syndication."

THIS IS a tough year for any show not in the top 20 and Sullivan this year has managed to climb no higher than 21st. Generally, he has been far below that and in the last ratings period, for Feb. 1-7, he was 67th out of 77 shows.

Working against the 69-year-old Sullivan's cancellation is his great instinct for survival. Sullivan has been written off before — in fact, from the very beginning.

His stiff manner, his halting delivery and malapropisms made him a prime target for jokes and mimics. Undoubtedly, that was a part of his appeal, as was his unerring eye for talent.

TWO UNKNOWNS, Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin, got their break on his first show. Since then, the show has been the launching platform for a galaxy of stars including: Jack Paar, Lucille Ball, Jackie Gleason, Carol Burnett, Harry Belafonte, Sammy Davis Jr., Maria Callas, Elvis Presley, the Beatles, Barbra Streisand, Joan Rivers.

Last week CBS executives got down to the business of looking at pilots and deciding which new shows to order and which old shows to keep.

grounds," he said, "especially if one is an out-of-work TV actor living in Toronto, because it is designed to rescue a native TV production industry being strangled by alien mediocrity.

"But the situation remains patently unfair. It can begin to be justified if — and only if — have-not viewers can be assured that the limited foreign content they do see is the best television in the world."

Dalton Camp, Conservative politician, said: "It is not the purpose of a communications system to breed talent, otherwise let us have a network for novelists, poets and bassoon players, as we are woefully short of all three.

"It does not seem to be that we have made much of an advance, in terms of our vaunted sovereignty or in pursuit of our elusive identity, when we simply make the Canadian view a more narrow one and submit the most dynamic instruments of communication in the history of man to the censorious judgment of bureaucrats."

Canadian radio stations still have more leeway than those in Chile, at the other end of the hemisphere. There radio stations' music must be 40 per cent Chilean.

grams and movies. I never have time to read the cast of characters. I am always interested in supporting actors and I don't have time to catch their names. I see so many supporting actors a lot on the various hour programs — "Mission Impossible," "Medical Center," "Marcus Welbly, M.D.," etc.

My 22-year-old daughter and I watch a lot of TV in the winter. We like the news — alternating between Chs. 2 and 4; sports, old movies and Carol Burnett and Dean Martin. Of course, we watch other programs and also Ch. 28, when I remember to check the schedule. . . . We watched 28 and saw Jack Oakie, Aline McMahon, Gregory Ratoff and Zasu Pitts in a terrific 1932 satire of Hollywood. What's more, no commercials. Guess I'll send in the $15 for their magazine and contribute to non-commercial television. . .

22 ANSWERS FOR YOUR PEACE OF MIND

Q. What is Med-Income?

A. A revolutionary insurance policy that pays $100 a week up to 100 weeks ($10,000 total) direct to you when you're hospitalized.

Q. Will I collect even though I have other health insurance?

A. Positively! Med-Income pays direct to you regardless of what other policies you have.

Q. Will I collect even though I have Medicare?

A. Absolutely! Med-Income pays in addition to Medicare and can be used for all those many items not covered by Medicare.

Q. Do I need Med-Income even though I have hospitalization?

A. Yes. Med-Income pays direct tax-free cash to you, which you can use for house payments, groceries, credit bills, salary loss, etc. And Med-Income can pay for all those hospital items not covered by a hospitalization policy.

Q. Do I need a physical examination?

A. No. No physical exam is needed to be issued a Med-Income Policy.

Q. How long will I be paid?

A. For up to 100 weeks or $10,000.

Q. Do I have to use the Med-Income money on hospital bills?

A. No. This $100 tax-free money is paid directly to you for use as you see fit. Pay rent, bills—anything. Or put in the bank!

Q. Do I have to pay taxes on the Med-Income payments to me?

A. No, your payments are absolutely tax free!

Q. What about a health problem that may occur again?

A. Even pre-existing conditions are covered by Med-Income after your policy has been continuously in force for two years.

Q. What is NOT covered?

A. Hospitalization for nearly every imaginable sickness and accident is covered except hospitalization caused by mental and nervous disorder, or when confined in a veterans, or government hospital that makes no charge for services. Certain heart diseases specified in the policy are fully covered if the loss originates after the policy has been in force for six months.

Q. When does my Med-Income Policy go in force?

A. On the date your application is approved in our office. Accidents are covered on that day. After 30 days in force, the policy covers you for sicknesses.

Q. If I'm hospitalized, when do I start receiving benefits?

A. You get $100 a week ($14.28 per day) paid directly to you from the very first day you go in the hospital from an accident. When hospitalized for sickness, you will be paid $100 a week after a three-day waiting period.

Q. Why the three-day wait?

A. To lower your policy costs. By starting benefits on the fourth day of hospitalization from sickness, Med-Income eliminates the small one, two-and-three-day claims that run up your cost. Consequently, these savings are passed on to you in the form of a lower rate for this policy. Of course, benefits are payable from the first day if hospitalized from an accident.

Q. May I have more than one Med-Income Policy?

A. Because of the exceptional nature of the policy, we are forced to limit the number each person may have to two.

Q. Does Med-Income pay in any hospital?

A. You are covered in any lawfully operated public or private hospital except nursing homes and government hospitals that make no charge.

Q. As I grow older, will my benefits be reduced?

A. No. Never! Everyone paying adult rates gets the same benefits—regardless of age.

Q. Will my claims be handled quickly?

A. Yes! When you get your policy you will receive a simple, easy-to-use Claim Notice. Your claims will be processed quickly and your checks sent directly to you.

Q. Can I save by paying in advance?

A. Yes, almost 10 per cent. If you pay 11 times your monthly premium, you will receive credit for one full year.

Q. Why are premiums so low?

A. Because we only sell through the mail. We pay no salesman's commission It is on a volume basis, our costs are lower and so we pass the savings on to you.

Q. Why should I enroll now?

A. You risk nothing—not even a postage stamp, because there is absolutely no risk on your part and delaying could cost you $100 a week. Send your application now. If in any way you are not completely satisfied, you may return the policy within ten days. You've lost nothing. So fill out the self-addressed card now.

Q. Will a salesman call on me?

A. No, that's why we can offer such low premiums.

Q. Is Industrial Life Insurance Company licensed in my state?

A. Yes, this old line legal reserve company is licensed to do business in your state.

WELLS REPORT

The Square Root of All Evil

The British this year are changing their currency over to the decimal system. There will be 10 shillings to the pound and 10 pence to each shilling. Whilst there have been some splendid outcries from the There-Will-Always-Be-an-England crowd, one voice that should have been lifted in stentorian protest has been curiously silent.

Where are you, Duodecimal Society of America, now that we need you?

Britain was the last major nation in the world to convert its money to the decimal unit. Australia made the change a couple of years ago and dropped the pound entirely in favor of that longtime decimal monetary unit, the dollar. This worldwide changeover to decimal money is part of a bigger long-term shift to the metric system, which uses 10 as the basis of all weights and measures.

There are a few of us freethinkers who don't think the metric system is all that progressive. After all, any number above one can be used as the basis of a system of weights and measures or money. A lot of numbers have much more going for them than 10 has.

It is generally accepted that the reason for the widespread use of 10 is that people have 10 fingers. But there are lots of things wrong with 10. Have you ever handed three kids a dollar and told them to divide it equally among them?

Back in 1944, when men of ordinary intellect were worrying about such minor matters as the United Nations and postwar relations with Russia, a farsighted group in New York was worrying about how to divide a dollar equally among three kids. They founded the Duodecimal Society of America.

The duodecimal system is based on the number 12. It was used by the Romans among others. The great advantage of 12 is that it can be divided equally by 2, 3, 4 and 6, while 10 can only be divided by 2 and 5.

"It is expected that the change from 10s to 12s may take a long time, but, since the dozen base is better, ultimately the change is inevitable," Ralph H. Beard wrote in the July, 1945, issue of The Duodecimal Bulletin.

Brave but futile words. The old British imperial pound system was founded on duodecimals in that it has 12 pennies to the shilling. Logically, it should have had 12 shillings to the pound, but they fouled up and put 20 shillings to the pound.

Twenty is the base for the vigesimal system. The ancient Maya Indians used a vigesimal system. This is probably because they wore sandals and could use their toes to count as well as their fingers.

We use the duodecimal system when we order doughnuts or eggs, but we use the decimal system to pay for them.

The ancient Babylonians had a sexagesimal system based on 60. It was OK but you had to get three people together and take their shoes off before you could count anything. We still use the sexagesimal system telling time.

I last heard from the Duodecimal Society in the late 1960s when they boasted 155 members and had headquarters at 20 Carleton Place in New York City. I hope they haven't let the British switch to the decimal system discourage them. After all, if we had a duodecimal system of 144 cents to the dollar, you could split two bits among two kids and give each one-bit.

Actually, the big trouble with our monetary system in this country is that we have two systems of money.

The first and most commonplace system is the one we use in everyday transactions — for paying bills, priming the coffee machine, matching coins for the lunch check, buying newspapers and keeping the checkbook balanced.

The second system involves the kind of money we spend in Las Vegas and Miami and at conventions, for physicians' and dentists' bills, and the kind our wives write checks for.

Both moneys look practically identical, but as everyone knows the money the boss pays you is much different from the money you spend in Las Vegas. The money in your paycheck is serious decimal stuff, a hundred cents to the dollar, five bucks to the fin, two fins to the sawbuck.

I have not been able to figure out the number basis for the money used in Las Vegas or Miami. Its value, however, is considerably less than ordinary everyday money. It may not even be money at all. The economist F. H. Gane flatly declares:

"Money cannot be used as a medium of exchange unless that function is accompanied by a process in which a decision has been reached by both buyer and vendor that a given quantity of product is equal in value to a given sum of money."

How does that explain five bucks on odd and a buck on 00? □

Q: It cost us billions to put a man on the moon. How much did it cost for Columbus to discover America? — Cliff Hancock, Leonia, N.J.

A: Approximately $7,250!

Q: Has Joe Friday's "Dragnet" badge number 714 ever been officially issued to members of the L.A. police department? — Greg Cord, Shelbyville, Ind.

A: No. "Our personnel records indicate that Badge 714 has never been issued to a member of this department," informs the office of E. M. Davis, Los Angeles chief of police. "Badge 714 was retired permanently from the L.A.P.D. after a seven-year loan to Jack Webb for use on television. The original is now kept in the L.A.P.D. museum."

Q: How late in life did President Eisenhower quit smoking? And for what reason? — Mrs. Priscilla B., Arlington, Va.

A: Ike gave up smoking in 1945 — on doctor's orders. When his vice president, Richard Nixon, asked if he was ever tempted to resume the habit, Eisenhower said, "No!" Then added: "I can't say that I might not start again. But I can tell you one thing for sure — I'll never quit again."

Q: Richard Carpenter (of the musical Carpenters) — what's he looking for in a wife? (Nothing personal, I already have a husband who digs me.) — Minerva P., Omaha.

A: Bachelor Carpenter candidly told reporter Earl Leaf: "The girl who marries me must be prepared to put up with a lot — my long hours recording, months of traveling and living out of suitcases, the constant presence of managers, agents, technicians, etc. Some wives resent such intrusions, pressures and the absence away from home. Also, I need plenty of time alone. When I get up on the wrong side of the bed in a lousy humor, I usually sit down and wham the piano till I feel better."

Q: I think Marilyn Monroe had the sexiest walk of any female. Who today do you consider to be the slinkiest wigglers? And is it natural or a put-on? — R.T., Cincinnati.

A: I'll try to wiggle out of the question by nominating Ann-Margret, Brigitte Bardot, Ursula Andress, Raquel Welch or Gina Lollobrigida. Any one of whom would win in a walk. About the provocative posterior pace, Ursula says, "Wiggling is very pretty if you do it right, but it's not necessary." Ann-Margret pouts, "I've never been conscious of how I walk from the waist down. I would never walk like a man. What fun would there be in that?" Marlo Thomas insists that the gait is a by-product of wearing high heels. And Miss Bardot sums up by saying, "I wouldn't know. I never saw myself walking from the rear."

Q: I understand that multi-millionaire Huntington Hartford's hobby is analyzing handwriting. How can I get him to analyze mine?—Lisa W., Long Beach.

A: Just ask him — if you run into him in a restaurant! Hartford is such an enthusiastic graphologist that even when he dines publicly he analyzes the handwriting of companions, autograph hunters, waiters and busboys.

Q: Has anyone ever conducted a survey to determine the favorite TV show of prison inmates? — Cary Gerard, Washington, D.C.

A: At Florida's Broward County Jail, Miami's TV channel 10 (WPLG) discovered that the captive audience's overwhelming preference was "It Takes a Thief."

Q: In speaking of the Woman's Lib movement, who said, "Man has one pride — masculinity. When a wife encroaches on that pride, she's lost a lover and gained a son?" — Rachel B., Detroit.

A: The late Robert Ruark — long before the femmes got lippy about the Lib.

Columbus . . . exploration was cheaper in his days.

Jack Webb . . . his badge number has been retired.

Ike and Dick . . . the former had something to say about quitting smoking.

Carpenters . . . the girl he weds will "have to put up with a lot."

Robert Ruark . . . he had a warning for Women's Libbers.

Huntington Hartford . . . avid analyzer of handwriting.

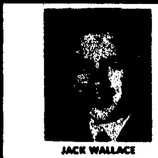

Raquel, Ursula, Ann-Margret . . . three of the best at wiggling.

A COP

Joe Wambaugh is probably the last man you'd pick out of a crowded room as being a cop. He doesn't look like the grim-jawed, taciturn movie-TV version of a veteran policeman, and he talks in a rapid-fire delivery that sparkles with humor and enthusiasm.

You probably wouldn't take him to be a writer, either. He doesn't have the hung-up look of worried introspection, nor the occupational egocentricity.

But a bombshell novel titled The New Centurions by 34-year-old Sgt. Joseph Wambaugh of the Los Angeles Police Department proves he is one hell of a writer, any way you look at it. And his sensitive analysis of today's socio-economic guerrilla warfare in the streets leaves you with the conviction he's one hell of a cop, too.

The novel, which tells police work like it is (and it isn't television's Adam-12), is a runaway sensation, in its third printing by Atlantic-Little, Brown even before it was officially brought out Jan. 13. It was bought by Book-of-the-Month Club even before publication, and immediately became the subject of spirited bidding by moviemakers for screen rights. It also has received unanimous critical acclaim for what the experts call a literary accomplishment of power, scope and importance.

Not joining in the acclaim, however, is L.A.P.D. Chief E. E. Davis. The chief's objections to the book were forcefully stated in a letter to the publisher before the novel was issued, requesting the deletion of certain portions and the change of others, if the book had to be published at all.

After the publisher refused Davis' request, Wambaugh was brought up before a departmental trial board and charged with violating regulations that say a policeman must have official permission to publish anything about his police experiences. Wambaugh protested that the book is fiction, not fact, but he was convicted. Theoretically, it could have resulted in his dismissal from the force. But he got off with an "admonishment," an official expression of departmental censure.

Chief Davis' objections to the book may have been based on many points. For instance, he couldn't have been too happy about Wambaugh's fictional L.A. cops doing such un-Adam-12 things as freeloading for meals and booze, belting unarmed suspects, and occasionally lying on a courtroom witness stand. Or admittedly being paralyzed by fear when threatened by an advancing mob.

It's most likely, however, that the main objection was to Wambaugh's candid assertions that the police are powerless to cope with a full-scale riot such as the one that erupted in Watts in 1965 — vividly depicted in the climax of The New Centurions. The chief probably felt that potential rioters shouldn't have what might be construed as an invitation handed them.

"Hell, they know it anyway," Wambaugh said when the point was brought up. "They've tried us out, they know where they stand now. They know how hard it is for a couple of thousand cops to cope with a real riot."

Actually, Wambaugh's book will help rather than hurt the public image of policemen, and maybe Chief Davis realizes this by now. It won't make the professional cop-haters love them and it will be resented by the professional cops-can-do-no-wrong sycophants. But it will help the wide segment of people in between these two extremes understand policemen, understand the pressures a police officer is up against, understand how he feels, understand how he reacts. And if this isn't the first big step in anybody's public relations, somebody will have to rewrite the PR manual.

The book pulls you inside the story and alongside the characters. It carries you along on a rising pitch like the wail of a siren. You feel the self-disgust felt by the maddened cop after he savagely chokes a surrendered suspect; that is your paralyzing fear when the world turns upside down and your badge becomes the mark of the quarry instead of the hunter; those are your guts spilling out into a crummy street while you try to push them back inside your uniform to get them out of the dirt; that is your vomit in a stinking public toilet staked out by the vice cops for fags.

This article is a story about Wambaugh himself, and is not intended to include a review of his novel. The novel has been reviewed to the saturation point by experts.

But it's impossible to consider Sgt. Joe Wambaugh without recurrent reference to his book, because he is all mixed up with it. So are most of the cops he had worked with during his 11 years on the department's "hot" divisions. While Wambaugh insists no character in the novel portrays a real-life individual, he admits real-life individuals contributed to the combinations which make the characters.

His three protagonists, as they mature in their jobs,

AND HIS BOOK

—the novel that bugged the LAPD

By Stan Leppard

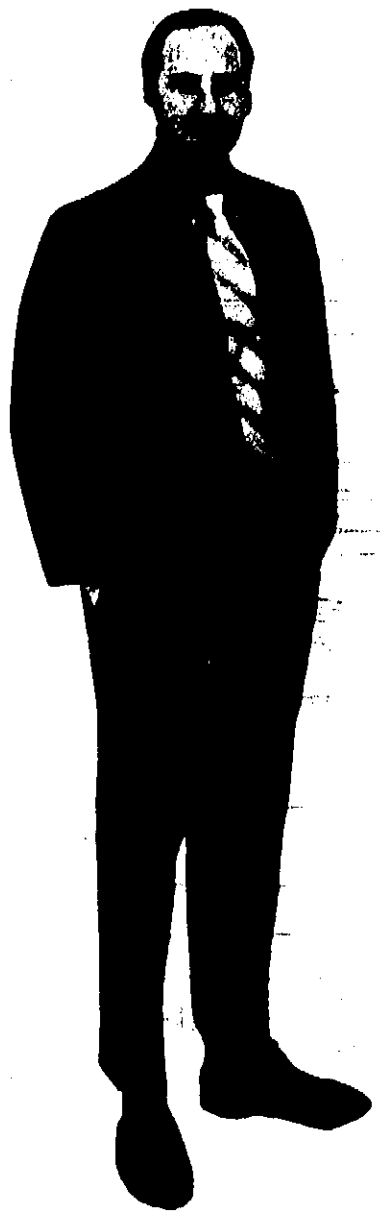

acquire the quality that emerges in the personality of the author — a real compassion for the victims of the present-day social upheaval; the victims on both sides of the law. Joe Wambaugh, like his paper cops, has seen it all and felt it all But you get the idea the experience hasn't brutalized him or soured him. It has made him a realist, unmoved by calumny, unshaken by hate. Call him a "pig" — so what? There are pigs and pigs. The intended insult registers but it doesn't wound.

"Any policeman who wants to be loved had better be a social worker or a fireman," he says. He says it without bitterness, only the matter-of-fact realism born out of 11 years in the felony, detective, vice and juvenile divisions of the 77th, Newton, University, Wilshire, Hollywood and Hollenbeck divisions.

While Wambaugh expects no love from his job, he gives it love in return. He'll probably be independently wealthy because of the novel, but his job as a cop is the most important thing in the world to him — and he was worried sick when he thought he might be fired.

While waiting for Sgt. Wambaugh to show up for our interview date in an East L.A. Mexican restaurant — in the Hollenbeck area, where he is now a detective — I flipped through a biographical sketch furnished by the publisher.

'Born Jan. 22, 1937, in East Pittsburgh, Pa.; eyes, green; hair, dark brown; height, 5' 10½," weight, 165.

Graduated from Chaffey High School in Ontario, spent three years in the U.S. Marines, worked at Kaiser Steel Mills in Fontana before becoming a policeman. Married 15 years to the former Dee Allsup; two sons, Mark, 8, and David, 6.

While in the steel mills and after becoming a policeman, went to night school at Los Angeles State College where he received both a Bachelor of Arts and a Master's degree in English. Intends to become a teacher after retirement from the L.A.P.D. in nine more years.

I recognized him from his photos when he entered, natty in a brown suit, green shirt, striped tie.

"You don't look like a cop," I said by way of greeting, and Wambaugh laughed, obviously enjoying the opening left for him. "You one of those guys who insists on stereotyping cops?" he shot back.

From there, it went like this:

How much hassle are you still getting about your book around your own station?

There's a resentment there. There could be a lot of resentment there, in my job. I've already had a taste of it . . . Well, like my lieutenant who transferred two weeks ago — a guy I like, personally. The day he left, he sort of announced to several others, detectives there, that now he was leaving, he could say what he thinks — and he thinks this book is 'garbage.' He didn't tell me that. But it got back to me.

A COP AND HIS BOOK

Why does the PD take this attitude, when you've got to figure the book will help it more than harm it?

You know, when you do something like this, you run into the age-old problem. Most of the static I get is from people who have not read the damn book. You can't fight it.

Some captain or lieutenant will be making remarks about 'this lousy book,' you know, and somebody will ask them: 'When did you read it?' and they say 'Hell, I wouldn't read it, I wouldn't give that guy the satisfaction of reading that trash.' It's just impossible to cope with that.

They just keep on putting me down, saying I 'sold out the department for money,' but they don't add the postscript: That they haven't even read the book.

Does anybody object to the language?

I think the kind of language in this book is probably pretty mild, compared to others. If you've read Portnoy's Complaint and Myra Brechenridge and all this sort of thing, you know we've been using worse language than this for a long time. The rough language in this book is just the way men talk in this line of work. You know, they talk like the people in the street, the people they deal with.

And another thing, if you noticed, there's no explicit sex in the book. Oh sure, there is sex, but not explicit sex, like they write nowadays. It's really a mild book.

Do you think Chief Davis might re-read the book and change his mind?

He never read it to begin with.

Then how did he know what he was complaining about when he wrote the publisher?

Old dumb me took the galley proofs in, that's how. Frankly, I thought: 'Boy, is the chief going to be happy . . . One of his guys wrote a book, gonna get a little PR for the department,' so I took the galleys in and gave them to him — to his office, not to him personally I've never met Chief Davis.

Then?

About three weeks later I heard from his office that whoever read it for him strongly disapproved. It got stronger and stronger, and then they called me in . . . Not the chief, somebody else, but they said the chief disapproved of it and wanted certain changes made.

First of all, they wanted it not to be published at all. But barring that, they wanted changes. So that started the correspondence between the publisher and Chief Davis.

How did the newspapers get it?

Well, when the Book-of-the-Month Club news came out, there was a little statement in the biography on me, where I said — harmlessly and innocuously, I thought — 'I hope I don't get in trouble with the department,' or something like that.

Some reporters picked that up, then they found out the chief had been trying to get the publisher to edit it . . . Well, I guess they figured that was a story, the censorship angle.

But it was predictable, because way back in January, 1970, the publisher told the chief he really shouldn't make an issue out of it, because if he did, there would be a scandal. The publisher told Chief Davis that Little-Brown was an old, conservative publishing house and didn't need a scandal to sell the book, it would succeed well enough without a scandal, so they wished he wouldn't do it.

But anyway, by the time the reporters picked up the story, the investigation on me was official. Then the press found out that I was under investigation, and the story just kept growing.

What kind of investigation?

It was what they call a 'personnel complaint.' I was charged, officially, with failing to get permission to publish.

That was the charge, but unofficially, the charge was: We don't like the contents of the book. That was the real issue.

Did it worry you?

Well, yes. Especially at first, because when I first heard that the chief was annoyed about it, that was before the Book-of-the-Month Club had picked it up. And that was about the time when I had been told, by people who know about such things, that the $3,000 advance I got on it was par for the course for a first novel, and I probably wouldn't make another dime on it.

I lost the $3,000 advance in a bad business deal, everybody told me the book wouldn't earn any more, being a first novel, then I heard chief was hopping mad and I stood a good chance of being fired — hell, yes, I was worried.

I figured I probably could teach, at about $5,000 a year less than I'm making as a sergeant with 11 years' service, but what the hell — the job is the main thing, I like my job, I don't want to lose it. Oh yeah, I was worried, no question about it. I was kind of wondering whether I should have written the book or not.

Don't you have a new book in the works?

It's already sold. It's another cop story called The Blue Knight. This one's about the old-timer cops, not the rookies.

What has been said about it?

Nothing, not to me. Somebody — somebody from the press — asked the chief 'What are you going to do about the next one?' and they quoted the chief as saying 'We'll worry about that when the time comes.'

Leaving the book for awhile, what impresses you most about the changing attitude — the hostility — toward police?

When I first came on, we didn't meet with hostility from the white, middle-class kids that we meet with now. Most of these kids — the ones in the demonstrations on the Westwood campus and all that — are middle-class, and upper-class, kids. When I came out here, we didn't get hostility from them.

Now, they are the Cossacks . . . I can't think of a better word.

Why the hostility?

Well, this is the age of youth, we pay attention to them now. Youth always has been rebellious against authority, and we are the symbols of authority. Now that everybody is listening to them, they rebel, and we're it. They don't rebel against their parents, not violently in most cases, and they don't rebel against their school authorities, not violently.

We are the ones who get the bricks thrown at us, that means, literally get the bricks thrown at us. They're mad about their faculty, their program at school, they don't like this and that. Eventually, a bunch of them will try to burn down the gymnasium or the ROTC, and we are the ones who will have to go out there and face them. So there's the symbol of authority right in front of them. Handy.

Do you think an organized subversive element keeps it going?

I don't see Communists under the bed . . . You can't discount the importance of subversive elements, but they, these kids, are not Communists. They couldn't care less about Karl Marx, and so on.

But this revolution, violently, you know, to make a change, is probably more dangerous than the Communist Party. It's got to be. The kids have assumed that violence is the only way to make a change, and they haven't really grown up enough to realize something.

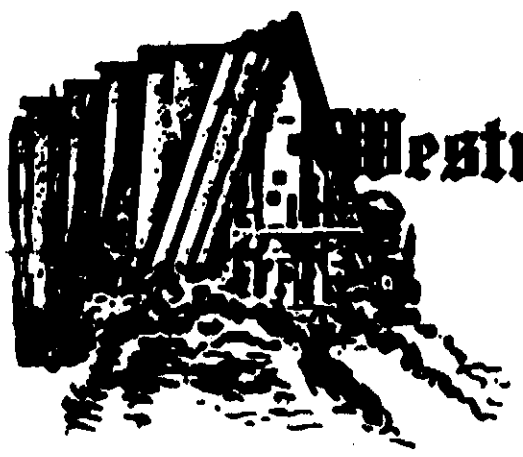

What?

To realize that, as a group of people, with all the social change in the world, they're probably going to end up pretty much with what they've got now.

I've heard of young people going into communes, and then dropping out when they find out — Jesus, life in the commune is just a microcosm of life outside the commune. They've got the same people with the same problems, and everything, and they really haven't solved anything.

Maybe when they realize that, well, maybe the police will stop being in the forefront of all the abuse. But maybe that will never happen, maybe they'll never realize it. Maybe they'll never grow up, and we will continue to be a youth-oriented society. You've got to feel sort of sorry for them.

Even though they call you storm-troopers?

Listen, plenty of the older people call the cops that, too. During the Century City disturbance, when President Johnson was there, you remember it turned into a little free-for-all. One woman on television called the cops stormtroopers, and kept saying how mean and hard and cruel these big ferocious guys in their riot gear were.

What she didn't know was that these cops were some of our young guys, and what she couldn't see behind those helmets was that these guys were just freckled-faced babies, glassy-eyed with their own fear.

Most of the cops we have out on the street now are the same thing, kids in their 20s, inexperienced, scared, not sure of how to handle other people or even themselves. They don't anymore know how to cope with what is going on than anybody else does. But they've got to act like they do, they've got to make a decision. They've got to make a stab at it, because they know if they don't, well, hell, we may as well give that street back to the alleycats and rats, because no human will ever be able to go back out in it.

That's all I wanted to do in the book, to give people a glimpse behind the hatbrims, to see what the cop really is like and what police work really is like. I thought it might help a little, might gain a little for us.

You talk about the fear — What was your own most terrifying experience?

The Watts riot. All the Watts riot. It was so terrifying because you didn't know where you were. You couldn't believe it, suddenly you were in a different world, you know . . . You just couldn't get over it. You kept saying to yourself, wait a minute, this can't be happening, it can't be. But it was. You lost your sense of direction.

Where were you when the riot broke?

I was working juvenile. I was sent down there in uniform, I had to make a quick change, because there weren't enough uniformed cops. They called everybody, but there never were enough.

People don't realize how few there were. I think we had something like 600 cops on the street, out of a force of 5,000, at the peak of the Watts riot. That's all the cops you could muster to put out on the street. It's just like a war, you know. It takes a lot of guys in the back to put somebody in front.

So hell, that wasn't enough to even protect each other, which was all we tried to do.

You didn't go with orders to try to break up the looting?

When I went out there that Friday afternoon, the word that was passed — unofficially — was to protect one another. To hell with those looters, and everything they were carrying, to hell with it. Just protect one another. Three guys in a car — that's all we could do, until the National Guard came in. To quell a real riot, you would need thousands and thousands of policemen . . . Or, you'd need an army.

It's a war?

Oh, I think it's very similar. Except in the service, in actual war, you know, you don't have a worry so much about where you're shooting or who you're shooting. The enemy is pretty well recognizable.

Down there — well, hell! What if somebody shot at you from a crowd of a couple of hundred people, which happened all the time in the Watts riot. You can't shoot back into that crowd, while they're trying to cower and duck. You can't shoot back. These are all people of your city.

Do you think the National Guard did a good job down there?

It sure as hell made the difference when they came in, and we were damn glad to see them. And that's when the riot really started tapering off. Oh, maybe they weren't really trained, like regular Army troops. But nevertheless, they had the armament and the vehicles and several thousand soldiers, and it made the difference. It sure did.

Does it take a certain type of man to be a policeman?

No. I always say no to that, for sure. People always say — well, the minority groups, for instance, they say you shouldn't stereotype Negroes, you shouldn't stereotype Mexicans. I say to them, fine. But you shouldn't stereotype cops, either.

No, anyone could go into police work, any reasonable man. Usually it's just simply that some guy needs a job. If he makes it and lasts, he usually finds it's the greatest job in the world.

Do you think many policemen are sadists?

Oh, no, I don't think so. Probably no more so than

How Old Was Methuselah's Wife.. Really ?

Illustration
By Bill Buerge

By Hal Chadwick

Methuselah lived to the age of 969. I don't expect to beat his record ... although there are times, at the end of a hard day's work, when I feel as though I'm coming pretty close. However, that's beside the point. The thing that intrigues me is that the greatest age mentioned in the Bible for any woman is that of Abraham's wife, Sarah, who reached 127, according to the account in Genesis 23:1.

Now, the first question that naturally enters my mind is whether those 127 years were based on Sarah's birth certificate or whether it was the age she claimed to be. I think you can see what I'm driving at. The ratio here is such that I'm inclined to be a bit skeptical ... especially since it's a well-known fact that statistics give women the edge agewise.

It's true that Abraham himself was a piker compared to Methuselah. He died practically in infancy at the tender age of 175. But it seems reasonable to suppose that if any other woman in early Bible history had admitted to a greater age than Sarah did, there would have been some mention of that age.

I can only conclude that even in those days women were sisters of our modern women.

Let's imagine Methuselah's wife. All we have to go by is a very indirect reference — the statement that Methuselah begat Lamech. Obviously the begatting must have involved a woman. At least, I doubt that standard procedure was any different in those days. So let's give old Thusie's wife a name. How about "Elsie"?

Let's see, now — Lamech was begatted when Methuselah was 187, according to the account. And just to give Elsie all the benefit of the doubt, we'll assume that she was a child bride of 13 when she did her part of the job. That would leave 174 years difference in their ages.

That's more of a difference, I'll admit, than one finds nowadays. A recent survey of mine turned up the information that the average modern wife is (if we are to believe her) 11½ years younger than her husband, on their 25th wedding anniversary. This generally works out mathematically to prove that she also was a child bride of 13, which is where I got Elsie's assumed age.

But, to get back, let's say old Thusie has been rocking along for 500 more years and he's now 687 years old. So what about Elsie? Well, she's at least 513 but apparently she isn't allowing as how she's over 126! That is, if she's still around. But don't forget that women statistically live longer than men. So it seems likely that Elsie is still going strong. She may be using a rinse on her hair, by this time, and doing a brisk business with the dealers in hormone creams, but I personally feel confident that she's still very much in the picture.

So here, if you can imagine it, we have a wife who is, at the least, 561 years younger than her husband and ... hmmm, well, as I figure it out, 387 years younger than her own son, Lamech.

Now, wait a minute! That is going just a little too far, isn't it? But, anyway, my point is that the modern woman never needs to apologize if she drops a few of those years that she carries so well. There are good solid antecedents for it. □

— well, maybe reporters . . . or anybody else. Wasn't it Dr. Rubin who wrote something about the number of sadistic surgeons?

A certain amount of people may be attracted to police work for a variety of unwholesome reasons, but these usually are weeded out pretty fast.

How about the frequent charges of police brutality?

This police brutality thing, you know, that's something that really bothers me. I have hopes that when enough people understand cops, they won't get uptight when cops react like people, like humans.

Like if somebody hits you — really now, does anyone expect you to put some fancy hold on them, that you don't really know anything about, anyway, in spite of all the fancy judo stuff in the movies and on TV? Hell, no. Real-life cops are rough and tumble, like anybody else.

So they want you to put some kind of hold on him, and handcuff him, and do no harm to him, and take him to jail — well. Does anybody really expect that some young fellow, 23 years old, who has just been punched in the face by another young fellow 23 years old, isn't going to give him one, and maybe two, back?

Is that really brutality? Technically it is, I guess. I suppose charges could be brought against the cop and he could get in trouble. But really — what do they expect?

Your description of your character Roy's feelings, in the book — when he was shot with the shotgun — read like you knew what you were writing about. Have you ever been shot?

No. But a cop I was partner with did get shot earlier just that way, with a sawed-off shotgun. I kept pumping him about it, how he felt, what he thought, over and over, and made notes. I'm sure he got sick of it, but I had to get it right.

He was hit just like Roy was in the book, same situation, same wound. He went over to this car with a man and a woman in it, to tell them to get the hell out of what was going to be the line of fire, because there was a holdup going on inside. The man swung up this sawed-off and shot him in the stomach.

He kept saying that the man had such a foolish look, and the stubby little sawed-off shotgun looked so ridiculous, he couldn't draw his gun. If the guy had come up with a pistol, he said, he thought he might have got his own gun out . . . But that sawed-off looked so outright ridiculous that he just stared at it while it was tearing his stomach open.

He was conscious, lying in the street on his back, and he knew his intestines were spilling out into the street. He said he kept thinking he had to get them out of the dirt and keep them clean or he would die. He managed to get one arm over there and scoop them up, and pile them back on top of him. Then he felt better about it, because they were out of the dirt. The last thing he could remember before losing consciousness was praying for rain, so it would wash them off, would wash the dirt off.

That's the way it was with Roy, in the book, and that's how it actually was with this guy in real life.

How hard was it to get it all down on paper?

You know, a thing happened to me in this book that does happen to writers — the characters take over. You have the chapter planned, and you're going along, and then suddenly the damn characters are doing what they want to do, instead of what you planned.

For instance, I had all sorts of hangups while I was writing. You know, suppose I write this and such, what is the chief of police going to think. So, OK, the chapter has to go like so and so. But hell, the characters wouldn't let it go that way. They'd do things on their own.

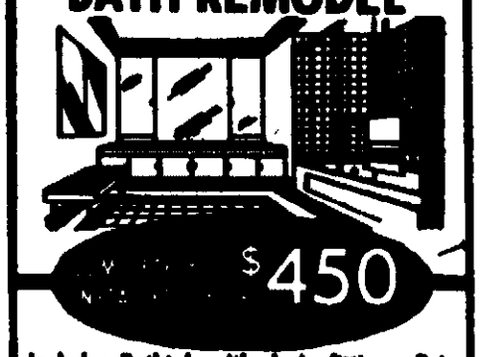

When I'd get finished with the chapter, I would show it to my wife and say 'Oh my God, look what happened here.' And she'd say 'Let it alone, let it alone, it's right this way.'

A specific instance?

Well, for instance, that scene in the Watts riot . . . When Duran, after he ran around mixed up and crazy, you know, everything all screwed up, then he decided to go in and take those looters in the furniture store.

I thought, good God, in all this chaos, somebody's got to do something — you know, some kind of positive police action. So I've got some looters in there; the reader can say OK, here are the bad guys and the good guys.

But while I'm writing, when it comes time for the looters to walk out of the damn place — suddenly a kid came out, this 8-year-old kid came out into the spotlight, and it was against my will. Then the old man came out, and then the old lady with the child.

Well, I didn't get the thing I wanted. There was no pat answer, there were no bad guys and good guys. Just people. But here again, my wife said, 'Don't touch it, leave it just like that, because that's the way it was.'

How do you feel when somebody blames the cops for killing a suspect instead of shooting just to wound him?

I feel that this is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of, and, here again, the movies and TV are to blame. All this stuff about shooting a gun out of somebody's hand, or deliberately shooting him in the arm, or leg. Hell, it's blind luck most of the time — good, or bad — when you hit him at all.

Let me tell you about this time when I went to University division, and this young cop, right out of the Academy, stumbled onto a bank robbery. He and his older partner drove up on a silent alarm.

The old-timer ran around to the back door, the young cop went to the front door. Three gunmen, all armed, came out and there he was, just standing, five feet away. The young cop fired six rounds at the bandits and they fired, I think it was 12 or 13 rounds, back. I think there were 18 shots fired altogether.

When it was all over, all the tires and the windows were shot out of the squad car, all the windows were shot out of the bank, and a lot of other windows were shot out of places across the street. But not a soul got hit by a bullet, and this was at a range of five feet.

You keep using the expression "cops." Isn't that term out of official favor, and if so, why?

Hell, I don't know. I don't mind being called a cop, I kind of like it. I am a cop. I think the late Chief Bill Parker sort of objected to it, it was along about that time that some of the newspapers, the TV series and the movies stopped using it and started using 'officer.' But I don't mind it, and most of the cops I know don't mind it either.

Do you think they'll stop calling cops 'pigs' eventually, in favor of something better?

I think what they call us is probably going to get worse before it gets better.

We left the restaurant together and parted on the sidewalk in front of it. Wambaugh started for his car in the parking lot and I started for mine at the curb — in what I suddenly remembered was a one-hour parking zone. I glared at what was on the windshield, then swung back to Wambaugh, saying wrathfully:

"Hey, while I was talking to you in there one of your damn Hollenbeck cops gave me a ticket!"

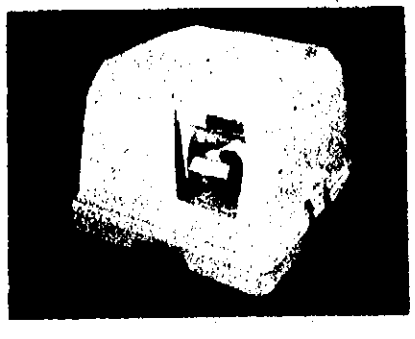

Wambaugh stifled a grin, put on a long face, and clucked his tongue.

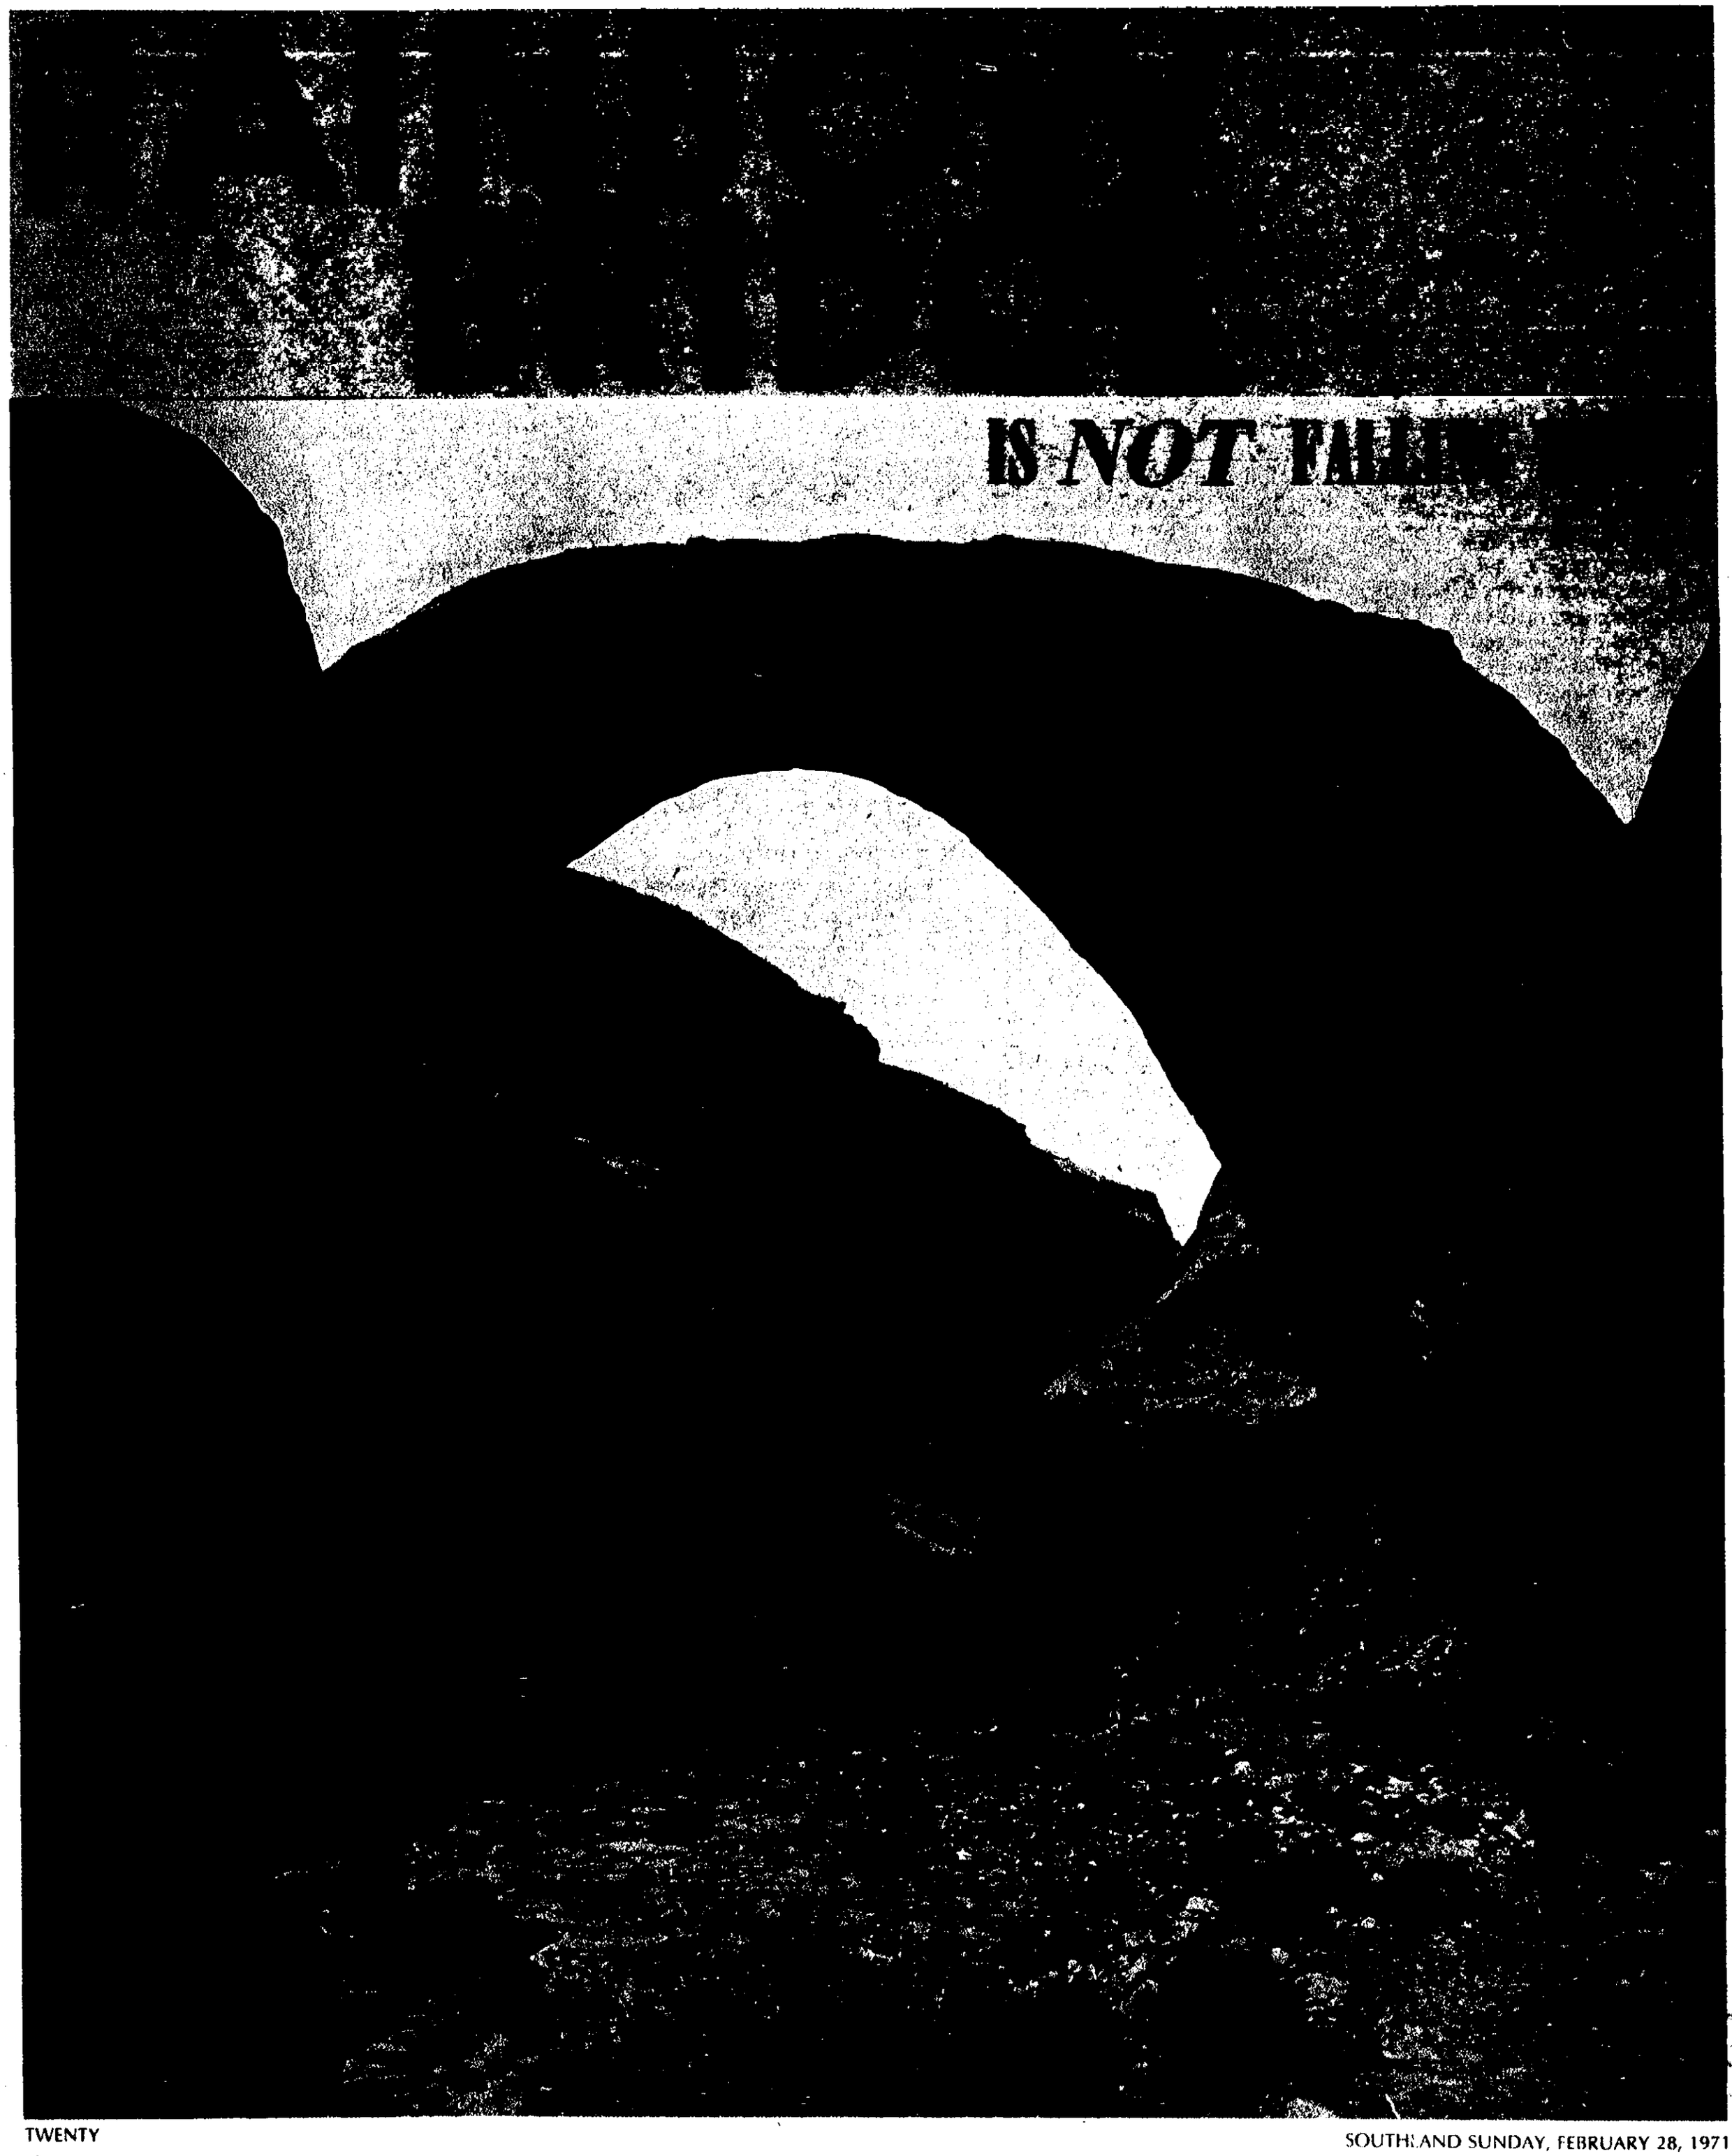

"Tough," he murmured sympathetically. "Too bad I haven't got enough drag with the L.A.P.D. to square it for you." □

IS NOT TH

First there was the earth, a sodden mudball Divinely created spinning along with Divine guidance on its ordained path through the Universe. Then the mud hardened and eventually crevices were formed on earth's obdurate crust and little trickles of water began to dig the crevices deeper and deeper. One of those crevices became known as Glen Canyon and the trickle of water that formed it became known as the Colorado, one of the great rivers of America.

Glen Canyon! Remote, lonely and hauntingly beautiful, was known to ancient people, to the Navajos, to a few early-day explorers, and then in modern times to a few hardy and adventuresome river enthusiasts forever seeking the lonely and out-of-way places. The mighty river flowed on and on through the silent canyon.

This was the way Raymond Carlson, editor of Arizona Highways magazine, prefaced the January, 1964, issue of his publication; he then devoted the entire magazine, page after page, to the story of Lake Powell.

Glen Canyon had just been harnessed with Glen Canyon Dam, now called Eisenhower Dam in memory of one of America's greatest men, who had strongly supported the dam when he was President.

The enormous body of water behind the dam was Lake Powell, named in honor of Maj. John Wesley Powell, who lost an arm while wearing the blue in the Civil War and who later (in 1869) hand-picked nine companions and launched four boats at Green River, Wyo., and three months later emerged from the Colorado at Virgin River.

Three of his men had deserted and had been slain by Shivwits Indians. Later Powell made another trip down the treacherous river and renamed the gorge from Hite, Utah, to Lees Ferry, Ariz., Glen Canyon.

Today, Powell is the second largest man-made lake in the western hemisphere, 186 miles long with a shoreline of 1,900 miles and a potential holding capacity of 27 million acre-feet of water. For sheer spectacle, there is nothing else like it on earth.

When I first learned of Powell and its heralded beauty, I thought: "It's just another Lake Mead, Havasu or Mohave; all Colorado River lakes have to look the same." So I postponed trip after trip, year after year. But, late in 1970 when the burning heat of the desert had turned to frosty mornings and chilly nights, Marjie and I took off in a Contempo Camper, powered with a Dodge 318-cubic-inch engine, for Page, Ariz.

A Contempo Camper is not just another recreational vehicle. It is built so comfortably that one actually can call it a second car, with a high molded one-piece fiber-glass top and capable of more speed than the law allows. In 1,400 miles of travel at legal speed limits, we had better gasoline mileage than the mighty automobiles that roar along the highways.

We chose the long way to Page for two reasons: (1) Las Vegas was convention-filled and (2) we wanted to see the country in Arizona. So we cruised through Victorville, Barstow and Kingman for the first night's stop, then on to Ashfork, Williams and Flagstaff, purposely skipping the Grand Canyon turnoff, and then into Page, the town that a dam built.

Before reaching Page on that second evening, we were treated to one of Arizona's beautiful sunsets, which I firmly believe can't be excelled anywhere.

We did not expect to see all of Lake Powell in four days; we were lucky to see only a portion of it, from Wahweap Marina to Rainbow Bridge, the famous National Monument that conservationists feared would be flooded and fall down. Rainbow Bridge is not falling down. Even if Lake Powell reaches its full potential — and it probably never will — Rainbow Bridge still will be well above the lake's water level.

That trip 50 miles uplake in a high-powered cruiser convinced us we were so wrong in our thinking about Powell, as compared with Mead, Havasu and Mohave Lakes. Never had we seen such breath-taking sights, so many shades of reds and pinks and purples, so many strange and high formations along a shoreline that defied description.

RAINBOW BRIDGE

Rainbow Marina, in Forbidding Canyon (very well named), was our first stop for a rest and a welcome cup of coffee, but just minutes later we were docking at a landing where we took off on foot for a mile walk to one of the seven natural wonders of the world, the largest stone arch on earth.

We first saw it in a low overcast, then in a slight mist, with snow falling on the mountain back of it. Rainbow Bridge had never been heard of until a band of horsemen found it in 1909. It was set aside as a national monument in the following year. It is 309 feet high, 278 feet wide and the vertex is 42 feet thick.

For the many years that followed its discovery, few persons ever saw it. The arch was carved by the rushing waters of Rainbow Creek. Even though its composition is sandstone, it, like several smaller arches in the region, has withstood the thousands of years of water and wind. The hue and cry that came from a handful of people that Rainbow Bridge was doomed by Lake Powell never came to pass.

Instead, thousands upon thousands of people have taken the one-day trip to the monument, eating box lunches under the great arch and enjoying the two ravens that call the territory their own. They took a liking to Marjie, who fed them pieces of sandwiches, followed her back from Rainbow Bridge to the dock and the boat and even down lake, crying like only ravens and crows can in their gutteral caw-caw-caw exclamations of anger or disappointment, whichever you prefer.

Eisenhower Dam is like none other in the world. When it was authorized by President Ike, it was discovered that men and materials would have to be moved almost 200 miles to reach the site unless the Colorado were bridged at that point. Accordingly, a single-span steel arch bridge was constructed directly in front of the damsite.

For that reason, there is no traffic on top of the dam, which is 580 feet high (710 feet above bedrock), 1,560 feet long at the crest, 340 feet thick at its base and 25 feet at the top.

Even though Arizona publicizes Lake Powell far more than any other state, the lake itself lies mostly in Utah. Page and Wahweap Lodge and Marina are in Arizona. So are Wahweap Bay, the Narrows, Antelope and Navajo Canyons, but once out of the Narrows, everything else — hundreds of miles of shoreline, with arms in all directions — is in Utah.

Once you have made the Rainbow Bridge trip and realize that you haven't been one third of the way up Lake Powell, you realize what an enormous body of water this is and how many weeks you could spend exploring its various arms. There are hundreds of creeks that feed into the Colorado and its two main tributaries below Hite, Utah. Those are the San Juan and Escalante Rivers, at one time roaring torrents that brave men tried successfully and unsuccessfully to ascend.

Yet, Powell has more to offer than just what has been described. Without a doubt, it's a boater's paradise. One may camp anywhere except at established marinas and public thoroughfares and there are few of those.

Naturally, Wahweap is the most popular. It is 650 miles from Long Beach the way we went, slightly under 600 the way we returned, via Kanab and St. George, Utah, and Las Vegas.

Far upland are Halls Crossing Marina, reached via graveled road from Blanding, Utah, and Bullfrog Marina, on Bullfrog Bay, reached via paved road from Hanksville, Utah. Even farther north into Utah lies Hite Marina, reached via paved road on Utah's Highway 95.

More than 134 miles of Powell shoreline parallels the Navajo Reservation, largest Indian territory in the nation, with 110,000 residents.

Wahweap is operated by a corporation that is virtually 100 per cent family-controlled and well it should be, for that family is headed by the famous Art Greene Sr. as president. His son, Bill Greene, is general manager, and his noted river pal and son-in-law, Earl Johnson, is recreational and resident manager.

Mel Schoppman and Verne Baker are other officers in Canyon Tours, Inc., which is the parent company of Wahweap and Rainbow Bridge Marinas. Canyon Tours offers many trips; the one-day trip to Rainbow Bridge is just one.

While at Wahweap Lodge we drove back across the bridge to Page, seven miles away, and took a long plane ride with Gordon Jensen, a newlywed flier and one of Royce Knight's top pilots. However, even a two-hour plane trip doesn't begin to show you all of Lake Powell.

Wahweap Lodge has 80 air-conditioned units, with 40 more to be finished this winter, 130 slips at the marina, with 44 more under construction. A circular dining room seating 500 is being added this winter, and the lodge has become an all-year-round resort for the first time, with Earl and his wife, Irene, managing a rather tremendous establishment in the West's newest and largest playground.

You can rent boats, you can launch your own, and the U.S. Coast Guard and the Departments of Fish and Game of Arizona and Utah have established buoys along the main river channel so that neophyte boaters can't get lost.

Our fishing guide for one brief hour was Red Barrett, who calls himself a real "old river rat," and we cruised slowly out of the Wahweap anchorage and in minutes were fishing in Utah. Marjie got the only fish, a three-pound rainbow.

Red told us the lake is full of browns, walleyed pike, three species of catfish, crappie and perch, but, like all Colorado Riber lakes, one can draw a blank if he doesn't know where to fish.

In addition to the lodge, there is a trailer village and campground, with hookups for all kinds of recreational vehicles, laundry service, restrooms and showers at nominal fees.

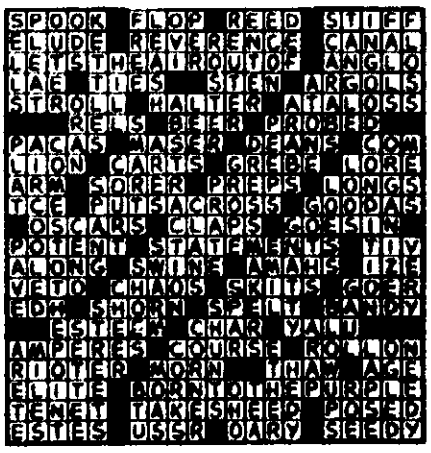

Mel Schoppman, one of the West's old-time cowboys who once roamed the Glen Canyon country and other parts of Arizona and who married one of Art Greene's daughters, took us on a fascinating trip into the Paria (also spelled Pahreh) Creek area.

Once again, the coloring of the mountains astounded us. We found strange formations at 4,300 feet, remnants of an old village that had been ransacked by the Indians many years ago and the remains of an oyster bed with some perfect shells.

Finding such shells at 4,300 feet in the Utah high country desert gives more cause for wonderment as to why and how we are on this earth.

Back to fishing again: Mrs. Schoppman, Mel's wife, reported by telephone in mid-January that a record 11-pound, 4-ounce rainbow had been caught by a Wahweap guest while fishing in Wahweap Bay near the gravel pit. If such news gives you spring fishing fever this early in the year, remember it's only 600 miles to Wahweap. □

GOURMET GUIDE

by Tedd Thomey

It's 4 a.m. The Long Beach streets are dark and misty. Little traffic can be seen.

But already there's action at Ken's Restaurant, 3918 Long Beach Blvd. A car arrives and a man steps onto the parking lot. His name is Roy Richardson and he has just driven in from Garden Grove where he lives.

Soon executive chef Roy and his assistants are busy in Ken's immaculate kitchen, starting the day's batch of hot, fresh, aromatic bread for which the restaurant is so renowned. A loaf is included with dinner. It's so delectable that many of the guests save a portion. They take it home, aware that Ken's bread is particularly appropriate for French toast at breakfast.

Ken's, a handsomely furnished dining room and lounge, is owned by Bill Snodgrass. He originated that bread idea many years ago when he was the manager of the restaurant, then owned by Ken McConnell. Ken's was the first Long Beach dinner house to offer hot individual loaves of bread with dinner.

When Roy is on vacation, Bill catches the early shift, arriving long before dawn to supervise the staff's bread preparations. Isn't that a terrible hour to start work? "No," replies Bill. "It's rather pleasant and peaceful, without the pressures that occur later in the day."

On Sundays, Ken's opens at 9 a.m. to serve special breakfasts until 1 p.m. Sunday dinner commences at 11 a.m., emphasizing southern fried chicken with country gravy, $2.45; splendid roast sirloin of beef with mushroom sauce, $3.25; succulent roast prime rib of beef au jus, $4.55, and roast duckling with orange sauce bigarade, $3.35. All are with relish bouquet in a silver shell, soup or garden salad, potato, beverage, dessert and, of course, that loaf of hot bread.

Ken's serves luncheon weekdays starting at 11 a.m., featuring shrimp louie with a loaf of hot bread and other salads, hot sandwiches, a variety of imaginative hamburgers and plate specials. Also offered throughout the day are breakfast items including steak with eggs and omelettes cooked with cheese, mushrooms or Spanish-style ingredients.

Among the nightly dinner choices are spencer steak, cut from the finest heart of prime rib, $4.25; flaky, rich broiled halibut, $3.15; old-fashioned chicken-fried steak with country gravy, $2.85, and luscious pepper steak with wine sauce, $3.60. All are on the complete dinner.

What's his honor, the mayor of Belmont Shore, been up to lately? Plenty, as usual.

Busy Don May (whose title is unofficial) has a new dinner at his tropical Leilani restaurant, now in its 34th fascinating year at 5236 E. Second St. in the Belmont Shore section of Long Beach. The Kauai dinner, $2.95 per person, is designed to acquaint guests with the fact that a meal in a fine Cantonese restaurant can be generous without being overly costly.

Named for one of the Hawaiian islands, the Kauai (pronounced "kowee") includes the following if two persons order: colorful shrimp Cantonese, chicken chop suey with tender Chinese green snow pea pods, fried rice, almond cookies, fortune cookies and a pot of Chinese tea. If three persons order, egg foo yong is added. If four persons order, luscious sweet and sour boneless spareribs are added as well as the egg foo yong.

Long involved in civic events promoting Long Beach as well as activities on Second Street, Don was named "Belmont Shore's Outstanding Businessman of 1970" by the Shore's business association. Owner of the Leilani since 1958, Don has been a familiar figure on the Shore's streets for many decades. He's often garbed in a colorful island sport shirt and natty slacks.

The Leilani serves dinner daily starting at 4 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday starting at 2 o'clock. The restaurant is now closed Tuesdays. But the facilities are available on Tuesdays for groups wishing to hold banquets, parties and meetings.

The restaurant's Cantonese dinners include the Oahu, $4.25; the Maui, $4.95, and the Celestial, $5.50. Each is a lavish feast prepared by Chinese chef Billy Dea and his aides. Everything is prepared to order, using costly fresh ingredients ranging from bamboo shoots to water chestnuts, the tenderest meats and vegetables.

The Leilani also offers generous American dinners including soup du jour, salads with noodle croutons, baked potato or fried or steamed rice and coffee. Among the entrees, $3.95 to $6.50, are teriyaki or Indiana-style fried chicken, Hawaiian barbecued ribs (made with a sensational recipe), sirloin tips with bordelaise sauce, halibut, shrimp, scallops and such interesting steak choices as the wiki wiki, wahine, teriyaki, Kansas City sirloin and New York cut. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Two Michigan radiologists say they keep tiny babies warm in air-conditioned X-ray rooms by placing them on electric hot trays — the kind used to keep hors d'oeuvres heated.

The doctors explain that some radiograph procedures can take up to 30 minutes, during which time a premature or ill baby's temperature can drop two to five drgrees in 70-degree air-conditioning.

According to Drs. Donald E. Newman and Andrew K. Poznanski of Ann Arbor, "such cooling is detrimental to a sick newborn and could even be fatal."

In a report in the journal Radiology, they describe the radiant heating tray. The device, when used on nine premature infants, gave these results: Five showed no drop in temperature, four showed a drop of only one degree in skin temperature.

You can have a "coronary" (heart attack) or suffer from angina pectoris (heart pain) without having atherosclerosis (fatty thickening of the coronary arteries).

Dr. Richard Gorlin, associate professor of medicine at Harvard, says that perhaps as many 20 per cent of patients with this type of heart disease may show no evidence of artery narrowing.

He says that he himself has seen 200 such patients among a group of 1,500 with presumed coronary artery disease.

Of these 200 he comments: "They do not have atherosclerosis in any shape or form."

Fortunately for these patients, their prognosis is quite good even though their symptoms may be resistant to treatment.

The mechanisms are not clear for "coronaries without atherosclerosis."

There is no longer an age limit for orthodontic treatment, a dental specialist says.

Dr. Marvin C. Goldstein, Atlanta, Ga., says that no adult is too old to have his teeth straightened, provided that there is enough bone to hold the tooth, and the health of the patient warrants the treatment.

He says that some persons have resorted to psychiatric treatment to learn why they are unhappy, only to find that the cause of unhappiness is malaligned teeth or protruding teeth.

A frantic search is in progress for some scientific evidence that will justify current marijuana laws, Prof. John Kaplan of Stanford law school declares.

He charges that government agencies are issuing "slanted and inaccurate reports in the hopes that they will be picked up by the press and widely circulated before less biased materials can become available from the National Institute for Mental Health."

He adds: "Again and again we have seen the Defense Department or the Bureau of Narcotics come out with wild exaggerations of the dangers of marijuana only to find out one or two days later that the NIMH — which is headed by scientists — feels that the statements are unsupported."

Prof. Kaplan himself advocates that marijuana be sold in stores. He is author of a recent book, "Marijuana — the New Prohibition."

Alcoholism may run in families, new research suggests.

In general, male relatives of alcoholics suffer an increased risk for alcoholism. Women relatives show a higher risk for mental disturbances.

Washington University researchers report the finding in Archives of General Psychiatry.

Medical researchers have new evidence pointing to the dangers of sniffing of glue, solvent or aerosol propellant.

Investigators at the University of Illinois Research and Education Hospital, Chicago, tell of experiments with laboratory mice and rats. The animals, within seconds of inhaling fumes, developed heart abnormalities — malfunction of the distribution of electrical impulses in the heart muscle. The mice died.

The report of the research was made to a meeting of the Central Society for Clinical Research and appears in Modern Medicine.

A simple new test shows great promise in detecting symptomless cancer of the colon.

Dr. David H. Greegor, assistant clinical professor at Ohio State University, says the test is known as Hemoccult. It shows up minute quantities of blood in the stool (bowel movement).

Cancer of the colon is one of the big killers among malignant disorders since it is so often detected too late.

A hospital engineer has found a way to lessen the loneliness for children placed in an isolation ward.

At St. George's Hospital in the London area, the engineer, Gino Bravazzi, observed that isolation from wardmates appeared to distress the youngsters. His solution: He linked the glass cubicles with a telephone system.

Now the lines are constantly busy as the children talk to one another. □

There are 20 cigarette holders to every pack of Parliament.

The tip of a Parliament is a cigarette holder.

We call it a holder because it works like one.

There's a firm outer shell that surrounds the filter. And then the filter is recessed—tucked back inside. Away from your lips.

So you get a clean taste. A really good taste.

The Parliament holder.

It really works.

It works like a cigarette holder works.

Q. I have been told that the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, which owns Hughes Aircraft, spends all its funds on keeping Howard Hughes alive. Would you be kind enough to check this out?—Robert M. Knox, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. According to the Internal Revenue Service, the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, a charitable institution located in Miami, Fla., is worth approximately $19 million, holds all the stock of the Hughes Aircraft Co. These holdings have a net book value of $133 million.

Howard Hughes is the sole trustee of the institute, although he has never set foot in it or been seen by anyone directly connected with it.

The institute spends approximately $1 million a year, supporting 35 scientists at eight host institutions: Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Duke, Vanderbilt, Washington University in St. Louis, Washington University in Seattle, and the University of Miami with which it shares some laboratories.

According to Kenneth Wright, 43, administrator of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute and a member since its founding in 1955, "Mr. Hughes is interested in supporting outstanding young scientists who have chosen to follow academic medicine and to do medical research, which in some cases, includes teaching, and also patient consultation. We have no patients here, no hospital beds, nothing like that, and Mr. Hughes has never been treated here for anything. Nor has he in any shape, form or manner used the institute for any personal medical treatment whatever.

"The way the institute works is that various consultants, department heads, eminent men in the medical field recommend to our panel of experts a potential candidate or several candidates.

"Our five-man medical advisory board which passes on the recommendations consists of Dr. George Thorn of Harvard, Dr. James Wyngaarden of Duke, Dr. Charles Park of Vanderbilt, Dr. Victor McKusick of Johns Hopkins, and Dr. Hans Neurath of the University of Washington.

"When these men agree on a candidate we place him on our payroll for three years at a salary specified by the host institution which originally recommended him. The salary generally ranges from $15,000 to $30,000. For example, suppose an associate professor from Yale goes on our payroll. It is Yale which recommends his salary and raises, and it is at Yale that he works, free and unfettered, unpressured except by his own drive.

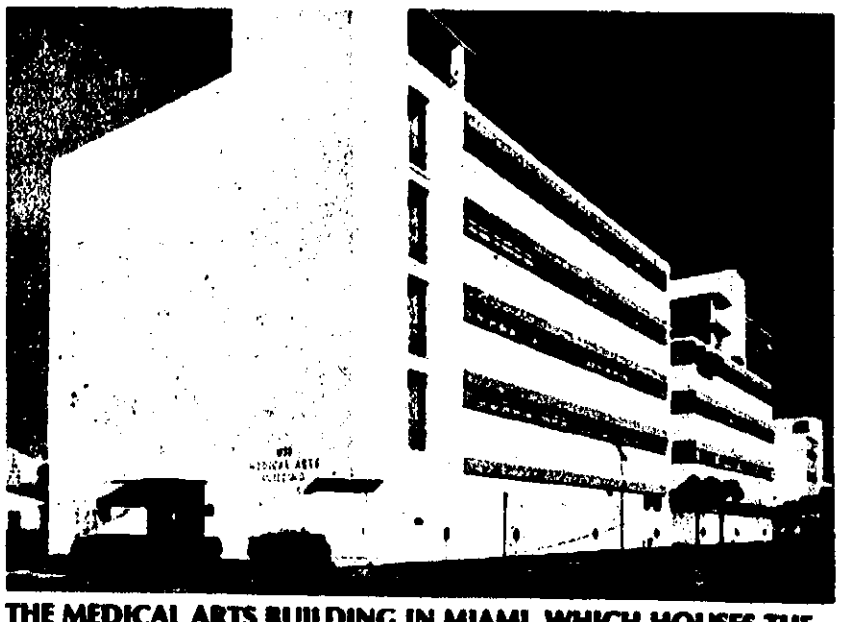

"The purpose of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute is to provide these researchers with the best possible environment for their work."

It is not to prolong the life of Howard Hughes, 65, who several years ago was treated at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston for circulatory troubles and is now only Hughes knows where.

PERSONALITY PARADE CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

Q. It is difficult for me to believe that the Federal Government intends to spend $747,000 of the taxpayers' money for a permanent Bobby Kennedy gravesite. Is this correct?—Mrs. Evelyn Park, Orlando, Fla.

A. It is not correct. The Federal Government will pay up to $181,000 of the cost. The Kennedy family and friends will provide the additional funds.

Q. Frank Sinatra's real age, please, and is he washed up in films?—Laurie Keith, Laurel, Miss.

A. Sinatra was born on Dec. 12, 1915. Nowadays he is worth comparatively little at the box office. His last film, Dirty Dingus Magee, was a vulgar bomb.

Q. Whatever happened to that paternity case involving Cary Grant and the baby born to Cynthia Bouron?—June Carter, Estherville, Iowa.

A. Miss Bouron lost her paternity suit against Grant.

Q. Maria Callas plans to sue her husband for divorce now that divorce is legal in Italy. Didn't she sue him for divorce in 1965?—Thomas Reiter, Medford, Oreg.

A. In 1965 Callas sought a court order blaming her husband, industrialist Giovanni Meneghini, for the breakup of their marriage. The court in Milan ruled, however, that they were both to blame, Meneghini for strongly criticizing his wife in press interviews, and Callas for engaging in a relationship with Aristotle Onassis which "was above and beyond the needs of social life and simple friendship."

THE GOOD OLD DAYS: CALLAS, MENEGHINI (CENTER), AND ONASSIS.

Q. Which artist was the first creator of a truly integrated comic strip? Wasn't it a cartoonist who signs himself "Morrie"?—Louis Ash, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Yes. "Morrie" is the pen name of Morris Turner, a black of Berkeley, Calif., and creator of the comic strip, "Wee Pals," which appears in approximately 70 newspapers. For 11 years Turner was a clerk in the Oakland, Calif., Police Department, was finally inspired to draw a cartoon strip by Charles M. Schulz, creator of "Peanuts."

ROCKEFELLER AND NIXON: WHO IN '72?

Q. If Richard Nixon does not seek the Presidency in 1972, no matter what the reason, who will be the Republican standard-bearer?—Max Miller, Cleveland, Ohio.

A. A good possibility is New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. He has the experience, money, background, and a superb staff capable of assuaging his former position as a Vietnamese war hawk.

Q. Who has succeeded Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia as chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee?—J.K. Levine, Tucson, Ariz.

A. Russell's successor is Allen J. Ellender (left, D., La.), at 80, the oldest member of the U.S. Senate and a member since 1937. As such Ellender has the greatest seniority, is therefore president pro tem of that body, thus becomes third in line to succeed the President in the event the President dies in office. In the succession he ranks behind Vice President Agnew and Speaker of the House Carl Albert.

Q. Please identify, if you can, this quotation: "He who seeks God has already found him."—Denise Fry, Crazy Woman, Wyo.

A. British novelist Graham Greene.

Q. Friends tell me that Johnny Carson's entire organization has walked out on him and moved over to the Dick Cavett show. Why is this?—Helena Grant, New York, N.Y.

A. To date six key staffers from Johnny Carson's Tonight program have moved over to the Cavett TV show. They prefer working for Cavett.

JOHNNY CARSON

DICK CAVETT

Q. Did the late playwright Eugene O'Neill have a daughter who is a writer? Was she unaware that Eugene O'Neill was her father until she was grown? Who was her mother?—Mrs. Josephine Wright, Asheville, Ala.

A. Eugene O'Neill had only one daughter, Oona, happily married to Charlie Chaplin since 1943 and the mother of seven children. Her mother was O'Neill's second wife, Agnes Boulton.

Both of O'Neill's sons showed an interest in and talent for writing. The elder, Eugene Jr., committed suicide at the age of 40 after a turbulent career as a TV announcer and college professor. The younger son, Shane, withdrew from all creative activity after a bout with drug addiction.

O'Neill cut off all his children: Oona over her marriage to Chaplin; Eugene Jr. because he could not get on with his stepmother, actress Carlotta Monterey, the third Mrs. O'Neill who died last year, and Shane because of his drug addiction. Unfortunately, all three of O'Neill's children knew their father all too well.

O'NEILL DISAPPROVED: OONA AND CHAPLIN.

Q. The rumor in these parts is that Nixon has decided to dump Spiro Agnew as his running mate next time around. Anything to it?—Holly Downing, Stanford, Calif.

A. Nixon is a pragmatist. If he decides to run and thinks Agnew can help in the vote-getting, he will team with him. If he considers him a liability, he will dump him. Agnew realizes he is expendable, and that most probably he will be dumped unless his abrasive image can be restructured so that he appears to be a more gentle, loving, less partisan statesman-like figure.

Author hits the road: Liz Carpenter and the bookmobile in which she clocked 10,000 miles selling copies of her book about life in the White House.

How to Sell a Book

by Liz Carpenter

Former press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson and author of "Ruffles and Flourishes"

WASHINGTON, D.C.

I wanted to write the first funny book about the White House. While a lot of White House books have turned out pretty funny, mine was intentional.

After five years inside those 18 acres, I couldn't just walk out one inauguration day with a "Good luck, Mr. Nixon. This is a nice place to visit and I'm sorry you want to live here!"

The experience deserves more. Besides, I was otherwise unemployed. So I set out to write about the perils of being press secretary to one First Lady, two Presidential daughters, and the Johnsons' six publicity-minded beagles.

Six months and 120,000 words later I finished it—only to learn that writing a book is just the beginning. The next step is selling it to the book-buying public.

Each year in the United States, 30,000 new book titles are published. For me, that meant that my book—to borrow a phrase from the polititcal world—was running against 29,999 other candidates.

So, with the help of my publisher, Doubleday, a bookmobile on loan from Henry Ford II, and—at various times—bands, a double-decker bus, an Indian medicine show, I launched my literary Grand Tour. In a year of travel from coast to coast and sunup to midnight appearances on TV shows, lecture platforms, and at book and author luncheons, I worked the book beat like a ward heeler working his precincts.

I traveled more than Vice President Agnew and Hubert Humphrey and had more to say than Martha Mitchell. One hundred thousand miles later, I had sold more than 90,000 books and achieved every author's goal—the best seller list!

The day I got on the list was one of the best days of my life. Three weeks after my publication day, I had followed the book circuit to Phoenix with 11 stops and more than 50 TV shows behind me. The call was waiting: "Congratulations, you're on The New York Times list next Sunday."

Ten weeks later I went off the list. The book was still moving, and Doubleday's Author Lecture Service kept moving me. If Johnny Carson and Merv Griffin could only see me, I thought, a real ham instead of the quivering, frightened victim they first met weeks before on my TV debut.

'A simple girl'

I wonder if the audience out there in television land realizes what it is like to be a simple girl from Salado, Tex., left to the mercies of the TV cameras. On my initial appearances, my mouth went dry. Hands grew clammy. Knees knocked as I entered a studio. Always, I was met by a smiling, happy-hearted girl who took one look and led me hastily (a little TOO hastily, I thought) to the makeup room.

When the NBC makeup man reached me, he took one look and said reassuringly, "I have lots of experience. I used to work on Richard Nixon."

He plunged into his makeup box—scalpel, sutures, eyelashes. Twenty minutes later I emerged a not-so-simple girl from Salado.

"When do I get to meet Johnny?" I asked the happy-hearted girl.

I had visualized a long talk about the show before we faced those cameras and 50 million viewers.

"I'll point him out to you," she said, motioning across the back of the studio to Johnny Carson. The makeup man was applying pancake to Johnny's hands. Johnny smiled my way. Thus began, and ended, our pre-broadcast conversation.

The happy-hearted girl led me away and asked, "What would you like to talk about?"

"Well, I've just written my first book," I replied.

"Like everybody else?" she asked.

"I hope not," I told her, "I'm counting on it being different."

"Look," she said, "think of your best anecdotes. Maybe something about Johnson's temper. Don't be nervous. Just relax and have fun."

Relax and have fun! There is no way to have fun in your allotted moments between a commercial for freeze-dried coffee and whipped margarine. All I could do was get in my own personal commercial and it was hand-to-hand combat for the microphone every word of the way.

But as I began to meet the book-buyers and each one told me they had seen me on TV, a female P.T. Barnum was born for the rest of the trip. This, obviously, was the way to sell books. In all my travels, not one book-buyer every told me they had read a book review, although there were lots of reviews, both good and bad.

Reviews! If you think Lyndon Johnson is thin-skinned and hypersensitive, you should have seen our formerly peaceful home when the first critical review of my book appeared. What Harry Truman said to the music critic was tame compared to my husband's words on reading The Washington Post's review.

Handcuffed husband

The only reason the Washington crime rate didn't go up that night is because I handcuffed my husband to the house so he couldn't carry out his threat to find the reviewer and the editor.

Bad reviews gnaw at an author. I knew I had to DO something to put it out of my mind. I found the solution at a florist shop when I came upon the largest most horrendous cactus plant. I bought it for $25 and sent it by messenger to the desk of Ben Bradlee, editor of the Post, with this note: "Thinking of you!"

Friends came up with ingenious ideas for autograph parties. One was held in the Wax Museum in Washington where the principal historic wax figures all held copies of my book: Columbus rocking in his boat with a copy of my book; John Adams working on the Declaration of Independence with my book as a reference; Betsy Ross with her needlework and my book on her lap.

TV ego boost

By now, David Frost had come into my life and assured me ten minutes before his show that I was the greatest thing ever to hit television. Me—gray-haired mother of two! He makes a practice of saying just this to all his guests and it does wonders for your ego.

Mike Douglas invited me to be on a panel seated next to Mama Cass which made me look thinner than anyone else on the show. That did wonders, too.

By the time I reached Chicago, producers could hardly get me off the air. I appeared on Irv Kupcinet's show with its vital Midwest audience. But once you're past Chicago, your Eastern publishers tend to think of you as "somewhere out there with the cowboys and Indians." Everything west of Lake Michigan is lumped into "the rest of the United States." The publisher called to tell me I was in great demand by a college "somewhere out there in the Midwest." It turned out to be in Georgia.

There are peaks and depths on the speaking circuit. In St. Paul, I spoke to 2000 women for an hour, telling them about life in the White House with the Johnsons.

The author with Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee and the "horrendous" cactus plant she gave him in return for paper's negative review of book.

When I finished, one irate woman demanded, "Why didn't you talk about Mrs. Kennedy?"

"I never worked for Mrs. Kennedy," I replied.

"Aren't YOU Mary Gallagher?" she fumed, thinking I was author of My Life With Jacqueline Kennedy.

The speaking circuit was a whole new way of life with great variety. In Waco, Tex., I spoke from a Methodist pulpit. In Erie, Pa., I spoke at a Catholic college after spending the night in a convent. In Palm Beach, I spoke at Marjorie Merriweather Post's posh home, Mar-a-Lago, to 200 patrons of the arts.

Doubleday rewarded me one weekend by letting me fly home to Washington to attend some of the press parties at the Gridiron dinner. Back in Washington, I found a nice bag of mail. A letter from Kenneth Galbraith was the shortest. It simply said: "Dear Liz, Good book! Ken." And there was a call from LBJ.

LBJ: 'I laughed a lot'

"You kept me up all night reading your book," he said. "I laughed a lot and I think you captured the essence of what I was trying to do."

Mrs. Johnson told me, "I'll be first in line at your first stop in Texas."

By now, Doubleday let me slow down the tour enough to use my Lizmobile, the red, white and blue station wagon which Henry Ford II lent me. The back end carried copies of my book and had room for a small stage which hooked on the back of the wagon. A comedy team, "Cac and Jack," gave a medicine show in which a sick old Indian tried all the remedies to cure his ailments but could only be cured after he read just two lines from Ruffles and Flourishes. The crowd loved it, particularly in the small towns of Salado and Johnson City, where we sold 1000 books in one day. LBJ had rounded up everyone in the county to give me a real welcome.

Indeed, friends from the Great Society had rallied in many towns: Mrs. Hubert Humphrey came and sent her children to my autograph party in Minnesota; Mrs. Henry Fowler, and other cabinet wives rode the double-decker bus on my whistle-stop book-signing down Fifth Avenue to Wall Street; Mayor Richard Daley welcomed me to Chicago; and many former advance men and speech writers came, brought friends, and bought books.

The Lizmobile favored

The Lizmobile was by all odds my favorite form of travel. Flying is my least. To authors with similar fears, I advise against bringing out a book in the bad weather months. Each day, as I left the airport the weatherman had booked snow flurries for the exact route I was flying.

During my tour, I tried to discover who the book readers are. Over and over, I was told, "The average book buyer is a woman between 30 and 60." One study shows the typical "educated woman" averages two books each month. My own unscientific poll indicates that women readers are hungry for something to make them laugh. She gets enough troubles in her newspapers and enough causes in her magazines.

Second time around

"You seem to have fun out of everything you do," was the repeated greeting I got.

Looking back, I did—even out of those hard-sell days on the road. My autograph arm ached. I left lots of beautiful flowers and untouched bowls of fruit in hotel rooms I only saw from midnight until 6 a.m. when it was another TV show or airport. Finally, when I got home, I turned and kicked the last airplane door shut and hid my suitcases in the attic. I felt about my travel clothes the way a woman feels about maternity clothes after the baby is born. I didn't want to ever see them again.

But now the paperback is coming out. Pocket Books tells me they are bringing me out on April Fool's Day—no particular reason, they say.

Let's see, if I can just find another accordion player, if Mr. Ford hasn't sold my Lizmobile, then, Keokuk, here I come! It's just possible there's someone out there who hasn't got a copy of Ruffles and Flourishes.

Here she is flanked by ex-boss Lady Bird and LBJ during stop for a sales pitch in Johnson City, Tex. Naturally, it was a big day; her book sold like hotcakes.

Who's Responsible for PUBLIC Morals?

The personal morality of each of us, of course, is our own private affair. And we have no right to set moral standards for the man next door.

But there is a broader area of morality which is everybody's business. For in a society where civil order depends on moral order, there has to be a public conscience. Without it, the law could not be enforced, justice could not be administered, and liberty could not be preserved.

The public conscience is reflected in the laws we enact, and the moral standards we observe. It is the watchdog over the God-given rights of the individual to freedom of conscience, and to the security of his person and property. The public conscience is, moreover, a reflection of the individual conscience of all people who are concerned in preserving a high standard of moral order.

This is not an obligation to be delegated to the police and the courts. Nor to the church, the schools or civic societies. For the public conscience is the concern of everyone, and it can function effectively only with the dedicated commitment of all right-thinking people.

In these troubled and changing times, public morality has become a problem of increasing concern to society as a whole. Crimes against person and property have grown to grave proportions. Moral depravity thrives on public indifference. The public peace is disturbed with seeming impunity; obscenity flourishes in the name of freedom of speech; the disease called alcoholism finds an ever-growing number of victims.

If you agree that public morality is everybody's business . . . if you want to restore and rebuild the moral values that are essential to the welfare of our society—write today for a copy of our new pocket-size pamphlet entitled "Public Morality—Our Common Concern." We'll send it free and without obligation. Nobody will call on you. Just ask for Pamphlet No. PR-7.

A Noodle Dessert

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

A "Kugel" is a pudding made with broad noodles as the base and it holds an honored place among Sabbath desserts in Jewish households. This recipe is rich with fruits and nuts and aromatic with spices. Egg whites, beaten stiff, are folded in, to make it light and fluffy.

Lukshen Kugel
(Noodle Pudding)

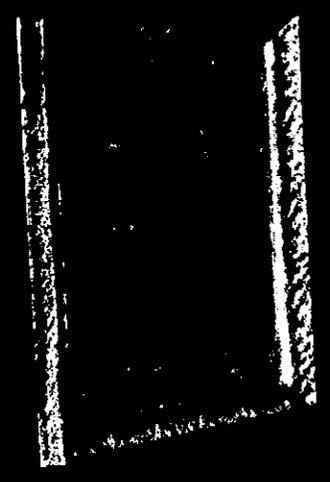

½ pound broad noodles, broken
2 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped raisins
½ cup chopped apples
½ cup broken walnuts
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

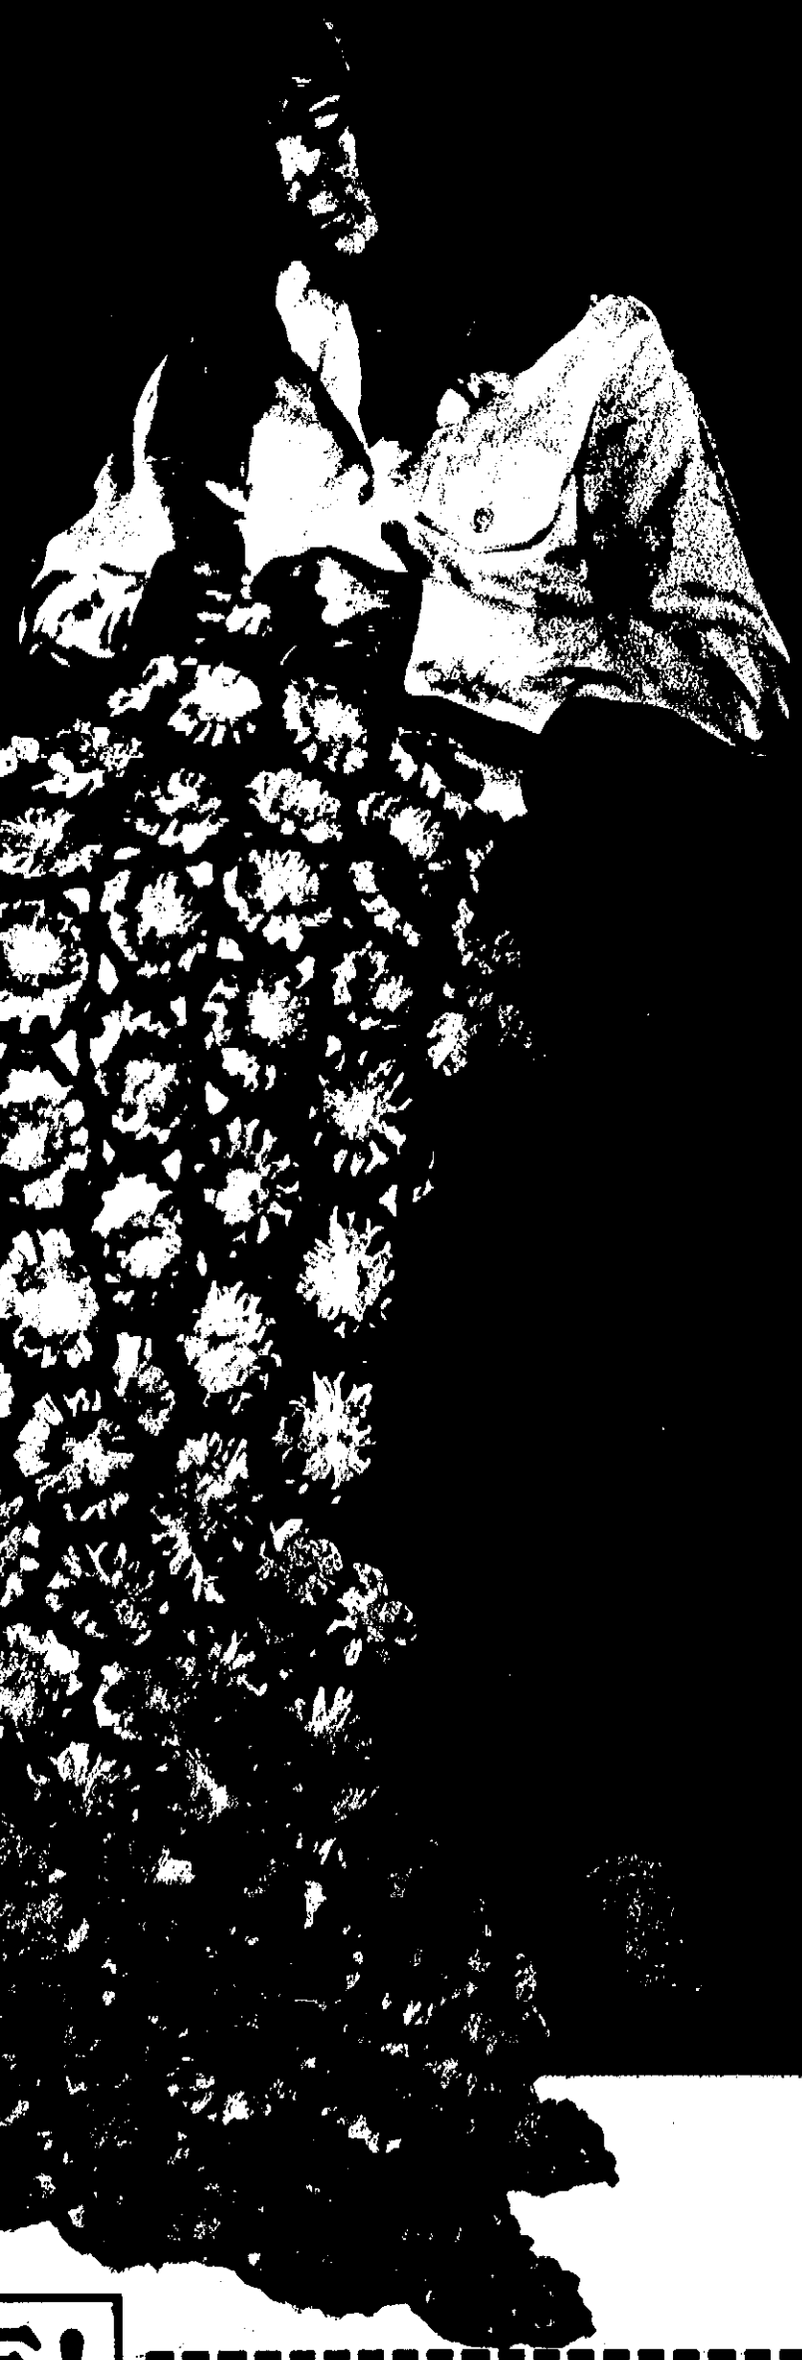

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender; drain (not too dry! moist noodles make the pudding more tender). Beat egg yolks; beat in oil, sugar and salt. Fold into noodles. Combine fruits and nuts with spices; mix well; fold in. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry. Fold in. Pour into a well-greased 1½-quart casserole. Bake at 350° for 45 minutes or until the top is browned. Makes 6 servings.

A PARTY OF FOREIGN TOURISTS IN CANTON, CHINA.

RED CHINA OPENING UP According to the Red China Travel Service in Hong Kong, organized groups of tourists will be encouraged to visit Red China this summer. The agency, which handles travel arrangements for Peking, says that the first group of supervised tours are low-cost package affairs, designed to attract students.

A spokesman for the travel service could not say whether American students would be granted visas to enter China. To date, American citizens have been barred from that country.

A few weeks ago, however, former French Premier and Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville said in Paris that the U.S. stood a better chance than the Soviet Union of establishing good relations with Red China.

Recently returned from Peking, Couve de Murville said that strained Soviet-Sino relations would continue so long as border problems between the two governments remained unsolved. The Soviets, he explained, are determined not to relinquish one inch of territory they now hold despite any Chinese claims.

He said further that there were no territorial arguments between the U.S. and Red China, that their major difference was over Taiwan. Once that problem was solved, he suggested, the U.S. and China could establish mutually peaceful and profitable relationships.

Couve revealed that Chairman Mao Tse-tung had told him that China supported revolution everywhere, but that China considered such revolutions to be basically nationalistic, to be started and conducted by individual nations without intervention by China or any other country.

Mao, according to Couve, also said that China had no expansionist desires in Indochina, just did not want that area to become the sphere of influence of the United States or the Soviet Union or any other major power. The return to the 1954 Geneva accords would suit him fine.

READ AND WRITE At long last the Federal Government is making product information available to the consuming public. An excellent pamphlet on tires entitled "Tires: Their Selection and Care" is now available at 65 cents.

If you own or drive a vehicle, you will find the pamphlet worth the money. Write Govt. Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

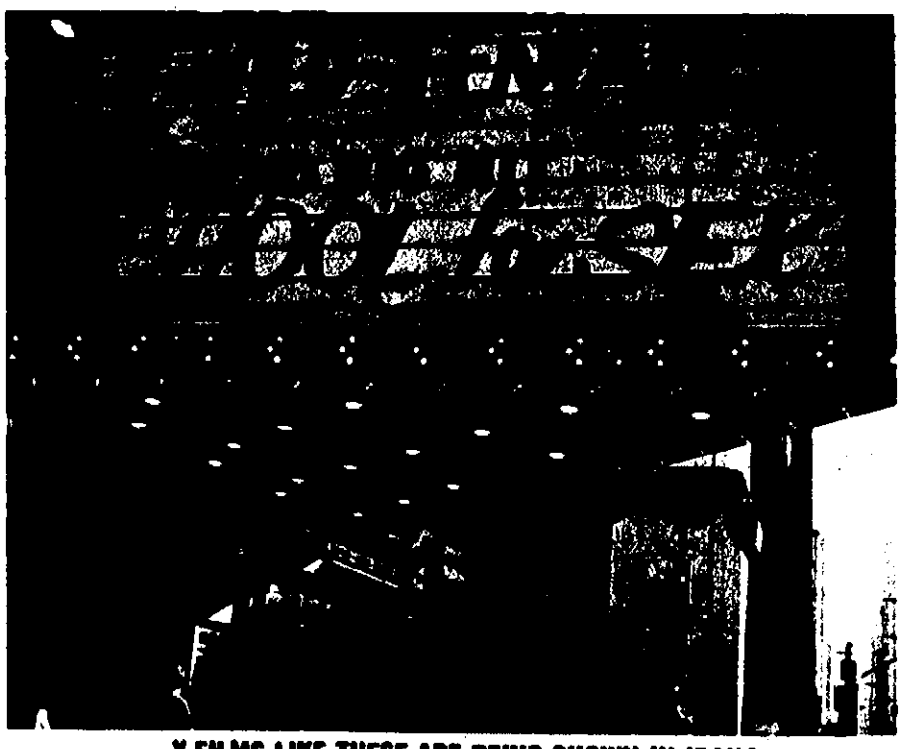

SKIN TRADE Jerome (population 4761) boasts the biggest attraction in six Idaho counties: --a movie theater which shows only "triple X-rated" sex films.

DeWayne Foust, formerly a construction worker and now owner of Jerome's only movie theater, reports that in his first seven months of operation he lost $18,000 showing family-type films. Now he shows sex films exclusively--and clears at least $1000 a month. "I'm the only businessman bringing money into this town," Foust says.

But the staid citizens of the Midwestern farming community are more interested in propriety than profits. The religious leaders of the town, which boasts 17 churches, condemned the theater via a petition that 500 residents have signed to date. "We're a pretty conservative small town and we don't appreciate the exposure of our young people to these movies," declares Mormon Bishop Ferguson Camp.

The Swiss resort town of Mendrisio takes a more sanguine view of skin flicks for profit. Situated just over the border from Italy, the town each weekend attracts streams of Italians whose censorship laws prevent them from seeing such films at home.

"These movies are not common in Switzerland," reports a Mendrisio theater manager. "The Swiss get bored with movies of this sort but they seem to have a great attraction for the Italians." A simple example of forbidden fruit.

X-FILMS LIKE THESE ARE BEING SHOWN IN IDAHO.

Are you an over-bleached Brunette?

This may come as a shock to you. But, the truth is, most shampoo-in haircolorings (except the ones that wash out) have the same amount of peroxide in the brunette shades as they do in the blonding shades. So, if you're covering gray but not lightening your hair color, you're probably using a haircoloring with far more peroxide than you need. You may be an over-bleached brunette!

That's why Toni invented Magic Moment.™ It's the first permanent foam-in haircolor. And, it's the first haircolor to find a way to cover gray with less peroxide than ordinary permanent shampoo-in haircolorings. Far less.

So, gentle Magic Moment doesn't take the life out of your hair. Doesn't make you an over-bleached brunette. Magic Moment gently foams your hair back to life with color that's alive. Color with depth and dimension. Young color. Your own natural color not even one shade lighter.

Another thing. The little bit of peroxide in Magic Moment is just enough to give your hair extra body and bounce and better texture. If you want to cover gray with your own young color, don't risk being an over-bleached brunette. Change to Magic Moment. After all, that's why Toni invented it.

UNAFRAID OF CHANGE Anyone who thinks Richard Nixon is philosophically rigid, politically intransigent, or by nature reluctant to change, does the President an injustice.

Here, for example, are excerpts from his first and second messages on the State of the Union:

On Jan. 22, 1970, Nixon told the nation: "In particular, the Federal Government must be in a position to assist in the building of new cities and the rebuilding of old ones."

On Jan. 22, 1971, Nixon told the nation: "I reject the patronizing idea that government in Washington, D.C., is inevitably more wise, more honest and more efficient than government at the local or state level...The idea that a bureaucratic elite in Washington knows best what is best for people everywhere and that you cannot trust local government is really a contention that you cannot trust people to govern themselves."

HOT RIVERS The water that runs off the picturesque hills of Japan's Mt. Fuji is so polluted that you can develop a photograph in it--fuzzy but recognizable.

Photographers traditionally develop film in a highly alkaline solution. Drinking or bathing in such liquid is definitely dangerous.

The Japanese newspaper, Mainichi Shimbun, noted the quality of the water in the rivers, ditches, and canals fed by the runoffs from Mt. Fuji and decided to determine if such water could serve as a photo developing solution. To the dismay of all concerned, it did.

Last month Ralph Nader lectured in Japan, after inspecting the industrial zone along the shores of Tokyo Bay.

"A steady national suicide is in progress here," Nader told his audience, "just as it is in the United States....

"We victims bear the cost and perpetrators make the profit out of environmental pollution.

"The Federal Government officials (in Japan) are reluctant to make public the pollution data on a company-by-company basis as they regard such documents as part of trade secrets. It is a kind of corporative anarchy and is a syndrome of collective insanity in the society."

WARNING The sale of second-hand Relaxacizors is illegal. So claims the Food and Drug Administration, which has distributed a bulletin to that effect.

Relaxacizors, of which some 400,000 have been sold in this country, are machines that administer electric shocks to the body in an attempt to remove fat and harden muscle.

The FDA claims that the machines were barred from sale because they might cause miscarriages, aggravate hernia, ulcers, and varicose veins.

When Judge William P. Gray of the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles handed down a decision against the manufacturer, many Relaxacizor owners sought to get rid of their machines via classified ads. The FDA claims such ads are illegal.

Customers who paid as much as $300 for their machines can get no refunds because the manufacturing corporation has gone out of business, after letting its court appeal lapse last Nov. 25th.

In short, if you have a Relaxacizor, you're stuck with it. The FDA advises you to destroy it.

SWEET SMELL OF PERFUME

When Coco Chanel, the great French dress designer, died suddenly last month at age 87, she left an estimated $10 million in Swiss bank accounts, plus all sorts of valuable art collections.

Chanel's biggest money-maker was not her clothes but her perfume, Chanel No. 5, which she first brought out in 1919.

For years, the perfume earned her little money, largely because she had entered into an unwise deal with the late Pierre Wertheimer, a perfume manufacturer who agreed to distribute the product worldwide. After World War II, Chanel hired Count Rene de Chambrun, the lawyer son-in-law of Pierre Laval, a direct descendant of the Marquis de Lafayette and himself an honorary American citizen, to sue Wertheimer in an attempt to regain marketing control of her perfume.

Rather than bring the case to court, Wertheimer agreed upon a new deal, granting Chanel a hefty share of the international gross profits. Inside of three years Chanel was a millionaire, while Wertheimer, in order to enhance her name further, agreed to finance her comeback as a dress designer in 1954.

Coco's collection that year was a resounding flop but by showing exactly the same clothes in 1955, she once again recaptured the laurels of the haute couture. What the critics hated in 1954 they loved in 1955.

For years the rumor was rampant in Paris that Coco Chanel had Lesbian tendencies. There was no truth to that slander. Over the decades she took scads of lovers, many of them younger than herself, but she was always discreet about her private life, except for her love affair with the Duke of Westminster.

Chanel left most of her estate to Andre Palasse, her nephew, and his two daughters. Palasse, 73, lives in Switzerland, his daughters in Paris.

THE LATE COCO CHANEL: NO. 5 HIT THE JACKPOT.

My Favorite Jokes

by Corbett Monica

EDITOR'S NOTE: Corbett Monica felt the allure of show business early. Named for Gentleman Jim Corbett, former heavyweight boxing champion, in whom his grandfather had an interest, Monica became a winner in his own right—a comedian with an easy, natural style, and a versatile performer.

At 12 he began singing with bands and doubling on drums. At 21 he invested in his own nightclub in St. Louis, where he was master of ceremonies and star comic. When he returned to his native New York and played supper clubs, he shared billing with Sammy Davis, Nat "King" Cole, Tony Bennett, to name a few.

Since the late 1950's television has been his medium, too. He's appeared as guest star on the Tonight Show, Hollywood Palace, Ed Sullivan, and has hosted the Tonight Show several times. The father of five children, Monica lives with his wife Helen, in Englewood, N.J. Herewith some favorite jokes from one of his comedy routines:

A famous New York doctor tells how to get rid of a nagging headache—send her back to her mother!

I met a politician at a dinner party and he got real cute. He gave me one of those nudges and said, "So you're a comic, eh? Tell me a joke." I looked at him and answered, "So you're a politician, eh? Tell me a lie."

A friend of mine is a very philanthropic man. He does everything he can for the prevention of disease. So far he's closed three restaurants in New York alone.

My wife and I are friendly with a couple, Harry and Ann. They look so much alike that if he had muscles, you'd think they were twins.

Living in New Jersey you'd think that we wouldn't have friends over very often from New York. But they visit regularly—it's the only place they can park.

The last time I talked to my wife about living on a budget, she lost her temper. "All right," she said, "I admit I spend a lot of money—but name one other extravagance."

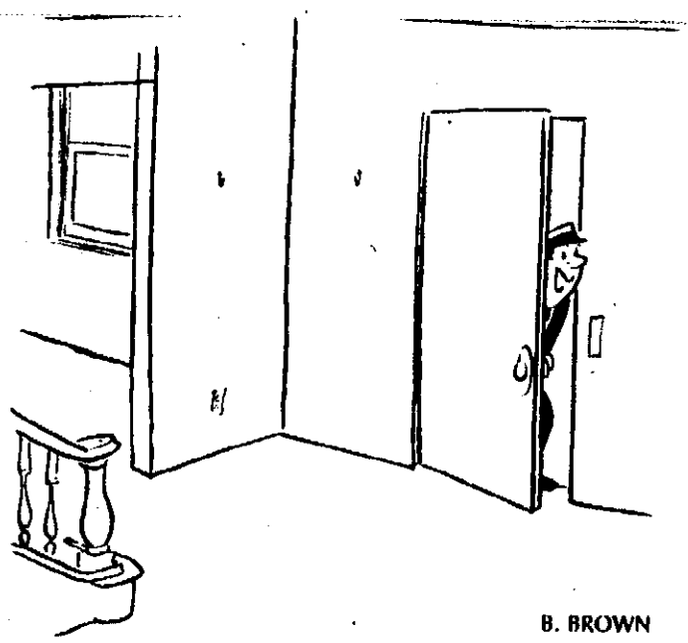

My wife embarrasses me with her behavior in public. She's so loud and boisterous that last night when I took her to an exclusive restaurant for dinner, she got me so rattled I almost dropped my tray.

You should have seen me at breakfast yesterday . . . I sat down at the table wearing a pajama top and an icebag and my wife said, "Last night must have been the worst ever." I asked, "Why? You've seen me like this before." She said, "Never in Schrafft's."

My son's 22 years old. The other day I'm in the middle of an important meeting and he comes running in screaming, "Daddy, daddy! I only have one cavity!" He had just come from the psychiatrist and the cavity was in his head.

My son's worried about the draft now . . . the new lottery system. He's afraid they're going to pick him. I told him not to worry—I've never won a lottery in my life.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

SHE MADE IT BIG: SIX-FOOT ACTRESS JULIE NEWMAR

Too Tall Girls

Tall girls suffer from social and emotional handicaps in our society, reports Dr. Douglas Frazier, professor of pediatrics and physiology at the University of Southern California.

If taller than most of their male peers, Dr. Frazier explains, they are likely to become awkward, self-conscious, and anxious about the possibility of love and marriage. This anxiety is transmitted by their mothers who fear that their tall daughters will never find husbands.

Excessive height can sometimes be prevented by repeated dosage of the female hormone, estrogen, which will speed up and shorten the adolescent growing period. If treatment begins at the age of 10 or 11, it may result in a decrease of three to four inches growth. If delayed until adolescence has already begun, an inch may still be saved.

But hormone treatment to shorten the growing period has its risks. Estrogen, in the high dosage required, may cause pulmonary embolism, high blood pressure, and thrombophlebitis.

"I never even consider medical treatment to prevent tallness," Dr. Frazier says, "unless there is good indication the girl will be six feet or taller."

Instead, the pediatric-physiologist recommends that mothers of tall girls instill in their daughters the assurance that tallness is beautiful, not tragic.

Kissinger's Confab

Taking advantage of Henry Kissinger's liberal open door policy, a group of Harvard University students under the wing of Stanley Hoffmann, professor of government, called upon President Nixon's National Security Adviser at the White House a few months ago.

There, in the Situation Room, Kissinger (Harvard '50) in response to student questioning, reportedly revealed the "true" reason why U.S. forces invaded Cambodia last spring.

The reason, according to students who heard Kissinger's explanation, was the constant rise in the number of American troops being killed and wounded in action prior to the invasion. The Nixon Administration therefore was presented with several options. Two leading ones were (1) to invade Cambodia or (2) to withdraw precipitously nearly all of our troops from South Vietnam.

The first option was chosen.

From the accompanying table it is clear that the invasion of Cambodia by U.S. troops from 30 April, 1970, to 30 June, 1970, has resulted in a steep decline in American casualties.

In short what the Administration has done is to heat up the war in Cambodia and cool it off in South Vietnam. Instead of Vietnamizing the war, it has Asia-fied the war, preferring that Asians kill Asians instead of Asians killing Americans.

Kissinger reportedly told the visiting Harvard students that a rightish backlash might very well develop in the United States if American troops in Southeast Asia were prematurely withdrawn, and the Thieu-Ky Government of South Vietnam fell or was overthrown.

ITCHY? FIDGETY? YOU MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms, ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Tattoo artist Lyle Tuttle and wife Theron, with the electric needle he uses to apply his designs to the skin. Those are tattoos he is wearing, not a fancy shirt.

Women Want Everything Nowadays—Even Tattoos

by Clyde Carmichael

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

For decades tattoos in America have been regarded as a traditional idiosyncrasy of men, and hard-living men at that.

A tattooed American lady, however, has been a rarity. People have regarded her as a near-freak, a carnival attraction, and in most cases, not as a lady at all.

But that was BEFORE Women's Liberation.

For the past year and a half tattooist Lyle Tuttle has more and more been needling delicate designs into the epidermis of respectable young women—secretaries, coeds, housewives, entertainers, motorcycle girls, and flower children.

Since 1969 his female customers have increased from 5 percent of his total clientele to 40 percent.

Tuttle, 39, has been a tattoo artist for 21 years, has had his own body decorated by more than 40 different colleagues.

It was he who helped start the new tattoo trend for women when in 1969 he engraved a miniature heart on the left breast and a floral bracelet on the left wrist of the late rock singer, Janis Joplin.

Tuttle, originally from Ukiah, Calif., welcomes the recent boom in female clients not only "because it means more business for me but because it gives me a chance to stamp out some of the old wives' tales about tattooing.

"In this country," he explains, "a lot of people think tattoos are marks of sin, that they're worn only by convicts, prostitutes, drunken sailors, and concentration camp victims.

For nice people, too

"That's nonsense," he declares. "Winston Churchill's mother, Lady Randolph Churchill, started a fad of dainty tattoos among the fashionable women of her set in the 1880's. Rosalind Elias of the Metropolitan Opera had her name and Social Security number tattooed on her lower abdomen.

"Glen Campbell carries a tattooed dagger on his arm. Pearl Bailey has a heart on her leg. Sean Connery wears a small skin design on the inside of each arm. Barry Goldwater has a tattoo on his left hand.

"These people aren't crackpots. To them, I suppose, tattoos satisfy a desire for individuality. I have two kids of my own. Each wants a tattoo when he reaches the age of 18, which is the legal minimum age for tattooing anyone in California."

Tuttle and his blue-eyed attractive wife, Theron, 23, work in a spacious studio next to the Greyhound bus station here. Their dog, Chadwick, a terrier who sports a tattoo inscribed "Mother," snoozes beneath a window and opens one eye to greet each new customer.

Ladies take longer

Tuttle tattoos an average of 25 clients per day, charging $10 to $15 per job, a little more for women "because they demand more care and time."

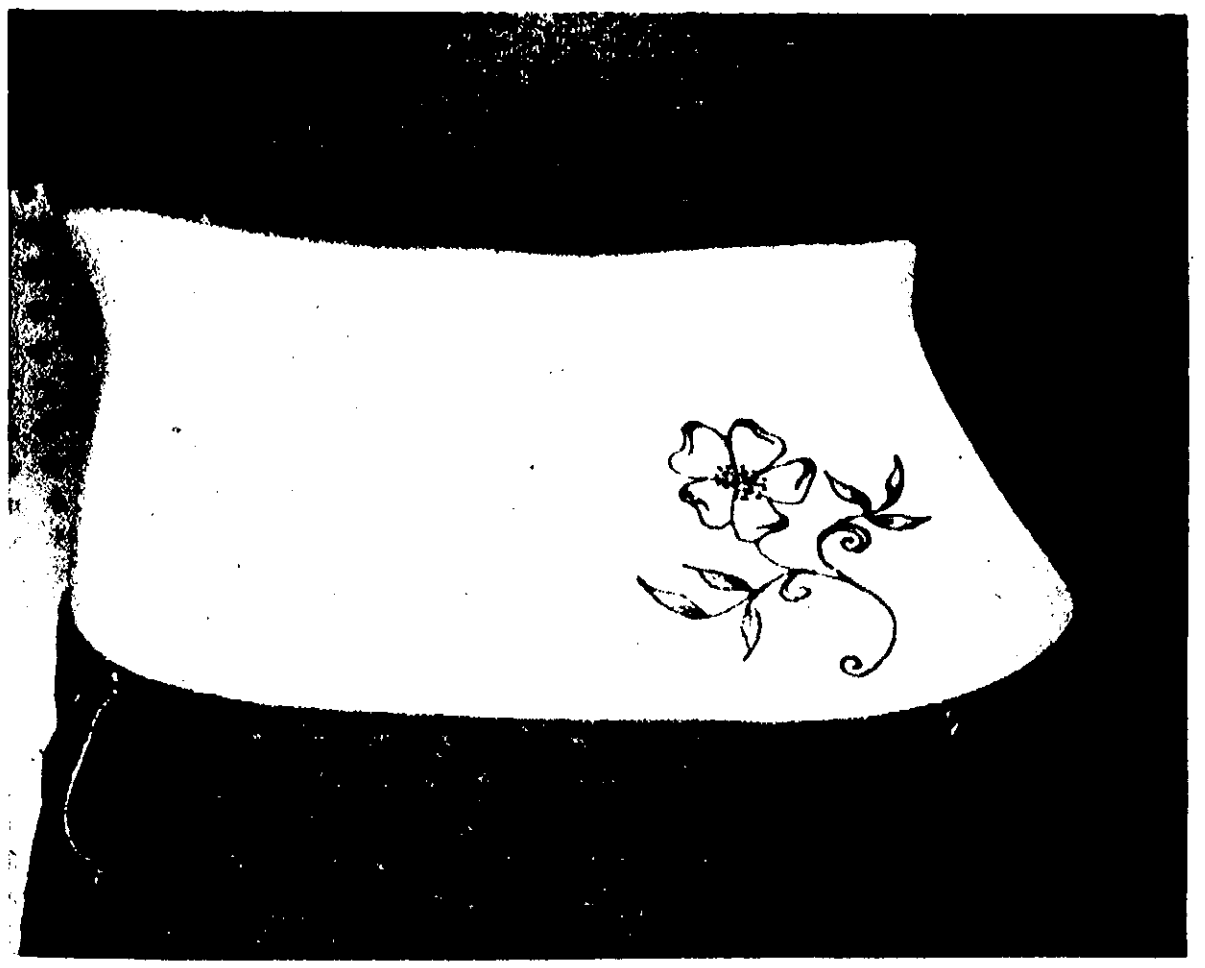

Mrs. Tuttle, who is tattooed on her hip and shoulder, says skin designs are "pretty, decorative and good for the soul of a woman. Also they're attractive to some men."

Tuttle says, "Girls like soft objects for their tattoos—doves, flowers, butterflies, signs of the zodiac. Many of them come in, choose a design they like, then say to me, 'put it wherever you think it will be the most sexy.'

"Tattooing women," he continues, "is all a part of the modern breaking down of barriers between the sexes."

Tuttle says that women make better tattoo subjects than men. They complain less about the stinging sensation of the electric needle. "They have a higher threshhold for pain," he contends, "and a better appreciation of beauty. A lot of them also seem to have a sense of defiance. Only last week a very pretty and determined California housewife from Long Beach came into the studio and handed me a card. 'I want that slogan tattooed on my right arm,' she ordered."

The slogan: "DEATH BEFORE DISHWASHING."

Mrs. Tuttle sports a flower, planted on her hip by her husband. Women are going in for tattooing, favor "soft," dainty designs like doves, butterflies, and zodiac signs.

The law comes to a high school in Syracuse, N.Y. Real judge, lawyers and policemen join students playing defendants' roles in a mock narcotics trial.

Judge Parker Stone watches as bailiff swears in Steve Schwartz, a senior "charged with possession of drugs."

Drugs and the Law

Courtroom Drama in a High School

by John G. Rogers

SYRACUSE, N.Y.

Something new is happening in many high schools across New York State—court trials of students for possession of marijuana. But the accused boys and girls are invariably relaxed and smiling, for these are only mock trials staged at the schools by the New York State Bar Association.

The trials serve a double purpose—they drive home an anti-narcotics message and they bring the students right up close to the workings of our judicial system.

"School has got to be more than the four walls of a building," says Dr. Ernest Rookey, principal of William Nottingham High School here where one of the trials was held recently. "Courts, judges, lawyers and juries are part of our world and it's good for the students to know about them."

PARADE sat in on Nottingham's trial of three seniors—Steve Schwartz, Cal Baggett and Carla Dorsey. Theoretically they'd been busted by the Syracuse police for possession of marijuana and faced $1000 fines and reform school terms of up to four years.

Although the drug incident was imagined and the jury consisted of 12 Nottingham students, the rest of the characters were real. Syracuse policemen testified before City Court Judge Parker J. Stone and local lawyers acted for defense and prosecution. Some 1500 students watched the proceedings on the stage of the school auditorium and Nottingham boys using school equipment video-taped the entire trial to give it later wide distribution on TV.

More the better

"The more kids who see this, the better," says Robert Moses, one of the defense lawyers. "There's no question but that many of our young people have lost some of their faith in our institutions, including the law. When they see a trial up close, they see a lawyer protecting the rights of the accused. They see a judge making sure the trial is fair. They see a jury of 12 peers deciding the verdict. We can just hope this restores some of their faith."

That some young people are cynical about the law was demonstrated in the circulation around the auditorium of a mimeographed sheet in which anonymous students declared:

"Dope is planted in the cars and homes of prominent leftists. Many times young people are given excessive bail for drug offenses and inadequate legal services. The sentences and fines for marijuana are exorbitant. The juries in marijuana trials are predominantly white, middle-aged, anti-black and anti-young."

Testimony at the mock trial brought out the following fictional incidents:

Steve Schwartz, a freshman at Pennsylvania State University, came home to Syracuse last Thanksgiving and picked up his car from a cousin who'd been using it. One evening Steve was out driving when Cal Baggett and Carla Dorsey hitched a ride with him. The car was stopped by Syracuse police narcotics officers Bill Domres and Bill Finnie. Domres produced a search warrant naming Steve and his car. Under the front seat he found a small bag containing marijuana.

Domres testified that he "knew" Steve would be bringing drugs back from Penn State and that he'd seen the three young people together before. Steve denied that he'd ever seen Cal

Doctor Developes Home Treatment that

RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES

In 15 Minutes or Your Money Back!

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque 15 Minute Treatment Must Show Immediate Improvement or — YOUR MONEY BACK!

A leading New York Doctor working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple medicated home-treatment that rinses away blackheads and whiteheads in a matter of minutes. It was demonstrated recently on five teen-age girls and three teen-age boys. The results were breath-taking. Blackheads really rinsed away. In fact, many could be seen on the cloth used to wash off the Masque. But this wasn't all! Acne-pimples improved after one application, enlarged pores reduced, and rough, muddy complexions became cleaner, clearer and smoother looking. These results certainly indicate why teen-agers, both boys and girls, are now saying "this is one product that really works", for good, clear, clean, healthy skins . . . and why mothers of teen-agers have heartily endorsed its use. The Masque Cream Treatment is indeed a remarkable discovery, not only for healthy skins, but also for the confidence, poise and self-esteem a fine complexion brings to teen-agers!

Anyone Can Use It

If you suffer the agony of teen-age blackheads, whiteheads, acne-pimples and rough, unsightly complexions give yourself this home treatment at our risk. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent called Argilla dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like masque. You will now feel as though hundreds of "tiny fingers" were softly kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads and foreign impurities. As it firms and hardens, its suction-action draws out waste matter from the pores. . . . In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your towel. And your skin feels clean . . . really clean . . . refreshed, smooth like velvet!

Start Now to Improve Your Complexion

Now is the time for action. Don't take a back seat or be a wall-flower because of bad skin. If you want to get your full share of fun and parties . . . clear up your complexion and let Mint Julep Masque "Lead the Way"! You owe it to yourself to try a single fifteen minute home treatment to convince yourself that this new Queen Helene masque-cream can work wonders for you.

Attention! MOTHERS of Teen-Agers

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque is a MUST for you, too! It will help tighten sagging skin on face and throat, relax tired face muscles and stimulate a fresher, cleaner, more youthful complexion. Try a Medicated Mint Julep Masque Treatment YOURSELF. You'll be delighted with the skin-tightening experience and more alive feeling that comes with every home-treatment.

Queen Helene Mint Masque is only $3.00 for the six ounce jar, enough for over 3 months of daily home treatments. Buy it today! Start using it immediately! "One day it dawned on me that I was boring my husband to death."

When you're married as long as I am, you can reach a point where you start taking your husband for granted. Good old dependable Jim I used to say, and I guess that's how he was beginning to think of me, too. Good old dependable Barbara. It was horrible.

One day it dawned on me that I was boring my husband to death. It was hard for me to admit it—but it was true. It wasn't that I didn't love Jim, but often by the time he came home at night I was feeling dull, tired and drowsy. And so Jim would look at television and, for the most part, act like I wasn't even there. And I wasn't.

I decided that I had to do something. I had seen an advertisement for a tablet called Vivarin. It said that Vivarin was a non-habit forming stimulant tablet that would give me a quick lift. Last week there were a couple of evenings when I felt that I needed Vivarin. So, on those days, I took a Vivarin tablet at 5:00 p.m., just about an hour before Jim came home, and I found time to pretty up a little, too. It worked.

All of a sudden Jim was coming home to a more exciting woman, me. We talk to each other a lot more than we have in years—like we used to when we first were married and we'd take long rides in the old car just to be together and talk. And after dinner I was wide awake enough to do a little bit more than just look at television. And the other day—it wasn't even my birthday—Jim sent me flowers with a note. The note began: "To my new wife..."

Holidays are what you make them.

and Carla before the time he picked them up and their testimony supported him. All three denied knowing anything about the marijuana and swore they didn't use the stuff.

In his charge to the jurors, Judge Stone said that where testimony conflicted they must apply the rules of common sense, as they would in everyday life. As it turned out, the jurors elected to believe Steve.

The students cheered when jury foreman Ross Friedman announced a verdict of not guilty and whenever Judge Stone sustained objections by defense lawyers.

After the trial students full of questions swarmed around Judge Stone: Why wasn't a witness called from Penn State to testify as to Steve's behavior there? Why wasn't Steve's cousin called? Maybe he knew something about the marijuana since he'd been using the car. How about lie detector tests for witnesses whose testimony clashed?

Capsule version

Judge Stone explained to these lively minds that the mock trial had to be completed in about 90 minutes and was necessarily a streamlined version of a real one that might take several days.

"Of course this formula isn't perfect," says Stone, "but the very fact that they were up here asking questions showed that we stirred up some thinking and that's what the project tries to do."

Adds Stuart N. Scott, Bar Association president: "I'm really pleased about what our lawyers are doing. In the past we've been a little stuffy about mixing with the public, especially kids. Right now nothing could be more important."

Details of the program vary. The cast of characters changes school by school, city by city. Sometimes several juries are assigned to one trial so that more youngsters can experience jury room arguments. Evening sessions involve parents on juries. Sometimes attendance is compulsory, as at Nottingham, sometimes elective. At a school trial in an Albany suburb, students could attend or go home. Out of 1300, a total of 900 attended.

It's appropriate that this program aimed directly at young minds is a product of the Young Lawyers Section of the New York State Bar Association. The goal of the New Yorkers is to make it a national model and already a number of other state bar associations have inquired about the mechanics of it.

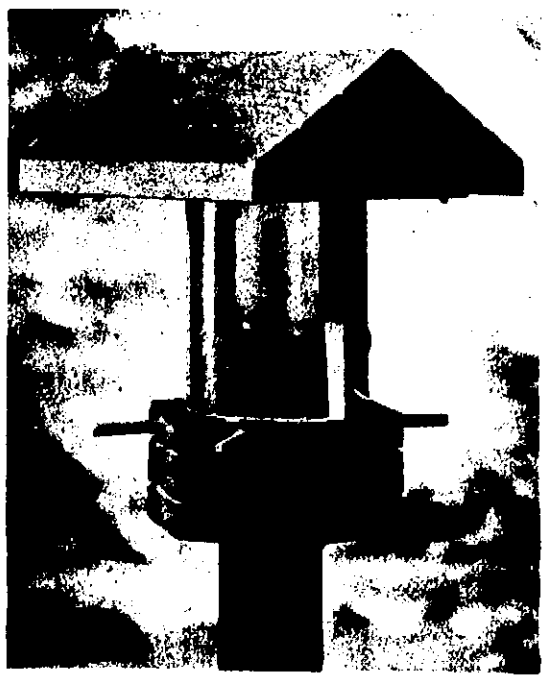

Says Austin Sennett, an official of the Bar Association and organizer of the project: "We don't moralize—kids have been preached at so much they don't listen anymore. But we show the realities of the judicial system—what you may face if you get into trouble. And we hope the kids will draw their own conclusions."

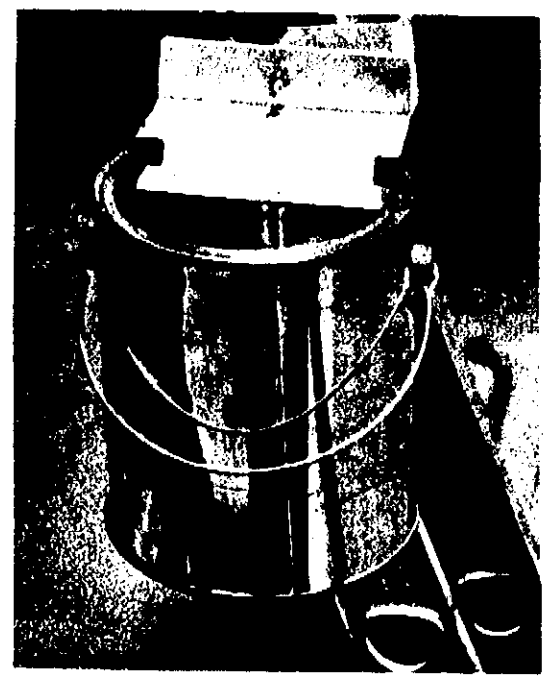

The jury has completed deliberations and foreman Ross Friedman collects ballots. The defendants were found not guilty.

CHESTERFIELD FILTERS.

Mia Farrow and director Richard Fleischer during a break in filming of "Buff." Mia's twins were fathered by André Previn whom she later married. Miss Farrow, ex-wife of Frank Sinatra, is attracted to older men. The Previns now live in England.

Mia Farrow—Hollywood's Lost Child

· by Lloyd Shearer

LONDON.

Ever since the Manson gang—a group of borderline schizophrenics, sociopaths, and doped-up hippies—was apprehended in Los Angeles and tried for the murder of actress Sharon Tate and seven others, it was inevitable that their senseless sadism would inspire a spate of motion pictures.

Mia Farrow, 25, has just finished one here. It is entitled Buff. In it she plays a blind English girl whose family is murdered.

The film is rooted, of course, in the pathologic taking of lives by those who bear a grudge against society. And by characterizing his heroine as blind, director Richard Fleischer (Compulsion, The Boston Strangler, Tora! Tora! Tora!) reveals the basic helplessness of all of us when confronted by the onslaughts of a perverse few for whom violence is a daily form of aggression and murder an acceptable form of catharsis.

In Buff, a man, seen only as a pair of high-heeled cowboy boots, constantly watches Mia's family. He observes enviously their security and wealth. As sightless Mia rides off with her fiancé, "Boots" kills everyone in her house. Returning home, Mia discovers the bodies, one by one. Potentially she is the final victim until she is saved by her boyfriend who leads her to his home. Seemingly safe, she takes a bath. As she closes the door, the audience sees the "Boots" standing menacingly in the room, slowly approaching her.

Mia Farrow was chosen for the leading role in Buff not only because she is a competent actress, but largely because she is "a name." And she is a name because of notoriety, born of her marriage to Frank Sinatra and her bearing twins last year before she could marry their father, composer-conductor André Previn.

Large youth following

A "name" is no longer necessary for producing a film, but it helps to secure bank loans and a major release, and in this case there is an added value: Mia Farrow has a large youth following, especially among the youngsters in this country. They admire her spirit and spunk. She represents, they say, courage, honesty, independence, and rebellion.

"How easy it would have been for her to get an abortion here," one of her young friends explained to me, "rather than giving birth to her twins out of wedlock. But she simply wouldn't do it.

"Mia also could have gotten a good-sized settlement when she divorced Frank Sinatra. She wouldn't take a cent. Mia may look fragile—I think she weighs 100 pounds with rocks in her purse—but she's got guts. She's like Vanessa Redgrave. She won't traffic with false values. She insists upon leading her own life. Here in London we consider her admirable. In Hollywood and America, I guess, they consider her sinful."

Devout Catholic parents

In Hollywood, where Mia Farrow was born and reared, the daughter of devout Catholic parents—director and Papal Knight John Farrow and actress Maureen O'Sullivan—she is regarded as a lost child in search of a father.

In 1966 she eloped to Las Vegas and married Frank Sinatra. She was 20. He was 50. Her own father, privately known in film circles as the Playboy of the Western World, had died in 1963.

Mia's marriage was destined to fail. Almost from the beginning Sinatra treated her like an indulgent father, taking her to discotheques, watching her stomp and jerk while he sat bored at a ringside table, drinking. When he advised her on her film career, she refused to listen, which increased Sinatra's basic insecurity and invalidated his pedagogy complex.

Described alternately as a flower-child, a spoiled, headstrong, confused nymph, Mia denied suffering from a father-search, although she admitted, "I find older men appealing. They can handle so much that I can't."

"The secret of her appeal to men," revealed her mother, "is that she arouses their protective instinct."

Mia and Sinatra were separated in December, 1967. A month later the actress flew to Kashmir to meditate with the jet-age holy man of the Beatles, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

Not long after, she fell in love with André Previn, 19 years her senior, twice married, with two daughters by his first wife, Betty, a former jazz singer. "Falling in love is compulsive with me," Mia explained. "I relate to people in such a strong way. I find people who create something and live out of their own purity without fakery the most desirable to be around."

In June, 1969, Mia and André created twin sons who were born in February, 1970, and named Matthew Phineas and Sacha Villiers. Exclaimed Mia: "This is the most marvelous thing that ever happened to me."

Farmhouse in England

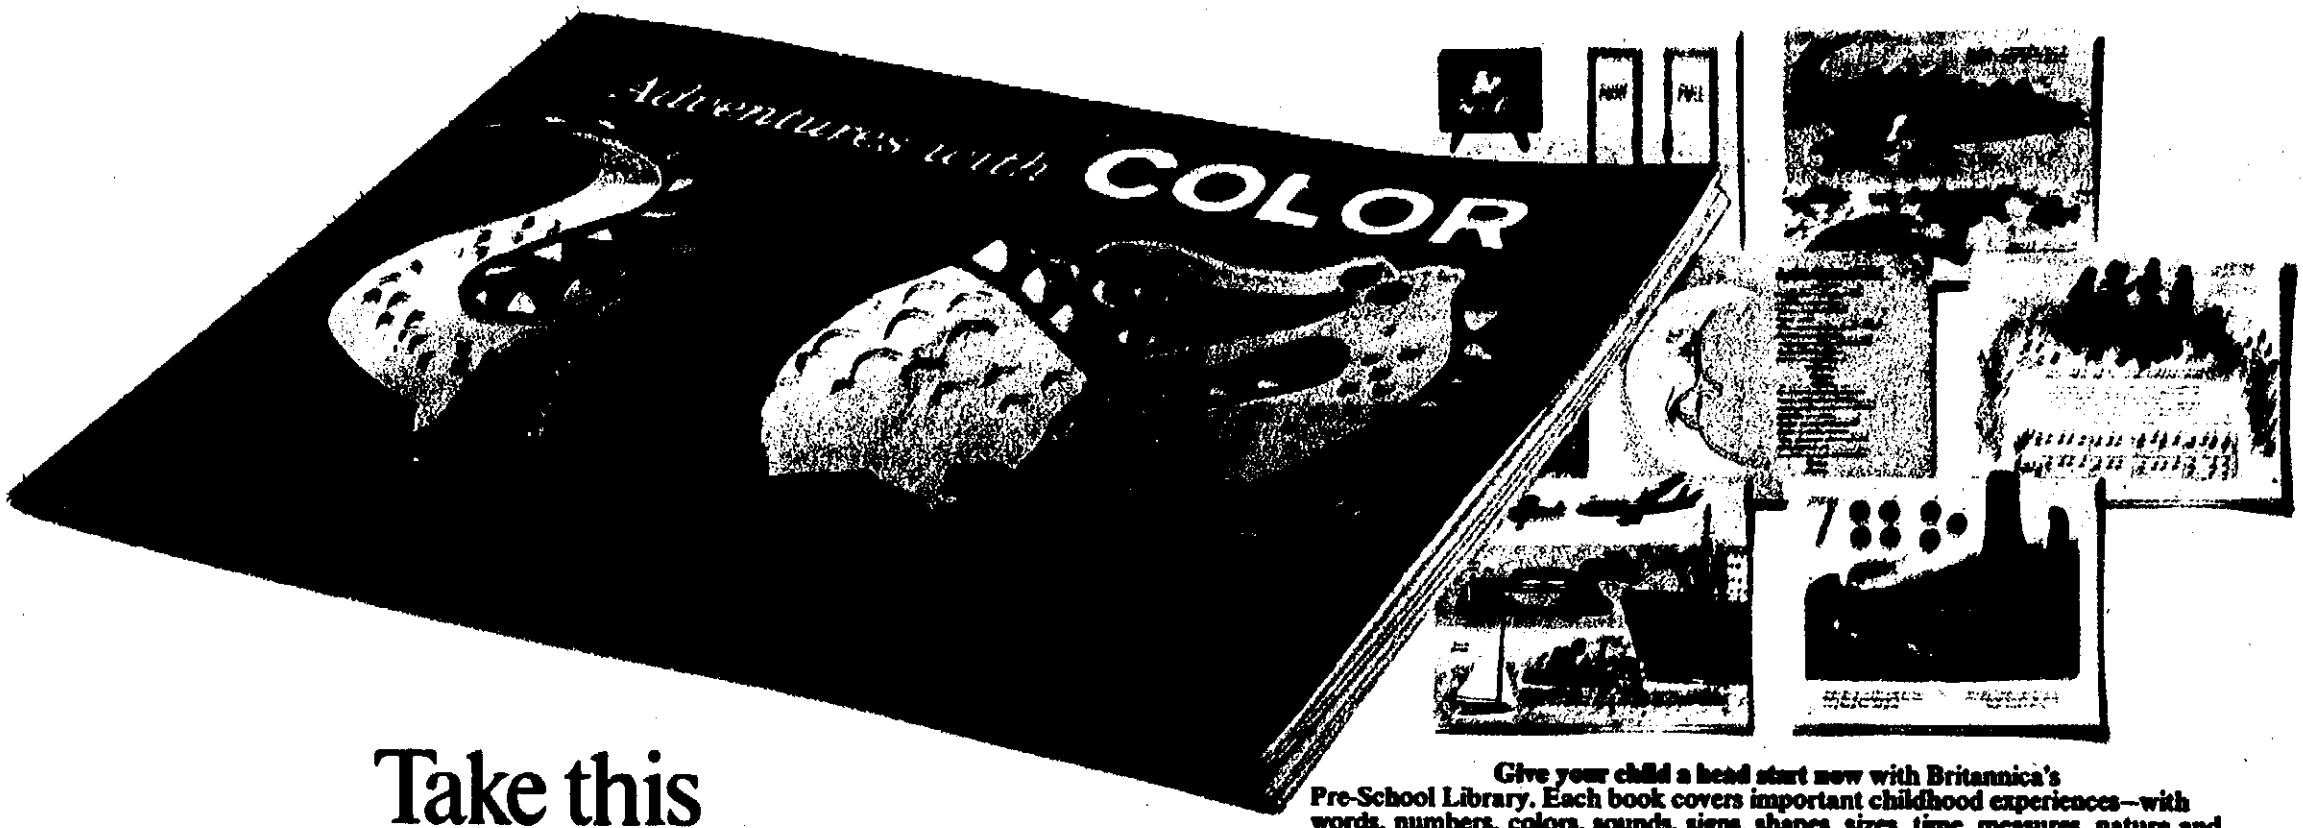

Previn, in the troublesome process of divorcing his second wife, songwriter Dory Langdon, finally married Mia in September, 1970. The couple bought a farmhouse in Surrey, England, which is now where they live and rear their family.

Mia, of course, has no intention of abandoning her acting career, which is why a few months ago she agreed to play the lead in Buff.

Friends hope that by becoming a mother she will give some meaning and direction to her life, but few expect André Previn to be her final husband.

AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

TERRY IS SUDDENLY ORDERED TO THE LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLIC.

SORRY ABOUT OPENING YOUR MAIL, COLONEL LEE, BUT WE HOPED IT MIGHT CONTAIN A CLUE TO REPRESENTATIVE DEEPSIX'S KIDNAPPING.

Dear Terry- Please join me at the earliest. Try to conceal your membership and rank in the U.S.A.F. It is preferable that your presence not be noticed by local authorities. Love, Dolores D.

IT MIGHT MAKE SENSE TO YOU. TOLD US NOT A THING— BUT IT DID OPEN UP A WHOLE NEW CAN OF WORMS!

ITS WORDING COULD AROUSE SUSPICION THAT THE SEÑORA SENT FOR YOU IN SECRET BECAUSE SHE HAD FOUND DISHONESTY IN MY REGIME.

FROM THIS IT IS BUT ONE STEP TO ASSUME THAT MY GOVERNMENT CAUSED HER ABDUCTION TO SILENCE HER.

SO IT'S ONE BEAUTIFUL MESS! LOOK WHAT'S UP FOR GRABS! DEEPSIX'S LIFE! THE PRESTIGE OF TWO COUNTRIES! EVEN THE GOOD RELATIONS BETWEEN OUR GOVERNMENTS!

I DO HOPE YOU CAN SHED A LITTLE LIGHT, COLONEL.

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. AMBASSADOR, I'M SORRY, BUT I HAVE NO IDEA WHAT THE LADY'S TALKING ABOUT!

THEN I AM SORRY TO HAVE TROUBLED YOU, COLONEL.

YOU'RE LEVELING, AREN'T YOU, LEE? IF THERE'S ANYTHING YOU WERE AFRAID TO SAY IN FRONT OF HIM...?

NOTHING, SIR, BUT I WOULD LIKE TO HANG AROUND. DOLORES IS AN OLD FRIEND.

UH, HUH... BLAST IT! WHY DID SHE SEND FOR YOU? MUST HAVE SOME EXPERTISE SHE NEEDED. WHAT'S YOUR SPECIALTY, COLONEL?

AFRAID I'M STRICTLY A LINE OFFICER.

THEN IT MUST BE MILITARY AVIATION— BUT SHE WAS CHECKING ON AN AID PROGRAM. CAN'T SEE A CONNECTION...

...THE LOCAL AIR FORCE IS PRETTY MUCH OF A JOKE ANYWAY...

"HE AFFECTS A HOT FIGHTER PILOT MANNER. FUNNY, REALLY! HIS EXPERIENCE IS MOSTLY LEADING FLYOVERS AT LOCAL INDEPENDENCE DAY REVIEWS."

MEANWHILE...

AH, COLONEL RICO! YOU HAVE NEWS?

NOTHING, EXCELLENCY! IT IS AS IF THE SILENCE HIDING SEÑORA DEEPSIX'S FATE WERE TO LAST FOREVER!

DESERTION UNDER FIRE, THAT'S WHAT!! TRUSTIN' THEM LIKE THEY WAS M' OWN FLESH AN' BLOOD... AN' THEY UPS AN' DESERTS THEIR CAP'N!!

WE'LL... CAWK! CAWK! ... STRING 'EM UP BY THEIR BLASTED THUMBS, EH, SKIPPER! THEN WE'LL FEED 'EM T' THE BARRACUDA!!

YOU'RE SAYIN' THAT CAP'N AHAB SOLD "DADDY" WARBUCKS A BILL O' GOODS... CLAIMIN' ALL HE WANTED T' DO WAS "PRESERVE THE TREASURES O' EL DORADO FOR THE GOOD O' MAN"?

THERE IS ONLY ONE MAN ON THE FACE OF THIS EARTH HE WISHES TO DO GOOD FOR, AND THAT MAN IS AHAB HIMSELF!

PERHAPS THERE IS A SIMPLE ANSWER TO THE QUESTION OF...

WHY I AND MY MINIMEN DO NOT OVERPOWER THIS EVIL AND GREEDY MAN?

THAT WAS MY QUERY!
